III. Performance Appraisal Failures:

Some times performance appraisal process do not satisfy the purpose for which it is conducted, that means it is faced with some failures and there are certain reasons, these reasons are as under:

1. Manager lacks information
2. Lack of appraisal skills
3. Manager not taking appraisal seriously
4. Manager not prepared
5. Employee not receiving ongoing feedback
6. Manager not being honest or sincere
7. Ineffective discussion of employee development
8. Unclear language
9. Insufficient reward for performance

Pay for performance lecture 28

- I. Performance Based Pay—PA data provide the input for such approaches as merit pay, variable pay, skill-based pay, and competency-based pay.
 1. Merit Pay: A pay increase given to employees based on their level of performance as indicated in the appraisal.
 2. Bonus: The most common type of variable pay for performance and is a one-time award that is not added to employees' base pay.
 3. Skill-based Pay: A system that compensates employees on the basis of job-related skills and knowledge they possess, not for their job titles.
 4. Competency-Based Pay: A compensation plan that rewards employees for their demonstrated expertise.
- II. Seniority—The length of time an employee has been associated with the company, division, department, or job is referred to as seniority.
- III. Experience—Regardless of the nature of the task, very few factors has a more significant impact on performance than experience.
- IV. Membership in the Organization—Some components of individual financial compensation are given to employees without regard to the particular job they perform or their level of productivity.

c. McGregor's Theory-X and Theory-Y

McGregor's Theory-X represented the traditional management view that employees are lazy, was uninterested in work, and needed to be prodded to perform. In contrast his theory Y viewed employees as creative, complex, and mature individuals interested in meaningful work. McGregor believed that under the right circumstances, employees would willingly contribute their ingenuity and their talents for the benefits of the organization. He suggested that the managers motivate employees by giving them the opportunity to develop their talents more fully and by giving them the freedom to choose the methods they would use to achieve organizational goals. In McGregor's view the managers role was not to manipulate employees but to align their needs with needs of the organization so that employees would regulate their own actions and performance. These insights lead researchers to investigate the origins and processes of motivation more closely.

IV. Career Planning and Development Methods

There are numerous methods for career planning and development. Some currently utilized methods, most of which are used in various combinations, are discussed next.

- a. Discussions with Knowledgeable Individuals—In a formal discussion, the superior and subordinate may jointly agree on what type of career planning and development activities are best. In other instances, psychologists and guidance counselors provide this service. In an academic setting, colleges and universities often provide career planning and development information to students. Students often go to their professors for career advice.
- b. Company Material—Some firms provide material specifically developed to assist their workers in career planning and development. Such material is tailored to the firm's special needs. In addition, job descriptions provide valuable insight for individuals to personally determine if a match exists with their strengths and weaknesses and specific positions considered.
- c. Performance Appraisal System—The firm's performance appraisal system can also be a valuable tool in career planning and development. Noting and discussing an employee's strengths and weaknesses with his or her supervisor can uncover developmental needs. If overcoming a particular weakness seems difficult or even impossible, an alternate career path may be the solution.

- d. Workshops—Some organizations conduct workshops lasting two or three days for the purpose of helping workers develop careers within the company. Employees define and match their specific career objectives with the needs of the company. At other times, workshops are available in the community that the company may send the worker to or workers may initiate the visit themselves.
- e. Personal Development Plans (PDP)—Many employers encourage employees to write their own personal development plans. This is a summary of a person's personal development needs and an action plan to achieve them. Workers are encouraged to analyze their strengths and weaknesses.
- f. Software Packages—Some software packages assist employees in navigating their careers.
- g. Career Planning Web Sites—There are numerous Web sites available that provide career planning and career counseling as well as career testing and assessment.

6. What is Political tactics? Differentiate b/w building relationship and controlling resources? 5 marks lecture 37

Political Tactics

Political tactics are activities that fall outside the standardized, formal processes of the organization. Four types of political tactics are building relationships, controlling resources, image management, and blame and ingratiation.

• Building Relationship

People develop relationships through coalitions, alliances, networks, and supportive managerial linkages.

Coalitions are relationships formed over specific issues; alliances are general agreements of support among different individuals and groups; and networks are broad, loose support systems. Relationship building can either help or harm the organization.

a. Controlling Resources

Controlling resources and decisions, another type of political tactic, involves developing expertise, becoming indispensable, and influencing decision criteria. Like relationship building, controlling resources and decisions can either help or harm the organization.

Q53- What HR manager should do to the problems ' Do Only what you get paid for' Syndrome? Lecture 30

I. Challenges of Pay-for-Performance System

a) Pay for Performance: The Challenges

This section covers the attitudes that employees have about pay, the difficulties in measuring performance, the psychological contract, lack of flexibility, the importance of credibility, job satisfaction, stress, and the potential reduction of intrinsic drives.

- i. The "Do Only What You Get Paid For" Syndrome: The closer pay is tied to particular performance indicators, the more employees tend to focus on those indicators and neglect other important job components

Solutions:

- 1 a) Link Pay and Performance Appropriately: There are few cases in which managers can justify paying workers according to a pre-established formula or measure.
- 2 b) Use Pay for Performance as Part of a Broader HRM System: Pay-for-performance programs are not likely to achieve the desired results unless complementary HRM programs accompany them.
- c) Build Employee Trust: Even the best conceived pay-for-performance program can fail if managers have a poor history of labor relations or if the organization has a cutthroat culture
- 3 d) Promote the Belief that Performance Makes a Difference: Unless an organization creates an atmosphere in which performance makes a difference, it may end up with a low-achievement organizational culture
- 4 e) Use Multiple Layers of Rewards: Because all pay-for-performance systems have positive and negative features, providing different types of pay incentives for different work situations is likely to produce better results than relying on a single type of pay incentive
- 5 f) Increase Employee Involvement: When employees do not view a compensation program as legitimate, they will usually do whatever they can to subvert the system
- 6 g) Use Motivation and Non-financial Incentives: Some people are more interested in the non-financial aspects of their work

Q54- Differentiate between Internal and External equity? Lec 28

- a. Equity—Workers' perceptions that they are being treated fairly. Compensation must be fair to all parties concerned and be perceived as fair.
- b. External Equity—Exists when a firm's employees are paid comparably to workers who perform similar jobs in other firms.
- c. Internal Equity—Exists when employees are paid according to the relative value of their jobs within an organization.
- d. Employee Equity—Exists when individuals performing similar jobs for the same firm are paid according to factors unique to the employee, such as performance level or seniority.
- e. Team Equity—Achieved when more productive teams are rewarded more than less-productive teams.

Q55- Why organization measure the performance of employees? Lec 25,26

Measuring employee performance helps calibrate those goals by providing insight into where someone is doing well and could be stretched and areas that are not a strength yet. Based on performance feedback, self-reflection, and business needs, employees should set their own goals – not the manager or the company.

Paper#4

14-3-2022

1. Differentiate career development from employee development? (3 marks)

III. Career Development

A formal approach taken by an organization to help its people acquire the skills and experiences needed to perform current and future jobs is termed as career development. Company's policies especially policies regarding promotion, counseling the employees, opportunities to excel in future help employees to develop their career. Career development consists of skills, education and experiences as well as behavioral modification and refinement techniques that allow individuals to work better and add value.

Career development is an ongoing organized and formalized effort that recognizes people as a vital organizational resource. It differs from training in that it has a wider focus, longer time frame, and broader scope. The goal of training is improvement in performance; the goal of development is enrichment and more capable workers.

Recently, career development has come to be seen as a means for meeting both organizational and employee needs, as opposed to solely meeting the needs of the organization as it had done in the past. Now, organizations see career development as a way of preventing job burnout, providing career information to employees, improving the quality of work lives and meeting affirmative action goals. That is, career development must be seen as a key business strategy if an organization wants to survive in an increasingly competitive and global business environment.

f. Employee Development

Employees should know exactly what is expected of them and what is required by the firm for advancement in the job or via promotion.

2. Why suspended employee has negative effect for the organization? (3 marks)lec 39

c. Suspension

A suspension or layoff would be the next disciplinary step, usually taken only if the prior steps have been implemented without the desired outcome. Exceptions—where suspension is given without any prior verbal or written warning—occasionally occur if the infraction is of a serious nature.

A suspension may be for one day or several weeks; disciplinary layoffs in excess of a month are rare. Some organizations skip this step completely because it can have negative consequences for both the company and the employee. From the organization's perspective, a suspension means the loss of the employee for the layoff period. If the person has unique skills or is a vital part of a complex process, her loss during the suspension period can severely impact her department or the organization performance if a suitable replacement cannot be located. From the employee's standpoint, a suspension can result in the employee returning in a more unpleasant and negative frame of mind than before the layoff.

Then why should management consider suspending employees as a disciplinary measure? The answer is that a short layoff is potentially a rude awakening to problem employees. It may convince them that management is serious and may move them to accept responsibility for following the organization's rules.

3. How would you differentiate downward communication from upward communication? (5 marks) lec 34

VI. Levels of Communication

a. Upward Communication

Upward communication from subordinates to superiors provides management with valuable insight into how the organization is functioning, and provides superiors with feedback about whether subordinates understand orders and instructions. It gives employees an opportunity to vent their feelings. Upward communication can be encouraged by social gatherings, union publications, regular meetings, performance appraisal meetings, grievances, attitude surveys, a suggestion system, and open door policy, indirect measures, and email. Formal, comprehensive programs and upward appraisals also encourage upward communication.

When communicating with a supervisor, avoid phrases that may inadvertently signal a lack of responsibility on your part. Avoid counterproductive body language and nonverbal mannerisms.

b. Downward Communication

Downward communication is transmitted from superior to subordinate on subjects like corporate vision and mission, what the job consists of, performance evaluations, job instruction, and organizational policies and practices. This format can help build commitment by keeping employees informed about what the organization plans to do. Some firms install open-book management programs that manage without concealment, and motivate all employees to focus on helping the business grow profitable and increasing the return on its human capital. Open-book management fosters trust and commitment among employees by treating them more like partners. When communicating with subordinates, remember that fairness and the appearance of fairness are keys. Make sure your body language comes across as open and receptive.

c. Horizontal Communication

Horizontal or lateral communications are messages between departments or people in the same department. Managers use individuals or committees to bridge departments and improve the flow of communication between them by using liaison personnel, committees and task forces, and independent integrators.

e. Reinforcement Theory

In 1911, psychologist Edward Thorndike formulated the law effect: Behavior that is followed by positive consequences probably will be repeated. This powerful law of behavior laid the foundation for country investigations into the effects of the positive consequences, called reinforcers that motivate behavior. Organizational behavior modification attempts to people's actions.

Four key consequences of behavior either encourage or discourage people's behavior

1. Positive Reinforcement- applying a valued consequence that increases the likelihood that the person will repeat the behavior that led to it. Examples of positive reinforcers include compliments, letters of commendation, favorable performance evaluations, and pay raises. Equally important, jobs can be positively reinforcing. Performing well on interesting, challenging, or enriched jobs (discussed later in this chapter) is much more reinforcing, and therefore motivating, than performing well on jobs that are routine and monotonous.
2. Negative Reinforcement- removing or withholding an undesirable consequence. For example, a manager takes an employee (or a school takes a student) off probation because of improved performance. Frequent threatening memos admonished people to achieve every one of their many performance goals

9. Advantage and disadvantages of power. Lec 39

III. Advantages and Disadvantages of Power

Power is necessary in an organization because it helps managers fulfill their leadership responsibilities; it also helps all employees influence others in pursuit of organizational and personal goals. Two key benefits are the ability to inspire commitment (as a reaction to expert or referent power) and the ability to reduce uncertainty for others in the organization. Empowerment leads to other benefits, such as support for creativity and reduction of bureaucratic obstacles. The main disadvantage is the potential for misuse and abuse, which can harm individuals and the organization.

f) Evolving Work and Family Roles

The proportion of dual-career families, in which both wife and husband (or both members of a couple) work, is increasing every year. Unfortunately, women face the double burden of working at home and on the job, devoting 42 hours per week on average to the office and an additional 30 hours at home to children. This compares to 43 hours spent working in the office and only 12 hours at home for men.

More and more companies are introducing "family-friendly" programs that give them a competitive advantage in the labor market. These programs are HR tactics that companies use to hire and retain the best-qualified employees, male or female, and they are very likely to payoff. For instance, among the well known organizations / firms, half of all recruits are women, but only 5% of partners are women. Major talent is being wasted as many women drop out after lengthy training because they have decided that the demanding 10- to 12-year partner track requires a total sacrifice of family life. These firms have started to change their policies and are already seeing gains as a result. Different companies have recently begun offering child-care and eldercare referral services as well to facilitate women workers as well as are introducing alternative scheduling to allow employees some flexibility in their work hours.

An organization where operations are so diversified that finding the job similarity is quite difficult. HR manager wants to develop an efficient strategy so that job pricing become easy. As HR Manager, which job pricing strategy would you suggest for this organization and why? (5 marks) Lecture 28

A. Job Pricing

Job pricing means placing a dollar value on the worth of a job.

- I. Pay Grades—The grouping of similar jobs together to simplify the job pricing process. Plotting jobs on a scatter diagram is often useful in determining the appropriate number of pay grades.

Pay grades facilitate the employment process by providing a fixed framework of salary ranges

- II. Wage Curve—The fitting of plotted points in order to create a smooth progression between pay grades. A wage curve displays the current pay rates for various jobs within a pay grade in relation to their company ranking.
- III. Pay Ranges—Includes a minimum and maximum pay rate with enough variance between the two to allow some significant pay difference.
- IV. Broad Banding—A technique that collapses many pay grades (salary grades) into a few wide bands in order to improve organizational effectiveness.
- V. Single-Rate System—Pay ranges are not appropriate for some workplace conditions. When single rates are used, everyone in the same job receives the same base pay, regardless of seniority or productivity. This rate may correspond to the midpoint of a range determined by a compensation

In an organization where operations are so diversified that finding job similarity is difficult, I would suggest the job pricing strategy of broad banding.

Broad banding is a job pricing strategy that involves consolidating a large number of job classifications into a smaller number of broad bands. Each broad band includes jobs that are similar in terms of skills, responsibilities, and required qualifications, but allows for a wider range of pay levels within each band. By grouping jobs together into broader bands, HR managers can simplify the job pricing process and make it easier to manage. Broad banding is a more efficient and flexible job pricing strategy for organizations with diverse operations, as it allows for a more nuanced and dynamic approach to job pricing, while reducing the administrative burden associated with traditional job classification systems.

Conflicts are bad and must be avoided

Under traditional view conflict is a process in which people disagree over significant issues, creating friction between parties. One view of conflict is that it is dysfunctional and harmful to organizations, because the struggle over incompatible goals is a waste of time that prevents people and organizations from being productive and reaching their potential. On the other hand, interactionist view states that when conflict is based on issues rather than personalities, it can enhance problem solving and creativity. Open discussions of differing viewpoints allows for a thorough consideration of alternatives and their consequences in the course of decision making. Conflict can also increase motivation and energize people to focus on a task. Human relation view states that Conflict is a natural occurrence and we should accept conflict. conflicts are natural , must occur for better ideas

III. Advantages and Disadvantages of Power

Power is necessary in an organization because it helps managers fulfill their leadership responsibilities; it also helps all employees influence others in pursuit of organizational and personal goals. Two key benefits are the ability to inspire commitment (as a reaction to expert or referent power) and the ability to reduce uncertainty for others in the organization. Empowerment leads to other benefits, such as support for creativity and reduction of bureaucratic obstacles. The main disadvantage is the potential for misuse and abuse, which can harm individuals and the organization.

IV. Performance Appraisal Methods

The type of performance appraisal system utilized depends on its purpose. If the major emphasis is on selecting people for promotion, training, and merit pay increases, a traditional method such as rating scales may be most appropriate. Collaborative methods are designed to assist employees in developing and becoming more effective.

- a. 360-Degree Feedback—Involves input from multiple levels within the firm and external sources as well.
- b. Rating Scales—Rates employees according to defined factors. The factors chosen for evaluation are typically of two types: job related and personal characteristics.
- c. Critical Incidents—Requires written records be kept of highly favorable and highly unfavorable work actions.
- d. Essay—The rater simply writes a brief narrative describing the employee's performance. This method tends to focus on extreme behavior in the employee's work rather than routine day-to-day performance.
- e. Work Standards—Compares each employee's performance to a predetermined standard, or expected level of output.
- f. Ranking—The rater simply places all employees in a given group in rank order on the basis of their overall performance. Paired comparison is a variation of the ranking method that involves comparing the performance of each employee with every other employee in the group.
- g. Forced Distribution—An appraisal approach where the rater is required to assign individuals in the work group to a limited number of categories similar to a normal frequency distribution.
- h. Forced-Choice And Weighted Checklist Performance Reports—The forced-choice performance report is a technique in which the appraiser is given a series of statements about an individual and the rater indicates which items are most or least descriptive of the employee. The weighted checklist performance report is a technique whereby the rater completes a form similar to the forced-choice performance report, but the various responses have been assigned

There are numerous methods for career planning and development. Some currently utilized methods, most of which are used in various combinations, are discussed next.

- a. Discussions with Knowledgeable Individuals—In a formal discussion, the superior and subordinate may jointly agree on what type of career planning and development activities are best. In other instances, psychologists and guidance counselors provide this service. In an academic setting, colleges and universities often provide career planning and development information to students. Students often go to their professors for career advice.
- b. Company Material—Some firms provide material specifically developed to assist their workers in career planning and development. Such material is tailored to the firm's special needs. In addition, job descriptions provide valuable insight for individuals to personally determine if a match exists with their strengths and weaknesses and specific positions considered.
- c. Performance Appraisal System—The firm's performance appraisal system can also be a valuable tool in career planning and development. Noting and discussing an employee's strengths and weaknesses with his or her supervisor can uncover developmental needs. If overcoming a particular weakness seems difficult or even impossible, an alternate career path may be the solution.

- d. Workshops—Some organizations conduct workshops lasting two or three days for the purpose of helping workers develop careers within the company. Employees define and match their specific career objectives with the needs of the company. At other times, workshops are available in the community that the company may send the worker to or workers may initiate the visit themselves. mcqs
- e. Personal Development Plans (PDP)—Many employers encourage employees to write their own personal development plans. This is a summary of a person's personal development needs and an action plan to achieve them. Workers are encouraged to analyze their strengths and weaknesses.
- f. Software Packages—Some software packages assist employees in navigating their careers.
- g. Career Planning Web Sites—There are numerous Web sites available that provide career planning and career counseling as well as career testing and assessment.

Lecture 34

B. Communication in organization

The transmission of information and understanding through the use of common symbols is termed as communication. Communication is the exchange of information between people; it occurs when one person understands the meaning of a message sent by another person, and responds to it. Two forms of information are sent and received in communications: facts and feelings. Facts are pieces of information that can be objectively measured or described. Examples are the cost of a computer, the daily defect rate in a manufacturing plant, and the size of the deductible payment of the company-sponsored health insurance policy. Feelings are employees' emotional responses to the decisions made or actions taken by managers or other employees. Organizations need to design communication channels that allow employees to communicate facts and feelings about specific aspects of their jobs.

Different between leader and management?

The main difference between leaders and managers is that leaders have people follow them while managers have people who work for them. A successful business owner needs to be both a strong leader and manager to get their team on board to follow them towards their vision of success.
