Burnout is a pattern of emotional, physical, and mental exhaustion in response to chronic job stressors. It is an incapacitating condition in which individuals lose a sense of the basic purpose and fulfillment of their work. Burnout has been described as a state of fatigue or frustration that stems from devotion to a cause, way of life, or relationship that did not provide the expected reward. It is often found in a midlife or mid-career crisis, but it can happen at different times to different people. Individuals in the helping professions such as teachers and counselors seem to be susceptible to burnout, whereas others may be vulnerable because of their upbringing, expectations, or their personalities. Burnout is frequently associated with people whose jobs require close relationships with others under stressful and tension-filled conditions. The dangerous part of burnout is that it is contagious. A highly cynical and pessimistic burnout victim can quickly transform an entire group into burnouts. It is important to deal with it quickly; once it has begun, it is difficult.
