

PSY405 - Lesson 23

INTRODUCTION TO ROGERS PERSON CENTERED APPROACH

Carl Rogers was a famous humanistic psychologist. His work is about:

- how people understand themselves
- how they grow internally
- how they change through therapy
- how personality becomes healthy or unhealthy

His approach is called:

- Person centered approach
- Client centered therapy
- Self theory of personality

He believed that people are basically good inside and have a natural tendency to grow if they are given the right environment.

1. PHENOMENOLOGICAL THEORY OF PERSONALITY

Key word: phenomenology

Meaning: study of how a person experiences the world in his or her own mind.

So according to Rogers:

To understand why a person behaves, thinks, or feels in a certain way, you must look at their internal frame of reference.

Internal frame of reference means:

- how the person sees the world
- how they interpret events
- what they believe about themselves
- what they feel inside

It is like wearing glasses with your own color. You see the world through your own meanings.

Example:

Two students fail a test.

- Student A thinks: "I am useless." He becomes sad.
- Student B thinks: "I need to study more next time." He becomes motivated.

Same event, different meanings because of different internal frames of reference.

So behavior is not just about what happens outside. It is about how the person interprets it.

Important definitions:

- perception: how you see and understand something
- interpretation: the meaning you give to something

1. HUMANISTIC VIEW

Humanistic psychology focuses on:

- positive aspects of life
- free choice
- personal growth

It believes humans are not robots. They have freedom to choose their actions and direction in life.

Rogers believed people are:

- basically good
- capable of growth
- able to choose meaningfully

Example from the lesson:

To understand Pakistani students, the teacher must:

- enter their frame of reference

- see how they feel and think
- understand their experiences

This is called empathy.

Definition of empathy:

Ability to put yourself in someone's place and feel what they feel without judging them.

Example:

Your friend is sad after failing. Empathy is not saying "don't cry". Empathy is saying, "It really hurts when you study and still fail. I get how heavy it feels."

1. ACTUALIZING TENDENCY

Very important concept.

Actualizing tendency means:

Natural inner push to grow, develop, survive and become the best version of yourself.

It is innate meaning you are born with it.

Plants example:

A seed automatically grows toward light and water. You don't teach it. It just grows.

Humans also have:

- desire to improve
- desire to learn
- desire to become capable
- desire to express their real self

Example:

Child naturally tries to walk, talk, explore, ask questions. Nobody forces this. It is inside them.

1. FULLY FUNCTIONING PERSON

Fully functioning person means:

Someone who is living a healthy psychological life and using their potential.

They:

- use their talents
- understand themselves
- accept themselves
- grow continuously
- live meaningfully

This is Rogers' idea of the good life.

Not perfect life

not zero problems

not rich life

Good life means:

- real
- open
- growing
- self-accepting

1. CONCEPT OF SELF

Self means:

- who I think I am
- how I see myself
- what I believe about me

Self-concept includes:

- self image (who I believe I am)
- ideal self (who I want to be)

Example:

Self image: "I am shy"

Ideal self: "I wish I were confident"

If there is too much difference between real self and ideal self, anxiety occurs.

1. NEED FOR POSITIVE REGARD

Positive regard means:

- love
- acceptance
- respect
- approval

Humans need it, especially from parents in childhood.

If children receive love only when they behave in certain ways, conditions of worth form. If they get love without conditions, they become healthy emotionally.

1. CONDITIONS OF WORTH

Meaning:

Rules inside person's mind that say:

"I am worthy only if I do this."

Example:

I am lovable only if I get high marks.

I am good only if everyone likes me.

I am valuable only if I never make mistakes.

These conditions come from parents, teachers, culture etc.

They cause inner conflict because the person stops listening to their true feelings.

1. UNCONDITIONAL POSITIVE REGARD

Very important in therapy and parenting.

Meaning:

Acceptance without conditions.

You value the person even if you dislike their behavior.

You say:

"You are important and worthy as a human being."

Example:

Parent says:

"I do not like what you did, but I still love you."

Therapist attitude:

"I accept you as you are, I am not judging you."

This helps the person grow, because they don't fear rejection.

1. THREAT AND ANXIETY

Threat occurs when:

A person experiences something that does not match their self-concept.

They feel inner danger.

Example:

A man believes "I am always strong".

One day he cries.

He feels threatened because "crying" does not fit his self-image.

Anxiety is:

Emotional discomfort produced by threat.

Body feels:

- nervous
 - tight
 - worried
 - uneasy

1. DEFENSE MECHANISMS

To reduce threat and anxiety, people use defense.

Two main ways Rogers mentions:

- denial
- distortion

Denial means refusing to accept reality.

Distortion means changing reality to make it fit self-concept.

Example:

Person feels anger toward mother but says:

"No, I am not angry. I am just tired."

They deny real feeling to protect self-image.

1. PERSONALITY DISORGANIZATION AND PSYCHOPATHOLOGY

When self cannot manage threatening experiences, personality becomes disorganized.

Psychopathology means psychological disorder.

Rogers says:

When gap between self concept and real experience becomes too large → person may show psychotic behavior.

Psychotic behavior means:

- bizarre actions
- irrational statements
- loss of reality contact

Example:

Person who denies sexual feelings strongly may suddenly show extreme sexual behavior. That behavior is congruent with denied experiences, not with self-concept.

1. CONGRUENCE AND INCONGRUENCE

Congruence means:

- harmony between self-concept and real experiences

Incongruence means:

- mismatch between how I see myself and what I actually feel or do

Incongruence causes anxiety.

1. THERAPEUTIC PROCESS ACCORDING TO ROGERS

Rogers' therapy changed in stages.

First name: non-directive therapy

Idea: therapist does not tell client what to do. Client finds answers.

Second name: client-centered therapy

Idea: therapist and client work together.

Third: person-centered therapy

Idea: focus on whole person, not just "patient".

Required conditions for therapy

Therapy works when:

1. Therapist and client are in psychological contact
 2. Client is anxious because of incongruence
 3. Therapist shows empathy
 4. Therapist provides unconditional positive regard
 5. Client feels accepted

Changes that occur during successful therapy

Client gradually:

1. Expresses feelings more freely
2. Describes experiences more accurately

3. Recognizes incongruence
 4. Stops denying experiences
 5. Accepts previously rejected emotions
 6. Reorganizes self-concept
 7. Becomes less defensive
 8. Becomes more real
 9. Stops living according to conditions of worth
 10. Experiences growth toward actualization

1. FULLY FUNCTIONING PERSON CHARACTERISTICS

A healthy individual has:

1. Openness to experience
Accepts feelings and realities without denial
 2. Experiential living
Lives in the present instead of being stuck in past or future
 3. Organismic trusting
Trusts inner feelings and intuition
 4. Experiential freedom
Feels free to make choices
 5. Creativity or psychological maturity
Expresses self, adapts, grows

1. STUDENT CENTERED TEACHING

Rogers said traditional education is faulty because:

- teacher controls everything
- student is passive
- focus is memorization

He believed students learn best when:

- environment is non-threatening
 - they are respected
 - learning is personally meaningful
 - teacher is facilitator not dictator

SUMMARY IN SIMPLE WORDS

Rogers believes:

- humans are basically good
- they want to grow
- they need acceptance and empathy
- problems arise when self and experience do not match
- therapy should provide warmth, empathy, and unconditional positive regard
- this allows person to become fully functioning

SHORT QUESTIONS

1. What is meant by Rogers' phenomenological theory of personality?

Answer

Rogers' phenomenological theory of personality states that to understand why a person thinks, feels, and behaves in a certain way, we must understand the person's internal frame of reference. This means we must study how the person perceives and interprets the world. Human behavior is guided not only by external events but also by the individual's personal meanings, experiences, and inner world.

Explanation

Phenomenology means the study of subjective experience.

Internal frame of reference means a person's private world consisting of beliefs, thoughts, feelings, memories, and meanings. Rogers believed that each person lives in a private inner world which only they fully know. To understand a person scientifically, psychology must enter that inner world.

Example

Two people are standing in rain.

One says, "This is depressing."

The other says, "This is refreshing."

Same rain, different internal worlds.

Tips

- Always link phenomenology with "inner experience"
- Remember: behavior = event plus personal meaning
- In exams, write: perception, interpretation, internal frame of reference

1. What is meant by the humanistic view of personality?

Answer

The humanistic view of personality emphasizes the positive side of human nature, the ability to make free choices, and the potential for personal growth. It views human beings as active, creative, and capable of directing their lives toward meaningful goals rather than being controlled only by past experiences or unconscious forces.

Explanation

Humanistic psychology focuses on concepts such as free will, self growth, self responsibility, and personal meaning. It rejects the view of humans as machines or passive reactors. Instead, people are seen as capable of choosing and shaping their destinies.

Example

A student fails an exam.

A humanistic psychologist will ask,

How can this student learn, grow, and move forward?

rather than only asking what punishment or reinforcement will control the behavior.

Tips

- Link humanism with positive growth
 - Use words such as choice, freedom, potential, self development
 - Remember: humanistic psychology believes humans are basically good

1. What is meant by the term empathy in Rogers' theory?

Answer

In Rogers' theory, empathy means the ability to understand another person's feelings and thoughts from their own frame of reference, without judging them. It is the skill of putting oneself in the other person's place and seeing the world through their eyes.

Explanation

Empathy is different from sympathy. Sympathy means feeling sorry for someone. Empathy means feeling with them while understanding how their world looks to them. It is a central condition in therapy because it allows the client to feel heard, valued, and understood.

Example

Your friend fails an exam and cries.

Sympathy: "Don't worry, you will be fine."

Empathy: "You worked hard, and this result must really hurt. It feels unfair and heavy right now."

Tips

- Always write "client's frame of reference" in answers
 - Empathy is non-judgmental understanding
 - Therapists listen more and advise less

1. What is the actualizing tendency according to Rogers?

Answer

According to Rogers, the actualizing tendency is an inborn, natural drive present in every living organism to grow, develop, maintain itself, and reach its full potential. It is the basic motivating force behind all human behavior.

Explanation

Actualizing tendency pushes a person toward learning, independence, creativity, and maturity. It operates automatically, just as plants naturally grow toward sunlight. Psychological problems occur when environmental conditions block this natural growth.

Example

A child naturally tries to walk, explore, talk, ask questions, make friends, and learn new skills. This curiosity and effort do not need to be taught. They arise from the actualizing tendency.

Tips

- Remember: it is innate (inborn)
- Always link it with growth and development
- Use plant growth examples in exams for clarity

1. What is a fully functioning person in Rogers' theory?

Answer

A fully functioning person is someone who is open to experience, lives meaningfully in the present, trusts their inner feelings, experiences psychological freedom, and uses their capacities and talents to the fullest. This person is moving toward continuous growth and self actualization.

Explanation

This person is not perfect or problem-free. Instead, they are emotionally healthy, flexible, honest with themselves, and willing to face life directly. They accept their feelings without denial or distortion and make authentic choices.

Example

A person who accepts mistakes, learns from them, expresses emotions honestly, builds healthy relationships, and keeps trying to improve is considered fully functioning.

Tips

- Memorize five features: openness, present living, trusting self, freedom, creativity
 - Write "Rogers' idea of good life"
 - Emphasize psychological growth, not material success

1. What is meant by the concept of self in Rogers' theory?

Answer

The concept of self refers to the organized set of perceptions and beliefs that a person has about themselves. It includes how individuals see themselves, what they think about their abilities, values, and personal characteristics, and who they believe they are.

Explanation

The self has two parts.

Real self: who I actually am.

Ideal self: who I want to become.

When the gap between real self and ideal self is small, the person is healthy.
When the gap is large, anxiety and dissatisfaction occur.

Example

Real self: I am shy.

Ideal self: I want to be confident and socially active.

The bigger the gap, the greater the emotional tension.

Tips

- Always mention real self and ideal self
 - Connect self with perception and belief
 - Link large gap with anxiety

1. What is meant by positive regard?

Answer

Positive regard refers to the need of every human being to be loved, accepted, valued, and respected by others, especially significant people such as parents, teachers, and friends. It is a basic psychological need.

Explanation

When children consistently receive acceptance and love, they develop a healthy self-concept. When love is given only under certain conditions, they develop emotional problems.

Example

If parents say, "We love you no matter what," the child receives unconditional positive regard. If parents say, "We love you only if you get top marks," it becomes conditional.

Tips

- Link positive regard with early childhood
 - Use words: love, acceptance, respect
 - Distinguish unconditional vs conditional

1. What are conditions of worth?

Answer

Conditions of worth are internal rules learned by individuals that tell them they are worthy or acceptable only if they behave in particular ways. These conditions are usually developed in childhood through parental and societal expectations.

Explanation

When love is given only after performance, the child starts believing "I am valuable only if I satisfy others." This leads to rejection of true feelings and development of inner conflict.

Example

I am good only if I obey everyone.

I am loved only if I achieve high grades.

I am acceptable only if I never cry.

Tips

- Conditions of worth limit actualization
 - Write "learned in childhood"
 - Opposite is unconditional positive regard

1. What is unconditional positive regard?

Answer

Unconditional positive regard means accepting and valuing a person without setting conditions for their worth. The individual is respected as a human being even if certain behaviors are disapproved.

Explanation

In therapy, the counselor communicates "You are acceptable as you are." This reduces fear, increases honesty, and helps the client face real emotions without denial.

Example

Parent says, "I don't like what you did, but I still love you."

Therapist says, "You are important and worthy, no matter your mistakes."

Tips

- Key phrase: without conditions
 - Do not confuse with approving every behavior
 - Essential element in Rogers' therapy

1. What is meant by threat and anxiety in Rogers' theory?

Answer

Threat occurs when a person becomes aware of experiences that do not match their self-concept. Anxiety is the emotional reaction that arises from this threat, producing tension and psychological discomfort.

Explanation

When the self-concept is challenged by real experiences, the person feels insecure because their identity is shaken. To reduce this emotional pain, the person may use defense mechanisms such as denial or distortion.

Example

A person believes "I am always strong."

One day, they cry.

This experience does not match their self-concept, so they feel threatened and anxious.

Tips

- Always mention mismatch or incongruence
- Threat is awareness, anxiety is emotion
- Leads to defense mechanisms

1. What are defense mechanisms in Rogers' theory?

Answer

Defense mechanisms are psychological strategies used by individuals to protect their self-concept from threatening experiences. They mainly involve denial or distortion of reality so that uncomfortable feelings do not reach conscious awareness.

Explanation

Denial means refusing to acknowledge painful reality.

Distortion means changing the meaning of reality to make it less threatening to the self.

Example

A person who feels anger toward parents may say, "I am not angry, just tired," even when the real emotion is anger. This keeps the self-image safe but blocks growth.

Tips

- Defense protects the self but prevents growth
 - Mention denial and distortion
 - Use simple emotional examples in answers

1. What is personality disorganization according to Rogers?

Answer

Personality disorganization occurs when the gap between self-concept and real experiences becomes very large, and the person is unable to defend against threatening experiences. This can result in behavior that appears irrational, bizarre, or psychotic.

Explanation

When defenses fail, denied experiences break into awareness suddenly and create confusion. Rogers explained that so-called “psychotic” behavior sometimes reflects these denied aspects of experience rather than the person's conscious self-image.

Example

A person who has strictly denied sexual feelings may suddenly show extreme sexual behavior inconsistent with their usual self-concept.

Tips

- Link with large incongruence
- Write: defenses fail, disorganization occurs
- Use the word psychotic carefully but accurately

MCQs

1. Rogers' theory is mainly associated with which psychological approach?
 - A. Psychoanalytic
 - B. Behaviorist
 - C. Humanistic
 - D. Biological

Correct answer: C

Explanation: Rogers focused on positive growth, free choice, and self actualization which are core ideas of humanistic psychology.

2. Phenomenology in Rogers' theory refers to

- A. Measuring brain waves
- B. Studying unconscious wishes
- C. Studying subjective experience
- D. Studying genetic traits

Correct answer: C

Explanation: Phenomenology means understanding how people experience and interpret their personal world.

3. According to Rogers, the basic motive in humans is

- A. Pleasure principle
- B. Aggression instinct
- C. Actualizing tendency
- D. Need for power

Correct answer: C

Explanation: Actualizing tendency is the inborn drive to grow, maintain, and enhance oneself.

4. The term "fully functioning person" refers to a person who

- A. Never experiences problems
- B. Has no emotions
- C. Is using their potentials and capacities
- D. Always follows society's rules

Correct answer: C

Explanation: Fully functioning people realize and use their talents. They are healthy, not perfect.

5. Empathy means

- A. Feeling pity for someone
- B. Understanding another person from their viewpoint
- C. Giving advice
- D. Ignoring differences

Correct answer: B

Explanation: Empathy is entering the client's frame of reference and understanding feelings from their perspective.

True or False

1. Rogers believed human nature is basically good.

- A. True
- B. False

Correct answer: A

Explanation: Rogers said humans are positive and trustworthy if proper conditions for growth are provided.

2. Conditions of worth are present when people are accepted without any conditions.

- A. True
- B. False

Correct answer: B

Explanation: Conditions of worth mean acceptance depends on meeting certain standards, not unconditional love.

3. Incongruence creates anxiety in Rogers' theory.

- A. True
- B. False

Correct answer: A

Explanation: When self concept and experience do not match, anxiety develops.

4. Defense mechanisms help in growth and self actualization.

A. True

B. False

Correct answer: B

Explanation: Defenses protect the self in the short term but block real growth.

5. Client centered therapy focuses on the therapist's interpretation of the client's problems.

A. True

B. False

Correct answer: B

Explanation: Rogers focuses on clients' perceptions, not therapist imposed interpretations.

MCQs: Tricky conceptual questions

1. Which of the following is most essential in person centered therapy?

A. Advice giving

B. Interpretation of dreams

C. Relationship between therapist and client

D. Behavior modification

Correct answer: C

Explanation: Rogers emphasized that the healing factor is the therapeutic relationship.

2. Which of the following best describes unconditional positive regard?

A. Approving all behaviors

B. Accepting the person without conditions

C. Ignoring negative behavior

D. Rewarding only good behavior

Correct answer: B

Explanation: One may dislike actions but still value the person as worthy.

3. According to Rogers, psychopathology results from

- A. Inborn evil nature
- B. Genetic defects
- C. High congruence
- D. Incongruence between self and experience

Correct answer: D

Explanation: When the gap becomes large and defenses break down, psychological disturbance appears.

4. Organismic trusting means

- A. Ignoring emotions
- B. Relying on external rules
- C. Trusting one's own inner experience
- D. Being logical only

Correct answer: C

Explanation: Fully functioning persons trust their inner feelings and experiences.

5. In Rogers' theory, the "self" mainly develops through

- A. Childhood punishment
- B. Social learning alone
- C. Need for positive regard and experiences
- D. Dream interpretation

Correct answer: C

Explanation: Self develops from interaction between experience and need for acceptance.

MCQs: Situational questions

1. Ali believes he is a very confident person. During presentation he suddenly freezes and cannot speak. He later says, "It was nothing, just the mic was faulty." Which process is he showing?

A. Self actualization
B. Empathy
C. Denial or distortion
D. Unconditional positive regard

Correct answer: C

Explanation: He changed reality to protect his self concept of being confident.

2. A therapist tells the client, "I accept you as you are, even if I do not agree with every behavior." This is an example of

A. Conditional positive regard
B. Empathy
C. Punishment
D. Unconditional positive regard

Correct answer: D

Explanation: Person is valued without conditions.

3. A student thinks, "I am only worthy if I always get top grades." This belief reflects

A. Self actualization
B. Conditions of worth
C. Congruence
D. Organismic trust

Correct answer: B

Explanation: Worth depends on meeting external conditions.

4. Sana is able to experience her sadness fully, express it openly, and still move forward toward her goals. According to Rogers she is

- A. Fully functioning
- B. Psychotic
- C. Incongruent
- D. Highly defensive

Correct answer: A

Explanation: She is open to experience and growing.

5. A person strongly suppresses anger for years, then suddenly shows extreme aggressive behavior. Rogers would explain this as

- A. Dream resistance
- B. Defense strengthening
- C. Personality disorganization
- D. Normal development

Correct answer: C

Explanation: When denied experiences break into awareness, disorganization occurs.

MCQs: Matching ideas with Rogers' terms

1. "Living in the present without rigidly relying on past beliefs" refers to

- A. Experiential living
- B. Creativity
- C. Threat
- D. Anxiety

Correct answer: A

Explanation: Experiential living means real awareness of the present moment.

2. "A feeling of being unsafe when experience conflicts with self concept" is called

- A. Congruence

B. Threat

C. Actualization

D. Empathy

Correct answer: B

Explanation: Threat is awareness of incongruence.

3. "Inner drive to grow and develop" is

A. Superego

B. Instinct of aggression

C. Actualizing tendency

D. Pleasure principle

Correct answer: C

Explanation: Rogers' single master motive.

4. "Self image that we wish to become" refers to

A. Real self

B. Ideal self

C. Social self

D. False self

Correct answer: B

Explanation: Ideal self is our desired self picture.

5. "Feeling of tension caused by threat" is

A. Anxiety

B. Euphoria

C. Catharsis

D. Regression

Correct answer: A

Explanation: Anxiety follows when threat is perceived.

True or False: Rogers and Therapy

1. Rogers shifted from nondirective therapy to client centered then person centered approach.

A. True

B. False

Correct answer: A

Explanation: His approach evolved from techniques to relationship emphasis.

2. Rogers believed therapist should mainly analyze and interpret the client's unconscious mind.

A. True

B. False

Correct answer: B

Explanation: That view belongs to Freud, not Rogers.

3. According to Rogers, recording therapy sessions helped improve training and research.

A. True

B. False

Correct answer: A

Explanation: Rogers used audio and video recordings for teaching therapists.

4. Rogers compared psychotherapy with gardening.

A. True

B. False

Correct answer: A

Explanation: Both need proper conditions for growth.

5. In student centered teaching, teacher is a strict authority figure.

A. True

B. False

Correct answer: B

Explanation: Teacher acts as facilitator, not authoritarian controller.

CHEAT SHEET

PERSON-CENTERED = focus on whole person

CLIENT-CENTERED = focus inside therapy room

SELF THEORY = focus on self-concept and growth

KEY MASTER IDEA

Actualizing tendency = inner natural push to grow, survive, and become best self

Memory hook:

Think of a seed growing toward sunlight automatically

CORE KEY TERMS AND DEFINITIONS

Phenomenology

Meaning: study of personal experience and inner viewpoint

Keyword: inner world

Example: Same event makes two people feel different because they interpret it differently

Internal frame of reference

Meaning: how a person sees and interprets life

Keyword: personal glasses

Humanistic psychology

Meaning: emphasizes free choice, growth, positive potential

Self

Meaning: how I see myself

Includes:

- real self
- ideal self

Self-concept

Meaning: organized picture of “who I am”

Congruence

Meaning: match between self-concept and real experience

Incongruence

Meaning: mismatch between self-concept and real experience

Result: anxiety

Anxiety

Meaning: emotional tension when self is threatened

Concept	Short meaning	What to remember
Self-concept	View of self	real plus ideal
Congruence	Real equals ideal	healthy
Incongruence	Real not equal ideal	stress, anxiety
Empathy	Feeling with the person	therapist skill
Unconditional positive regard	Acceptance without “if”	healing climate
Fully functioning person	Grows, open, present-focused	goal of therapy

Definition

Innate tendency to grow, develop abilities, and maintain life

Small example

Child naturally learns to walk, talk, explore

Mnemonic

ACTUALIZE = ACT to REALIZE abilities

FULLY FUNCTIONING PERSON

Rogers' idea of good psychological life

Five features

1. Openness to experience
Accept feelings instead of denying them
2. Experiential living
Live in the present fully
3. Organismic trusting
Trust inner feelings and intuition
4. Experiential freedom
Feel free to make choices
5. Creativity or maturity
Able to express self and grow

POSITIVE REGARD

Positive regard

Need to feel accepted, loved, respected

Two types

Unconditional positive regard

Meaning: accepted without conditions

Example: "I love you even if you make mistakes"

Conditional positive regard

Meaning: accepted only if you behave certain way

Leads to: conditions of worth

Conditions of worth

Meaning: "I am valuable only if I..."

Example: "I am worthy only if I score high marks"

DEFENSE AND THREAT

Threat

Meaning: when experience clashes with self-concept

Defense

Two main forms

- denial
- distortion

Example

Feeling angry but telling yourself "I am fine"

PERSONALITY DISORGANIZATION

Happens when

Gap between self-concept and reality becomes too large

Result

- confusion
- breakdown in functioning
- sometimes psychotic symptoms

Key idea

Behavior may match denied experiences, not self-concept

THERAPY EVOLUTION

Three labels across time

1. Non-directive therapy

Therapist does not tell client what to do

2. Client-centered therapy

Therapist and client work together

3. Person-centered therapy

Focus on whole person, not just problem

Mnemonic

CONDITIONS FOR SUCCESSFUL THERAPY

For therapy to work, these must be present

1. Psychological contact between therapist and client
2. Client is anxious due to incongruence
3. Therapist shows empathy
4. Therapist gives unconditional positive regard
5. Client feels accepted

Quick memory hook

CHANGES SEEN IN CLIENT AFTER SUCCESSFUL THERAPY

Clients start to

- express feelings freely
 - describe experiences correctly
 - notice self-experience mismatch
 - stop denying and distorting
 - accept previously rejected feelings
 - reorganize self-concept
 - become less defensive
 - feel more real and alive
 - ignore conditions of worth
 - move toward actualization

STUDENT-CENTERED TEACHING

Teacher role = facilitator

Environment = non-threatening

Learning = meaningful to student

Student = active learner

QUICK TABLE SUMMARY

Healthy person vs unhealthy person

Healthy

- congruence
- openness
- self-acceptance
- growth
- creativity

Unhealthy

- incongruence
- denial
- anxiety
- defense
- rigid self-concept
