Lesson 23

LEADERSHIP APPLICATION*Overview

Leaders at all levels in an organization help individuals, groups, and the organization as a whole achieve their goals and can thus have profound effects in organizations. The approaches to leadership covered help explain how leaders influence their followers and why leaders are sometimes effective and sometimes ineffective.

- ☞ Leadership is the exercise of influence by one member of a group or organization over other members to help the group or organization achieve its goals. Formal leaders have formal authority to influence others by virtue of their job responsibilities. Informal leaders lack formal authority, but influence others by virtue of their special skills or talents.
- ☞ The trait approach to leadership found that good leaders tend to be intelligent, dominant, self-confident, energetic, able to withstand stress, honest, mature, and knowledgeable. Possessing these traits, however, does not guarantee that a leader will be effective, nor does the failure to have one or more of these traits mean that a leader will be ineffective.
- ☞ A lot of the behaviors that leaders engage in fall into two main categories: consideration and initiating structure. Consideration includes all leadership behaviors that indicate that leaders trust, respect, and value a good relationship with their followers. Initiating structure includes all the behaviors that leaders engage in to help subordinates achieve their goals and perform at a high level. Leaders also engage in reward and punishing behaviors.
- ☞ Fiedler's contingency theory proposes that leader effectiveness depends on both leader style and situational characteristics. Leaders have either a relationship-oriented style or a task-oriented style. Situational characteristics, including leader-member relations, task structure, and position power, determine how favorable a situation is for leading. Relationship-oriented leaders are most effective in moderately favorable situations. Task-oriented leaders are most effective in extremely favorable or unfavorable situations. Leaders cannot easily change their style, so Fiedler recommends changing situations to fit the leader or assigning leaders to situations in which they will be most effective.
- ☞ Path-goal theory suggests that effective leaders motivate their followers by giving them outcomes they desire when they perform at a high level or achieve their work goals. Effective leaders also make sure their subordinates believe that they can obtain their work goals and perform at a high level, show subordinates the paths to goal attainment, remove obstacles that might come along the way, and express confidence in their subordinates' capabilities. Leaders need to adjust the type of behavior they engage in (directive, supportive, participative, or achievement-oriented) to correspond to the nature of the subordinates they are dealing with and the type of work they are doing.
- ☞ The Vroom and Yetton model specifies the extent to which leaders should have their subordinates participate in decision making. How much subordinates should participate depends on aspects of the decision that need to be made, the subordinates involved, and the information needed to make a good decision.
- ☞ Leader-member exchange theory focuses on the leader-follower dyad and suggests that leaders do not treat each of their followers the same but rather develop different kinds of relationships with different subordinates. Some leader-follower dyads have high-quality relationships. Subordinates in these dyads are members of the in-group. Other leader-follower dyads have low-quality relationships. Subordinates in these dyads form the out-group.
- ☞ Sometimes leadership does not seem to have much of an effect in organizations because of the existence of substitutes and neutralizers. A leadership substitute is something that acts in place of a formal leader. Substitutes make leadership unnecessary because they take the place of the influence of a leader. A leadership neutralizer is something that prevents a leader from having influence and negates a leader's efforts. When neutralizers are present, there is a leadership void—the leader is having little or no effect, and nothing else is taking the leader's place.

- Transformational leaders increase their followers' awareness of the importance of their jobs and the followers' own needs for personal growth and accomplishment and motivate followers to work for the good of the organization. Leaders transform their followers by being charismatic, intelligently stimulating their followers, and engaging in developmental consideration. Transactional leadership occurs when leaders motivate their subordinates by exchanging rewards for high performance and reprimanding instances of low performance.
- Leader mood at work and levels of emotional intelligence have the potential to influence leader effectiveness. Preliminary research suggests that when leaders tend to be in a good mood at work, their subordinates may perform at a higher level and be less likely to resign.
- Women and men do not appear to differ in the leadership behaviors (consideration and initiating structure) that they perform in organizations. Women, however, appear to be more democratic or participative than men as leaders.

Contingency Theories

Path-Goal Theory

- One of the most respected approaches to leadership is the path-goal theory developed by Robert House.
- It is a contingency model of leadership which extracts key elements from the Ohio State leadership research on initiating structure and consideration and the expectancy theory of motivation.
- It is the leader's job to assist followers in attaining their goals and to provide the necessary direction and/or support to ensure that their goals are compatible with the overall objectives of the firm.
- The term path-goal is derived from the belief that effective leaders clarify the path to help their followers achieve their work goals.
- House identified four leadership behaviors:
- The directive leader lets followers know what is expected of them, etc.

- The supportive leader is friendly and shows concern for the needs of followers.
- The participative leader consults with followers and uses their suggestions before making a decision.
- The achievement-oriented leader sets challenging goals and expects followers to perform at their highest level.
- In contrast to Fiedler, House assumes leaders are flexible and can display any of these behaviors.
- Two classes of situational or contingency variables moderate the leadership behavior:
- Environmental or outcome relationship. These factors determine the type of leader behavior required as a complement if follower outcomes are to be maximized.
- Personal characteristics of the employee. These determine how the environment and leader behavior are interpreted.
- Directive leadership leads to greater satisfaction when tasks are ambiguous or stressful than when they are highly structured and well laid out.
- Supportive leadership results in high employee performance and satisfaction when employees are performing structured tasks.
- Directive leadership is likely to be perceived as redundant among employees with high perceived ability or with considerable experience.
- Employees with an internal locus of control will be more satisfied with a participative style.
- Achievement-oriented leadership will increase employees' expectancies that effort will lead to high performance when tasks are ambiguously structured.
- Research evidence generally supports the logic underlying the path-goal theory.

Directive leader

- Lets employees know what is expected of them, schedules work to be done, and gives specific guidance as to how to accomplish tasks.

Supportive leader

- Is friendly and shows concern for the needs of employees.

Participative leader

- Consults with employees and uses their suggestions before making a decision.

Achievement-oriented leader

- Sets challenging goals and expects employees to perform at their highest levels.

Transformational and Charismatic Leadership

Defining Charismatic Leadership

“Charismatic leaders have a combination of charm and personal magnetism that contribute to a remarkable ability to get other people to endorse to their vision and promote it passionately”

Trait of a Charismatic Leader

- Self-confidence
- A vision
- Strong conviction in that vision
- Out of the ordinary behavior
- The image of a change agent

Two Types of Charismatic Leaders

- Visionary Charismatic Leaders
  - Through communication ability, the visionary charismatic leader links followers' needs and goals to job or organizational goals.
- Crisis-Based Charismatic Leaders
  - The crisis-produced charismatic leader communicates clearly what actions need to be taken and what their consequences will be.

Researchers suggest that leaders can have dramatic effects on followers and organizations, literally transforming them. Bernard Bass' theory on transformational and charismatic leadership has been well received because it is comprehensive and incorporates ideas from other leadership approaches.

Transformational leaders

- Leading -- changing the organization to fit the environment
- Develop, communicate, enact a vision

Transactional leaders

- Managing -- linking job performance to rewards
- Ensure employees have necessary resources
- Apply contingency leadership theories

Transformational leadership occurs when a leader changes followers in ways that lead to trust and motivation towards organizational goals. Transformational leaders increase subordinates' awareness of task significance and high performance levels. Transformational leaders make subordinates aware of their needs for personal growth, development, and accomplishment. They motivate subordinates to work for the good of the organization, not personal gain.

Transformational leaders are charismatic leaders, with a vision for the organization and the ability to induce followers to support the vision enthusiastically. To convey their excitement, charismatic leaders have high self-confidence and self-esteem, which encourage their followers to respect and admire them. They cause followers to view problems differently and feel responsibility for problem solving.

Trust

- Credibility: the degree to which followers perceive someone as honest, competent and able to inspire.
- Trust: the belief in the integrity, character and ability of a leader.

Five Dimensions of Trust

- Integrity (honesty and truthfulness)
- Competence (technical/interpersonal)
- Consistency (reliability, predictability and good judgment in handling situations)
- Loyalty (willingness to protect and save face for a person)
- Openness (willingness to share ideas and information freely)

Types of Trust

- Deterrence-based trust
  - Trust based on fear of reprisal if the trust is violated
- Knowledge-based trust
  - Trust based on the behavioral predictability that comes from a history of interaction
- Identification-based trust
  - Trust based on an emotional connection between the parties

Lesson 24

POWER AND POLITICS*Overview

If you want to get things done in a group or organization, it helps to have power. As a manager who wants to maximize your power, you will want to increase others' dependence on you. You can, for instance, increase your power in relation to your boss by developing knowledge or a skill that he needs and for which he perceives no ready substitute, but power is a two-way street. You will not be alone in attempting to build your power bases. Others, particularly employees and peers, will be seeking to make you dependent on them. The result is a continual battle. While you seek to maximize others' dependence on you, you will be seeking to minimize your dependence on others, and, of course, others you work with will be trying to do the same. Few employees relish being powerless in their job and organization. It has been argued, for instance, that when people in organizations are difficult, argumentative, and temperamental, it may be because they are in positions of powerlessness, where the performance expectations placed on them exceed their resources and capabilities.

There is evidence that people respond differently to the various power bases. Expert and referent power are derived from an individual's personal qualities. In contrast, coercion, reward, and legitimate power are essentially organizationally derived. Since people are more likely to enthusiastically accept and commit to an individual whom they admire or whose knowledge they respect (rather than someone who relies on his or her position to reward or coerce them), the effective use of expert and referent power should lead to higher employee performance, commitment, and satisfaction. Competence especially appears to offer wide appeal, and its use as a power base results in high performance by group members. The message for managers seems to be: Develop and use your expert power base!

The power of your boss may also play a role in determining your job satisfaction. "One of the reasons many of us like to work for and with people who are powerful is that they are generally more pleasant, not because it is their native disposition, but because the reputation and reality of being powerful permits them more discretion and more ability to delegate to others.

The effective manager accepts the political nature of organizations. By assessing behavior in a political framework, you can better predict the actions of others and use this information to formulate political strategies that will gain advantages for you and your work unit. Some people are just significantly more "politically astute" than are others. Those who are good at playing politics can be expected to get higher performance evaluations, and hence, larger salary increases and promotions. They are more likely to exhibit higher job satisfaction.

Power

Definition: Power refers to a capacity that A has to influence the behavior of B, so that B acts in accordance with A's wishes.

- Power may exist but not be used. It is, therefore, a capacity or potential.
- Probably the most important aspect of power is that it is a function of dependency.
- The greater B's dependence on A, the greater is A's power in the relationship.
- Dependence, in turn, is based on alternatives that B perceives and the importance that B places on the alternative(s) that A controls.
- A person can have power over you only if he or she controls something you desire.

Concept of Power

Power - the ability to influence another person

Influence - the process of affecting the thoughts, behavior, & feelings of another person

Authority - the right to influence another person

Coercive Power:

- The coercive power base is being dependent on fear.
- It rests on the application, or the threat of application, of physical sanctions such as the infliction of pain, the generation of frustration through restriction of movement, or the controlling by force of basic physiological or safety needs.
- At the organizational level, A has coercive power over B if A can dismiss, suspend, or demote B, assuming that B values his or her job.
- Similarly, if A can assign B work activities that B finds unpleasant or treat B in a manner that B finds embarrassing, A possesses coercive power over B.

Reward Power:

- The opposite of coercive power is reward power.
- People comply because doing so produces positive benefits; therefore, one who can distribute rewards that others view as valuable will have power over those others.
- These rewards can be anything that another person values.
- Coercive power and reward power are actually counterparts of each other.
  - a. If you can remove something of positive value from another or inflict something of negative value upon him/her, you have coercive power over that person.
  - b. If you can give someone something of positive value or remove something of negative value, you have reward power over that person.

Legitimate Power:

- In formal groups and organizations, the most frequent access power is one's structural position. It represents the power a person receives as a result of his/her position in the formal hierarchy.
- Positions of authority include coercive and reward powers.
- Legitimate power, however, is broader than the power to coerce and reward. It includes acceptance of the authority of a position by members of an organization.

Charismatic Power:

- Is an extension of referent power stemming from an individual's personality and interpersonal style.
- Others follow because they can articulate attractive visions, take personal risks, demonstrate follower sensitivity, etc.

A Definition of Power

power

A capacity that A has to influence the behavior of B so that B acts in accordance with A's wishes.

dependency

B's relationship to A when A possesses something that B requires.

Expert Power:

- Expert power is "influence wielded as a result of expertise, special skill, or knowledge."
- Expertise has become a powerful source of influence as the world has become more technological. As jobs become more specialized, we become increasingly dependent on experts to achieve goals.

PRINCIPLES OF POWER

- Power is perceived
- Power is relative
- Power bases must be coordinated
- Power is a double-edged sword (used and abused)

Consequences of power:

Managers who have power benefit the most from organizational decisions, such as obtaining scarce resources for their department.

Contrasting Leadership and Power

Leaders use power as a means of attaining group goals. Leaders achieve goals, and power is a means of facilitating their achievement.

- Differences between Leadership and Power:
  - Goal compatibility:
    - a. Power does not require goal compatibility, merely dependence.
    - b. Leadership, on the other hand, requires some congruence between the goals of the leader and those being led.
  - The direction of influence:
    - a. Leadership focuses on the downward influence on one's followers.
    - b. Leadership research, for the most part, emphasizes style.
    - c. Power does not minimize the importance of lateral and upward influence patterns.
    - d. The research on power has tended to encompass a broader area and focus on tactics for gaining compliance.

Dependency: The Key to Power

The General Dependency Postulate:

- The greater B's dependency on A, the greater the power A has over B.
  - a. When you possess anything that others require but that you alone control, you make them dependent upon you and, therefore, you gain power over them.
- Dependency, then, is inversely proportional to the alternative sources of supply.
  - a. This is why most organizations develop multiple suppliers rather than using just one.
  - b. It also explains why so many of us aspire to financial independence.

What Creates Dependency?

- Importance
  - a. To create dependency, the thing(s) you control must be perceived as being important.
  - b. Organizations actively seek to avoid uncertainty.
  - c. Therefore, those individuals or groups who can absorb an organization's uncertainty will be perceived as controlling an important resource.
- Scarcity
  - a. A resource needs to be perceived as scarce to create dependency.
  - b. Low-ranking members in an organization who have important knowledge not available to high-ranking members gain power over the high-ranking members.
  - c. The scarcity-dependency relationship can further be seen in the power of occupational categories.
  - d. Individuals in occupations in which the supply of personnel is low relative to demand can negotiate compensation and benefit packages, which are far more attractive than can those in occupations where there is an abundance of candidates.

Political Behavior in Organizations

Many definitions focus on the use of power to affect decision making in the organization or on behaviors by members that are self-serving and organizationally non-sanctioned. We shall define political behavior in organizations as those activities that are not required as part of one's formal role in the organization but that influence, or attempt to influence, the distribution of advantages and disadvantages within the organization.

Politics is a fact of life in organizations because organizations are made up of individuals and groups with different values, goals, and interests. This sets up the potential for conflict over resources. Resources in organizations are also limited, which often turns potential conflict into real conflict. Also, gains by one individual or group are often perceived as being at the expense of others within the organization. These forces create a competition among members for the organization's limited resources. Finally, the realization that most of the "facts" that are used to allocate the limited resources are open to interpretation creates political behavior. Because most decisions have to be made in a climate of ambiguity, where facts are rarely fully objective, and thus are open to interpretation, people within organizations will use whatever influence they can to taint the facts to support their goals and interests.

Information and Power

- Control over information flow
  - Based on legitimate power
  - Relates to formal communication network
  - Common in centralized structures (wheel pattern)
- Coping with uncertainty
  - Those who know how to cope with organizational uncertainties gain power

- Prevention
- Forecasting
- Absorption

Managing Political Behavior

- Maintain open communication
- Clarify performance expectations
- Use participative management
- Encourage cooperation among work groups
- Manage scarce resources well
- Provide a supportive organizational climate

Lesson 25

POWER AND POLITICS*Overview

Understanding and managing power, politics, and conflict is an integral part of a manager's job. Organizations are composed of people who come together to achieve their common goals. When resources are scarce, people and groups have to compete for them, and some achieve their goals while others do not. In an organization, managers have the primary responsibility to ensure that competition for resources is free and fair and that people who obtain power over resources do so because they possess skills and abilities that will, in the long run, benefit all members of the organization. Managers also have the responsibility to manage conflicts as they arise to ensure the long-term success of the organization and to maintain a balance of power to ensure that politics and conflict benefit rather than harm the organization.

- ☞ Power is the ability of one person or group to cause another person or group to do something they otherwise might not have done. Politics are activities in which managers engage to increase their power and to pursue goals that favor their individual and group interests. Power and politics can benefit or harm an organization.
- ☞ Sources of formal individual power include legitimate power, reward power, coercive power, and information power. Sources of informal individual power include expert power, referent power, and charismatic power.
- ☞ Sources of functional and divisional power include the ability to control uncertain contingencies, irreplaceability, centrality and the ability to control and generate resources.
- ☞ Managers can use many kinds of political tactics to increase their individual power. These tactics include making oneself irreplaceable and central, controlling contingencies and resources, recognizing who has power, controlling the agenda, bringing in an outside expert, and building coalitions and alliances. Managing politics to obtain its positive effects requires a balance of power in an organization and a strong CEO who has the ability to keep powerful people and groups in check.
- ☞ Conflict is the struggle that arises when the goal-directed behavior of another person or group. Whether conflict benefits or harms an organization depends on how it is managed.
- ☞ The three main sources of conflict are differentiation, task relationships, and the scarcity of resources. When conflict occurs, it typically moves through a series of stages. In Pondy's model of conflict, these stages are latent conflict, perceived conflict, felt conflict, manifest conflict, and the conflict aftermath.
- ☞ Various techniques are available to manage conflict. Conflict management techniques can be used at the individual, group, and organizational levels.

Contingency Variables that Influence Use of Power Tactics

- Manager
  - Personality
  - Relative Power
  - Objectives for wanting to influence
- Employee
  - Perception of employee's willingness and ability to comply
- Organization Culture

Examples: Power & its Use in Organizations

- Different forms of harassment
- Political behavior
- Groups & coalitions
- Impression management
- Ethics and Power

Political Behavior in Organizations

- There is very strong evidence indicating that perceptions of organizational politics are negatively related to job satisfaction.
- The perception of politics leads to anxiety or stress. When it get too much to handle, employees quit.
- It is a de-motivating force and performance may suffer as a result.
- The effect of politics is moderated by the knowledge the individual has of the decision making system and his/her political skills:
- High political skills individuals often have improved performance.
- Low political skills individuals often respond with defensive behaviors—reactive and protective behaviors to avoid action, change, or blame.
- Reaction to organizational politics is also moderated by culture. In countries that are more unstable politically, workers will tolerate higher levels of politicking that more politically stable counties.

Organizational Politics - the use of power and influence in organizations

Political Behavior - actions not officially sanctioned by an organization that are taken to influence others in order to meet one's personal goals

Power and politics relationship

Both are used to affect decision making in the organization or behaviors by members. Political behavior is dependent on having some type of power, or it can be a way to circumvent the lack of organizational power. It encompasses efforts to influence the goals, criteria, or processes used for decision-making. It includes such varied political behaviors as withholding key information from decision makers, whistle blowing, spreading rumors, leaking confidential information about organizational activities to the media, exchanging favors with others in the organization for mutual benefit, and lobbying on behalf of or against a particular individual or decision alternative. Both also have a "legitimate-illegitimate" dimension. Legitimate political behavior refers to normal everyday politics. There are also illegitimate political behaviors that violate the implied rules of the game.

- Leaders use power as a means of attaining group goals.
- Leaders achieve goals, and power is a means of facilitating their achievement.
- Power does not require goal compatibility, merely dependence.
- Leadership, on the other hand, requires some congruence between the goals of the leader and those being led.
- Leadership focuses on the downward influence on one's followers.

- Leadership research, for the most part, emphasizes style.

Power does not minimize the importance of lateral and upward influence patterns.

“Playing Politics” in an Organization

- Game Playing
  - Political behavior in organizations has been described by many researchers in terms of game playing.
- Political Influence Tactics
  - Individuals and groups engage in political behavior in order to influence the perceptions or behavior of other individuals and groups.

Impression Management

This is the process by which individuals attempt to control the impression others form of them. We know that people have an ongoing interest in how others perceive and evaluate them. Being perceived positively by others should have benefits for people in organizations.

Who engages in IM—the high self-monitor. Low self-monitors tend to present images of themselves that are consistent with their personalities regardless of the beneficial or detrimental effects for them. High self-monitors are good at reading situations and molding their appearances and behavior to fit each situation.

The process by which individuals attempt to control the impression others form of them

- We know that people have an ongoing interest in how others perceive and evaluate them.
- Being perceived positively by others should have benefits for people in organizations.
- Who engages in IM—the high self-monitor
- Low self-monitors tend to present images of themselves that are consistent with their personalities, regardless of the beneficial or detrimental effects for them.
- High self-monitors are good at reading situations and molding their appearances and behavior to fit each situation.
- IM does not imply that the impressions people convey are necessarily false.
- Excuses and acclaiming, for instance, may be offered with sincerity.
- You can actually believe that ads contribute little to sales in your region or that you are the key to the tripling of your division’s sales.
- Misrepresentation can have a high cost. If the image claimed is false, you may be discredited.
- Situations that are characterized by high uncertainty or ambiguity that provide relatively little information for challenging a fraudulent claim increase the likelihood of individuals misrepresenting themselves.
- Only a limited number of studies have been undertaken to test the effectiveness of IM techniques.
- These have been essentially limited to job interview success.
- The evidence is that IM behavior works.
- In one study, interviewers felt that those applicants for a position as a customer service representative who used IM techniques performed better in the interview, and the interviewers seemed somewhat more inclined to hire these people. When the applicants’ credentials were also considered, it was apparent that the IM techniques alone that influenced the interviewers.
- Another employment interview study looked at which IM techniques worked best.
- The researchers compared IM techniques that focused the conversation on themselves (called a controlling style) with techniques that focused on the interviewer (referred to as a submissive style).

- Those applicants who used the controlling style were rated higher by interviewers on factors such as motivation, enthusiasm, and even technical skills, and they received more job offers.
- A more recent study confirmed the value of a controlling style.

Political Tactics

Managers can use many kinds of political tactics to increase their individual power. These tactics include making oneself irreplaceable and central, controlling contingencies and resources, recognizing who has power, controlling the agenda, bringing in an outside expert, and building coalitions and alliances. Managing politics to obtain its positive effects requires a balance of power in an organization and a strong CEO who has the ability to keep powerful people and groups in check.

- Decision making processes
  - Selectively emphasize decision alternatives
  - Influence decision process in favor of self or work unit
- Control the decision making agenda: often done when person does not want change
- Build coalitions
  - Form around people inside and outside the organization
  - Those believed important to person's position
- Co-optation: get support by putting possible opponents on a task force or advisory board
- Attacking or blaming others
- Using information as a political tool
- Creating a favorable image (impression management)
- Developing a base of support
- Praising others (ingratiation)
- Forming political coalitions with strong allies
- Associating with influential people
- Creating obligations (reciprocity)

Political strategy

- Plan to reach a goal using specific political tactics
- Goal: organizational or personal
- Specifies combinations and sequences of political tactics
- Includes plan for responding to changes in the political context
- People at all levels can develop and use a political strategy
- Not written; usually tacit
  - Used in
    - Resource allocation
    - Choice of senior managers
    - Career decisions
    - Performance appraisals
    - Pay increase decisions

Individual Factors Which Contribute to Political Behavior

- Level of self monitoring
- Need for power
- Internal locus of control
- Investment in the organization
- Perceived alternatives
- Expectations of success

Organizational Factors Which Contribute to Political Behavior

Types of organizational politics

Managing Organizational Politics

- Reduce System Uncertainty
- Reduce Competition
- Break Existing Political Fiefdoms

Organizational politics should support organizational interests, not individual interests. The CEO possesses legitimate power over all other managers and has primary responsibility for managing politics and controlling political contests. The CEO must balance power to avoid power struggles that distract the organization from achieving goals. With a balance of power, no manager or coalition becomes strong enough to threaten organizational interests.

Managing Political Behavior

- Maintain open communication
- Clarify performance expectations
- Use participative management
- Encourage cooperation among work groups
- Manage scarce resources well
- Provide a supportive organizational climate

Organizational Factors Which Contribute to Political Behavior

- Low trust
- Democratic decision making
- High performance pressures
- Scarcity of resources
- Role ambiguity
- Self-serving senior managers
- Unclear evaluation systems
- Zero-sum allocations

Managing Political Behavior

Lesson 26

CONFLICT AND NEGOTIATION*Overview

Many people automatically assume that conflict is related to lower group and organizational performance. This chapter has demonstrated that this assumption is frequently incorrect. Conflict can be either constructive or destructive to the functioning of a group or unit. Levels of conflict can be either too high or too low. Either extreme hinders performance. An optimal level is where there is enough conflict to prevent stagnation, stimulate creativity, allow tensions to be released, and initiate the seeds for change, yet not so much as to be disruptive or deter coordination of activities.

Inadequate or excessive levels of conflict can hinder the effectiveness of a group or an organization, resulting in reduced satisfaction of group members, increased absence and turnover rates, and, eventually, lower productivity. On the other hand, when conflict is at an optimal level, complacency and apathy should be minimized, motivation should be enhanced through the creation of a challenging and questioning environment with a vitality that makes work interesting, and there should be the amount of turnover needed to rid the organization of misfits and poor performers.

What advice can we give managers faced with excessive conflict and the need to reduce it? Do not assume there is one conflict-handling intention that will always be best! You should select an intention appropriate for the situation. The following provides some guidelines:

- ☞ Use competition when quick, decisive action is vital (in emergencies); on important issues, where unpopular actions need implementing (in cost cutting, enforcing unpopular rules, discipline); on issues vital to the organization's welfare when you know you are right; and against people who take advantage of noncompetitive behavior.
- ☞ Use collaboration to find an integrative solution when both sets of concerns are too important to be compromised; when your objective is to learn; to merge insights from people with different perspectives; to gain commitment by incorporating concerns into a consensus; and to work through feelings that have interfered with a relationship.
- ☞ Use avoidance when an issue is trivial, or more important issues are pressing; when you perceive no chance of satisfying your concerns; when potential disruption outweighs the benefits of resolution; to let people cool down and regain perspective; when gathering information supersedes immediate decision; when others can resolve the conflict more effectively; and when issues seem tangential or symptomatic of other issues.
- ☞ Use accommodation when you find you are wrong and to allow a better position to be heard, to learn, and to show your reasonableness; when issues are more important to others than yourself and to satisfy others and maintain cooperation; to build social credits for later issues; to minimize loss when you are outmatched and losing; when harmony and stability are especially important; and to allow employees to develop by learning from mistakes.
- ☞ Use compromise when goals are important but not worth the effort of potential disruption of more assertive approaches; when opponents with equal power are committed to mutually exclusive goals; to achieve temporary settlements to complex issues; to arrive at expedient solutions under time pressure; and as a backup when collaboration or competition is unsuccessful.

Conflict

The process in which one party perceives that its interests are being opposed or negatively affected by another party

"A process which begins when one party perceives that the other is frustrated, or is about to frustrate, some concern of his (or her)"

- Perceived by the parties
- Parties are in opposition to one another
- At least one party is blocking the goal attainment of the other party
- Goals can be tangible or psychological
  - Money
  - Task Achievement
  - Happiness

Types of Conflict

- Task conflict
Conflict over content and goals of the work
- Relationship conflict
Conflict based on interpersonal relationships
- Process conflict
Conflict over how work gets done

Nature of Organizational Conflict

Conflict - any situation in which incompatible goals, attitudes, emotions, or behaviors lead to disagreement or opposition between two or more parties

- Functional Conflict - a healthy, constructive disagreement between two or more people
- Dysfunctional Conflict - an unhealthy, destructive disagreement between two or more people.

Forms of Conflict in Organizations

Interorganizational Conflict - conflict that occurs between two or more organizations

Intergroup Conflict - conflict that occurs between groups or teams in an organization

Interpersonal Conflict - conflict that occurs between two or more individuals

Intrapersonal Conflict - conflict that occurs within an individual

Interrole Conflict - a person's experience of conflict among the multiple roles in his/her life

Intrarole Conflict - conflict that occurs within a single role, such as when a person receives conflicting messages from role senders about how to perform a certain role

Person-role Conflict - conflict that occurs when an individual is expected to perform behaviors in a certain role that conflict with his/her personal values

First is the presence of conditions that create opportunities for conflict to arise. Three general categories: communication, structure, and personal variables

1. Communication

- Communication as a source of conflict represents those opposing forces that arise from semantic difficulties, misunderstandings, and "noise" in the communication channels.

- Differing word connotations, jargon, insufficient exchange of information, and noise in the communication channel are all barriers to communication and potential antecedents to conflict.
- Semantic difficulties are a result of differences in training, selective perception, and inadequate information.
- The potential for conflict increases when either too little or too much communication takes place.
- The channel chosen for communicating can have an influence on stimulating opposition

2. Structure

The term structure includes variables such as size, degree of specialization, jurisdictional clarity, member-goal compatibility, leadership styles, reward systems, and the degree of dependence.

- Size and specialization act as forces to stimulate conflict. The larger the group and more specialized its activities, the greater the likelihood of conflict.
- The potential for conflict is greatest where group members are younger and turnover is high.
- The greater the ambiguity in responsibility for actions lies, the greater the potential for conflict.
- The diversity of goals among groups is a major source of conflict.
- A close style of leadership increases conflict potential.
- Too much reliance on participation may also stimulate conflict.
- Reward systems, too, are found to create conflict when one member's gain is at another's expense.
- Finally, if a group is dependent on another group, opposing forces are stimulated.

3. Personal variables

- Include individual value systems and personality characteristics. Certain personality types lead to potential conflict.
- Most important is differing value systems. Value differences are the best explanation for differences of opinion on various matters.

B. Stage II: Cognition and Personalization

- Antecedent conditions lead to conflict only when the parties are affected by and aware of it.
- Conflict is personalized when it is felt and when individuals become emotionally involved.
- This stage is where conflict issues tend to be defined and this definition delineates the possible settlements.
- Second, emotions play a major role in shaping perceptions.
- Negative emotions produce oversimplification of issues, reductions in trust, and negative interpretations of the other party's behavior.
- Positive feelings increase the tendency to see potential relationships among the elements of a problem, to take a broader view of the situation, and to develop more innovative solutions.

C. Stage III: Intentions

- Intentions are decisions to act in a given way.
- Why are intentions separated out as a distinct stage? Merely one party attributing the wrong intentions to the other escalates a lot of conflicts.
- One author's effort to identify the primary conflict-handling intentions is represented.
- Cooperativeness—"the degree to which one party attempts to satisfy the other party's concerns."

- Assertiveness—“the degree to which one party attempts to satisfy his or her own concerns.”

Five conflict-handling intentions can be identified as:

- Competing: When one person seeks to satisfy his or her own interests, regardless of the impact on the other parties to the conflict
- Collaborating: When the parties to conflict each desire to fully satisfy the concerns of all parties. The intention is to solve the problem by clarifying differences rather than by accommodating.
- Avoiding: A person may recognize that a conflict exists and want to withdraw from it or suppress it.
- Accommodating: When one party seeks to appease an opponent, that party is willing to be self-sacrificing.
- Compromising: When each party to the conflict seeks to give up something, sharing occurs, resulting in a compromised outcome. There is no clear winner or loser, and the solution provides incomplete satisfaction of both parties' concerns.

Intentions provide general guidelines for parties in a conflict situation. They define each party's purpose, but they are not fixed. They might change because of re-conceptualization or because of an emotional reaction. However, individuals have preferences among the five conflict-handling intentions. It may be more appropriate to view the five conflict-handling intentions as relatively fixed rather than as a set of options from which individuals choose to fit an appropriate situation.

D. Stage IV: Behavior

- Stage IV is where conflicts become visible. The behavior stage includes the statements, actions, and reactions made by the conflicting parties. These conflict behaviors are usually overt attempts to implement each party's intentions.
- Stage IV is a dynamic process of interaction; conflicts exist somewhere along a continuum.
- At the lower part of the continuum, conflicts are characterized by subtle, indirect, and highly controlled forms of tension.
- Conflict intensities escalate as they move upward along the continuum until they become highly destructive.
- Functional conflicts are typically confined to the lower range of the continuum.

E. Stage V: Outcomes

Outcomes may be functional—improving group performance, or dysfunctional in hindering it.

- Functional outcomes
- How might conflict act as a force to increase group performance?
- Conflict is constructive when it:
  - a. Improves the quality of decisions.
  - b. Stimulates creativity and innovation.
  - c. Encourages interest and curiosity.
  - d. Provides the medium through which problems can be aired and tensions released.
  - e. Fosters an environment of self-evaluation and change.
- The evidence suggests that conflict can improve the quality of decision-making.
- Conflict is an antidote for groupthink.
- Conflict challenges the status quo, furthers the creation of new ideas, promotes reassessment of group goals and activities, and increases the probability that the group will respond to change.
- Research studies in diverse settings confirm the functionality of conflict.

- a. The comparison of six major decisions made during the administration of four different US presidents found that conflict reduced the chance of groupthink.
- b. When groups analyzed decisions that had been made by the individual members of that group, the average improvement among the high-conflict groups was 73 percent greater than was that of those groups characterized by low-conflict conditions.
- Increasing cultural diversity of the workforce should provide benefits to organizations.
  - a. Heterogeneity among group and organization members can increase creativity, improve the quality of decisions, and facilitate change by enhancing member flexibility.
  - b. The ethnically diverse groups produced more effective and more feasible ideas and higher quality, unique ideas than those produced by the all-Anglo group.
- Similarly, studies of professionals—systems analysts and research and development scientists—support the constructive value of conflict.
  - a. An investigation of 22 teams of systems analysts found that the more incompatible groups were likely to be more productive.
  - b. Research and development scientists have been found to be most productive where there is a certain amount of intellectual conflict.

Transitions in Conflict Thought

- 1) The traditional view of conflict argues that it must be avoided—it indicates a malfunctioning with the group.
- 2) The human relations view argues that conflict is a natural and inevitable outcome in any group and that it need not be evil, but has the potential to be a positive force in determining group performance.
- 3) The inter-actionist approach proposes that conflict can be a positive force in a group but explicitly argues that some conflict is absolutely necessary for a group to perform effectively.
- 4) This early approach assumed that all conflict was bad. Conflict was synonymous with such terms that reinforced its negative connotation. By definition, it was harmful and was to be avoided.
- 5) This view was consistent with the prevailing attitudes about group behavior in the 1930s and 1940s. Conflict was seen as a dysfunctional outcome resulting from poor communication, a lack of openness and trust between people, and the failure of managers to be responsive to their employees.

Functional vs. Dysfunctional Conflict

1. Not all conflicts are good. Functional, constructive forms of conflict support the goals of the group and improve its performance. Conflicts that hinder group performance are dysfunctional or destructive forms of conflict.
2. What differentiates functional from dysfunctional conflict? You need to look at the type of conflict.
3. Task conflict relates to the content and goals of the work. Low-to-moderate levels of task conflict are functional and consistently demonstrate a positive effect on group performance because it stimulates discussion, improving group performance.
  - Relationship conflict focuses on interpersonal relationships.
    - a. These conflicts are almost always dysfunctional.
    - b. The friction and interpersonal hostilities inherent in relationship conflicts increase personality clashes and decrease mutual understanding.
  - Process conflict relates to how the work gets done.
    - a. Low-levels of process conflict are functional and could enhance team performance.
    - b. For process conflict to be productive, it must be kept low.
    - c. Intense arguments create uncertainty.

Causes of conflict

- Vertical conflict.
  - Occurs between hierarchical levels.
- Horizontal conflict.

- Occurs between persons or groups at the same hierarchical level.
- Line-staff conflict.
  - Involves disagreements over who has authority and control over specific matters.

How can conflict be managed successfully?

Pondy's model suggests several methods to resolve conflicts. In collaboration, each side works toward a solution to satisfy its own goals plus the goals of the other side—both parties are better off after conflict resolution. In compromise, both parties negotiate to reach a mutually acceptable solution, but not necessarily one that achieves their goals

A primary responsibility of managers is to help subordinates resolve their disputes. Some managers spend much time managing conflict. Several techniques are helpful in managing conflict so that it results in functional rather than dysfunctional outcomes. These techniques concern changing attitudes and behaviors, changing task relationships, and changing the organizational structure or situation.

Individual-Level Conflict Management

Education and training helps resolve conflict. Sensitivity training or diversity awareness programs help employees appreciate different attitudes.

Job rotation and temporary assignments in other departments help people see another perspective. Promotions, transfers, and firings remove individuals from conflict situation.

Group-Level Conflict Management

At the group level, physically separating groups or changing task relationships means they no longer interact. Contact between groups occurs through people with integrating roles. Managers develop rules, procedures, and common goals to coordinate group activities.

These methods temporarily resolve a conflict because the underlying causes are not addressed. Many organizations resolve conflict at its source, through individual-level conflict management techniques or letting the groups to work out a joint solution.

Negotiation is a process in which groups with conflicting interests meet to make offers, counteroffers, and concessions to resolve differences. Negotiations may include a third-party negotiator—an outsider skilled in handling bargaining and negotiation—who helps find a solution.

The third party acts as a mediator, taking a neutral stance and helping parties reconcile their differences. If no solution is reached, the third party acts as an arbiter, or judge, imposing a solution.

Two processes occur in any negotiation situation: (1) distributive bargaining, in which parties decide how resources are distributed, and (2) attitudinal structuring, in which parties try to influence their opponent's attitudes, perhaps appearing aggressive to increase their resource share or by appearing conciliatory to preserve a relationship.

Negotiation and bargaining are difficult processes in which a lot of give-and-take and posturing occurs. The process usually takes several months because the parties discover what they can and cannot get.

Organizational-Level Conflict Management

Conflict can be managed by changing the organization's structure and culture to lessen conflict. Managers can clarify task and reporting relationships, change differentiation (e.g., move from a functional to divisional structure), increase integration, or use culture to create values and norms shared by people in different functions and divisions. These methods eliminating some conflict and increasing communication.

Although conflict can never be eliminated, conflict management techniques directed toward the individual, group, and organizational levels make conflict more functional.

The issue of “who wins?”

- Lose-lose conflict.
  - Occurs when nobody gets what he or she wants.
  - Avoidance, accommodation or smoothing, and compromise are forms of lose-lose conflict.
- Win-lose conflict.
  - One part achieves its desires at the expense and to the exclusion of the other party's desires.
  - Competition and authoritative command are forms of win-lose conflict.
- Win-win conflict.
  - Both parties achieve their desires.
  - Collaboration or problem solving are forms of win-win conflict.

Lesson 27

CONFLICT AND NEGOTIATION*Overview

Many people automatically assume that conflict is related to lower group and organizational performance. This chapter has demonstrated that this assumption is frequently incorrect. Conflict can be either constructive or destructive to the functioning of a group or unit. As shown in Exhibit 14-8, levels of conflict can be either too high or too low. Either extreme hinders performance. An optimal level is where there is enough conflict to prevent stagnation, stimulate creativity, allow tensions to be released, and initiate the seeds for change, yet not so much as to be disruptive or deter coordination of activities.

Inadequate or excessive levels of conflict can hinder the effectiveness of a group or an organization, resulting in reduced satisfaction of group members, increased absence and turnover rates, and, eventually, lower productivity. On the other hand, when conflict is at an optimal level, complacency and apathy should be minimized, motivation should be enhanced through the creation of a challenging and questioning environment with a vitality that makes work interesting, and there should be the amount of turnover needed to rid the organization of misfits and poor performers.

What advice can we give managers faced with excessive conflict and the need to reduce it? Do not assume there is one conflict-handling intention that will always be best! You should select an intention appropriate for the situation. The following provides some guidelines:

- ☞ Use competition when quick, decisive action is vital (in emergencies); on important issues, where unpopular actions need implementing (in cost cutting, enforcing unpopular rules, discipline); on issues vital to the organization's welfare when you know you are right; and against people who take advantage of noncompetitive behavior.
- ☞ Use collaboration to find an integrative solution when both sets of concerns are too important to be compromised; when your objective is to learn; to merge insights from people with different perspectives; to gain commitment by incorporating concerns into a consensus; and to work through feelings that have interfered with a relationship.
- ☞ Use avoidance when an issue is trivial, or more important issues are pressing; when you perceive no chance of satisfying your concerns; when potential disruption outweighs the benefits of resolution; to let people cool down and regain perspective; when gathering information supersedes immediate decision; when others can resolve the conflict more effectively; and when issues seem tangential or symptomatic of other issues.
- ☞ Use accommodation when you find you are wrong and to allow a better position to be heard, to learn, and to show your reasonableness; when issues are more important to others than yourself and to satisfy others and maintain cooperation; to build social credits for later issues; to minimize loss when you are outmatched and losing; when harmony and stability are especially important; and to allow employees to develop by learning from mistakes.
- ☞ Use compromise when goals are important but not worth the effort of potential disruption of more assertive approaches; when opponents with equal power are committed to mutually exclusive goals; to achieve temporary settlements to complex issues; to arrive at expedient solutions under time pressure; and as a backup when collaboration or competition is unsuccessful.

Definition - Conflict

"a process which begins when one party perceives that the other is frustrated, or is about to frustrate, some concern of his (or her).

- Perceived by the parties

- Parties are in opposition to one another
- At least one party is blocking the goal attainment of the other party
- Goals can be tangible or psychological

–Money

–Task Achievement

–Happiness

Types of Conflict

Task conflict

Conflict over content and goals of the work

Relationship conflict

Conflict based on interpersonal relationships

Process conflict

Conflict over how work gets done

Sources of conflict

- Organizational hierarchy
- Competition for scarce resources
- Self-image & stereotypical views of others
- Differing goals & objectives
- Failures & resultant blame fixing
- Poor coordination of activities

Conflict Management Styles

Avoiding - deliberate decision to take no action on a conflict or to stay out of a conflict

Accommodating - concern that the other party's goals be met but relatively unconcerned with getting own way

Competing - satisfying own interests; willing to do so at other party's expense

Compromising - each party gives up something to reach a solution

Collaborating - arriving at a solution agreeable to all through open & thorough discussion

What is negotiation?

1. Negotiation is a "process in which two or more parties exchange goods or services and attempt to agree upon the exchange rate for them." We use the terms negotiation and bargaining interchangeably.
2. Negotiation permeates the interactions of almost everyone in groups and organizations. For example, labor bargains with management.
3. Not so obvious, however,
  - a. Managers negotiate with employees, peers, and bosses.
  - b. Salespeople negotiate with customers.

- c. Purchasing agents negotiate with suppliers.

A worker agrees to answer a colleague's phone for a few minutes in exchange for some past or future benefit.

Negotiation - a joint process of finding a mutually acceptable solution to a complex conflict

Useful under these conditions

- Two or more parties
- Conflict of interest between the parties
- Parties are willing to negotiate
- Parties prefer to work together rather than to fight openly, give in, break off contact, or take the dispute to a higher authority

Approaches to Negotiation

1. There are two general approaches to negotiation: distributive bargaining and integrative bargaining.

2. Distributive bargaining

- An example of distributive bargaining is buying a car:
  - a. You go out to see the car. It is great and you want it.
  - b. The owner tells you the asking price. You do not want to pay that much.
  - c. The two of you then negotiate over the price.
- Its most identifying feature is that it operates under zero-sum conditions. Any gain I make is at your expense, and vice versa.
- The most widely cited example of distributive bargaining is in labor-management negotiations over wages.
  - a. Parties A and B represent two negotiators.
  - b. Each has a target point that defines what he or she would like to achieve.
  - c. Each also has a resistance point, which marks the lowest outcome that is acceptable.
  - d. The area between these two points makes up each one's aspiration range.

As long as there is some overlap between A and B's aspiration ranges, there exists a settlement range where each one's aspirations can be met.

- When engaged in distributive bargaining, one's tactics focus on trying to get one's opponent to agree to one's specific target point or to get as close to it as possible.

Integrative bargaining

- An example: A sales rep calls in the order and is told that the firm cannot approve credit to this customer because of a past slow-pay record.
  - a. The next day, the sales rep and the firm's credit manager meet to discuss the problem. They want to make the sale, but do not want to get stuck with uncollectable debt.
  - b. The two openly review their options.
  - c. After considerable discussion, they agree on a solution that meets both their needs. The sale will go through with a bank guarantee that will ensure payment if not made in 60 days.
- This example operates under the assumption that there exists one or more settlements that can create a win-win solution.
- In terms of intra-organizational behavior, all things being equal, integrative bargaining is preferable to distributive bargaining.
- Because integrative bargaining builds long-term relationships and facilitates working together in the future, it bonds negotiators and allows each to leave the bargaining table feeling victorious.
- Distributive bargaining, on the other hand, leaves one party a loser. It tends to build animosities and deepens divisions.
- Why do we not see more integrative bargaining in organizations? The answer lies in the conditions necessary for this type of negotiation to succeed.

- a. Parties who are open with information and candid about their concerns
- b. A sensitivity by both parties to the other's needs
- c. The ability to trust one another
- d. A willingness by both parties to maintain flexibility

The Process of Negotiation

1. Preparation and planning:

- Do your homework. What is the nature of the conflict? What is the history leading up to this negotiation? Who is involved, and what are their perceptions of the conflict? What do you want from the negotiation? What are your goals?
- You also want to prepare an assessment of what you think the other party to your negotiation's goals are.
  - a. When you can anticipate your opponent's position, you are better equipped to counter his or her arguments with the facts and figures that support your position.
- Once you have gathered your information, use it to develop a strategy.
- Determine your and the other side's Best Alternative To a Negotiated Agreement (BATNA).
  - a. Your BATNA determines the lowest value acceptable to you for a negotiated agreement.
  - b. Any offer you receive that is higher than your BATNA is better than an impasse.

2. Definition of ground rules:

- Who will do the negotiating? Where will it take place? What time constraints, if any, will apply?
- To what issues will negotiation be limited? Will there be a specific procedure to follow if an impasse is reached?
- During this phase, the parties will also exchange their initial proposals or demands.

3. Clarification and justification:

- When initial positions have been exchanged, explain, amplify, clarify, bolster, and justify your original demands
- This need not be confrontational.
- You might want to provide the other party with any documentation that helps support your position.

4. Bargaining and problem solving:

- The essence of the negotiation process is the actual give and take in trying to hash out an agreement.
- Concessions will undoubtedly need to be made by both parties.

5. Closure and implementation:

- The final step—formalizing the agreement that has been worked out and developing any procedures that are necessary for implementation and monitoring
- Major negotiations will require hammering out the specifics in a formal contract.
- For most cases, however, closure of the negotiation process is nothing more formal than a handshake.

Mapping the Negotiation

- Describe the problem of the negotiation
- Identify the people involved
- Use empathy to analyze the situation
- Record participants' needs and fears about the problem

Conducting the Negotiation

- Use an appropriate negotiation style
- Use suitable language
- Use effective responding and listening techniques
- Identify needs and wants
- Set up the negotiation
- Create the non-verbal environment
- Start the negotiation
- Deal with conflict during the negotiation
- Achieve a negotiated outcome

Third-party negotiations

- When individuals or group representatives reach a stalemate and are unable to resolve their differences through direct negotiations, they may turn to a third party.
- A mediator is a neutral third party who facilitates a negotiated solution by using reasoning and persuasion, suggesting alternatives, and the like.
  - a. They are widely used in labor-management negotiations and in civil court disputes.
  - b. Their settlement rate is approximately 60 percent, with negotiator satisfaction at about 75 percent.
  - c. The key to success—the conflicting parties must be motivated to bargain and resolve their conflict, intensity cannot be too high, and the mediator must be perceived as neutral and no coercive.

Issues in Negotiation

The role of personality traits in negotiation

- Can you predict an opponent's negotiating tactics if you know something about his/her personality? The evidence says no.
- Overall assessments of the personality-negotiation relationship finds that personality traits have no significant direct effect on either the bargaining process or negotiation outcomes.

Gender differences in negotiations

- Men and women do not negotiate differently.
- A popular stereotype is that women are more cooperative, pleasant, and relationship-oriented in negotiations than are men. The evidence does not support this.
- Comparisons between experienced male and female managers find women are:
  - a. Neither worse nor better negotiators.
  - b. Neither more cooperative nor open to the other.
    - b. Neither more nor less persuasive nor threatening than are men.
- The belief that women are “nicer” is probably due to confusing gender and the lack of power typically held by women.
  - a. Low-power managers, regardless of gender, attempt to placate their opponents and to use softly persuasive tactics rather than direct confrontation and threats.
- Women's attitudes toward negotiation and toward themselves appear to be different from men's.
  - a. Managerial women demonstrate less confidence in anticipation of negotiating and are less satisfied with their performance despite achieving similar outcomes as men.
  - b. Women may unduly penalize themselves by failing to engage in negotiations when such action would be in their best interests.

Cultural differences in negotiations

- Negotiating styles clearly vary across national cultures.
- The French like conflict.
  - a. They gain recognition and develop their reputations by thinking and acting against others.
  - b. They tend to take a long time in negotiating agreements, and they are not overly concerned about whether their opponents like or dislike them.
- The Chinese also draw out negotiations but that is because they believe negotiations never end.
  - a. Just when you think you have reached a final solution, the Chinese executive might smile and start the process all over again.
  - b. Like the Japanese, the Chinese negotiate to develop a relationship and a commitment to work together.
- Americans are known around the world for their impatience and their desire to be liked.
  - a. Astute negotiators often turn these characteristics to their advantage.

The cultural context of the negotiation significantly influences the amount and type of preparation for bargaining, the emphasis on task versus interpersonal relationships, the tactics used, etc.

A study compared North Americans, Arabs, and Russians negotiating style, how they responded to an opponent's arguments, their approach to making concessions, and how they handled negotiating deadlines.

- North Americans tried to persuade others by relying on facts and appealing to logic.
  - a. They made small concessions early in the negotiation to establish a relationship and usually reciprocated the opponent's concessions.
  - b. North Americans treated deadlines as very important.
- The Arabs tried to persuade by appealing to emotion.
  - a. They countered opponent's arguments with subjective feelings.
  - b. They made concessions throughout the bargaining process and almost always reciprocated opponents' concessions.
  - c. Arabs approached deadlines very casually.
- The Russians based their arguments on asserted ideals.
  - a. They made few, if any, concessions.
  - b. Any concession offered by an opponent was viewed as a weakness and almost never reciprocated.
  - c. Finally, the Russians tended to ignore deadlines.

A second study looked at verbal and nonverbal negotiation tactics exhibited by North Americans, Japanese, and Brazilians during half-hour bargaining sessions.

- Brazilians on average said "No" 83 times compared to five times for the Japanese and nine times for the North Americans.
- The Japanese displayed more than five periods of silence lasting longer than ten seconds during the 30-minute sessions.
- North Americans averaged 3.5 such periods; the Brazilians had none.
- The Japanese and North Americans interrupted their opponent about the same number of times, but the Brazilians interrupted 2.5 to 3 times more often.
- Finally, while the Japanese and the North Americans had no physical contact with their opponents during negotiations except for handshaking, the Brazilians touched each other almost five times every half-hour.

REVIEW OF PART-II

|-------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Group                        | Two or more freely interacting people with shared norms and goals and a common identity                                |
| Formal group                 | Formed by the organization                                                                                             |
| Informal group               | Formed by friends or those with common interests.                                                                      |
| Group Cohesiveness           | A "we feeling" binding group members together                                                                          |
| Roles                        | Expected behaviors for a given position.                                                                               |
| Role overload                | Others' expectations exceed one's ability                                                                              |
| Role conflict                | Others have conflicting or inconsistent expectations                                                                   |
| Role ambiguity               | Others' expectations are unknown                                                                                       |
| Norm                         | Shared attitudes, opinions, feelings, or actions that guide social behavior                                            |
| Task roles                   | Task-oriented group behavior.                                                                                          |
| Maintenance roles            | Relationship-building group behavior                                                                                   |
| Groupthink                   | Janis's term for a cohesive in-group's unwillingness to realistically view alternatives                                |
| Social loafing               | Decrease in individual effort as group size increases.                                                                 |
| Team                         | Small group with complementary skills who hold themselves mutually accountable for common purpose, goals, and approach |
| Team viability               | Team members satisfied and willing to contribute                                                                       |
| Trust                        | Reciprocal faith in others' intentions and behavior                                                                    |
| Propensity to trust          | A personality trait involving one's general willingness to trust others                                                |
| Cohesiveness                 | A sense of "wane" helps group stick together.                                                                          |
| Socio-emotional cohesiveness | Sense of togetherness based on emotional satisfaction.                                                                 |
| Instrumental cohesiveness    | Sense of togetherness based on mutual dependency needed to get the job done                                            |
| Quality circles              | Small groups of volunteers who strive to solve quality-related problems.                                               |
| Virtual team                 | Information technology allows group members in different locations to conduct business.                                |

|                                            |                                                                        |
|--------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Self-managed teams                  | Groups of employees granted administrative oversight for their work.   |
| Cross-functionalism                 | Team made up of technical specialists from different areas.            |
| Team building                       | Experiential learning aimed at better internal functioning of groups.  |
| Self-management leadership          | Process of leading others to lead themselves.                          |
| Communication                       | Interpersonal exchange of information and understanding                |
| Perceptual model of communication   | Process in which receivers create their own meaning.                   |
| Noise                               | Interference with the transmission and understanding of a message      |
| Communication competence            | Ability to effectively use communication behaviors in a given context. |
| Assertive style                     | Expressive and self enhancing, but does not take advantage of others.  |
| Aggressive style                    | Expressive and self enhancing, but takes unfair advantage of others.   |
| Nonassertive style                  | Timid and self denying behavior.                                       |
| Nonverbal communication             | Messages sent outside of the written or spoken word.                   |
| Listening                           | Actively decoding and interpreting verbal messages.                    |
| Linguistic style                    | A person's typical speaking pattern.                                   |
| Gender-flex                         | Temporarily using communication behaviors typical of the other gender. |

Lesson 30

FOUNDATIONS OF ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE*Overview

No other topic in management has undergone as much change in the past few years as that of organizing and organizational structure. Traditional approaches to organizing work are being questioned and reevaluated as managers search out structural designs that will best support and facilitate employees' doing the organization's work—ones that can achieve efficiency but also have the flexibility that's necessary for success in today's dynamic environment. Recall that organizing is defined as the process of creating an organization's structure. That process is important and serves many purposes. The challenge for managers is to design an organizational structure that allows employees to effectively and efficiently do their work. Just what is an organization's structure? An organizational structure is the formal framework by which job tasks are divided, grouped, and coordinated. When managers develop or change an organization's structure, they are engaged in organizational design, a process that involves decisions about six key elements: work specialization, departmentalization, chain of command, span of control, centralization and decentralization, and formalization.

Organizational Structure and Design*Organizational Structure

- The formal pattern of how people and jobs are grouped in an organization.

Organizational Design

- The decisions and actions that result in organizational structure.

Characteristics Common to All Organizations

What Determines Organizational Structure?

- To what degree are tasks subdivided into separate jobs?
- On what basis will jobs be grouped together?
- To whom do individuals and groups report?
- How many individuals can a manager efficiently and effectively direct?
- Where does decision-making authority lie?
- To what degree will there be rules and regulations to direct employees and managers?

The Basics of Organizational Structure

- Organizational structure defines how job tasks are formally divided, grouped, and coordinated.
- The organization chart is a visual representation of this division, grouping, and coordination.

Early in the twentieth century, Henry Ford used this concept in an assembly line where every Ford worker was assigned a specific, repetitive task. By breaking jobs into small standardized tasks, which could be performed over and over again, Ford was able to produce cars at the rate of one every 10 seconds, while using relatively low-skilled workers.

Today we use the term work specialization to describe the degree to which tasks in an organization are divided into separate jobs. The essence of work specialization is that an entire job is not done by one individual but instead is broken down into steps, and each step is completed by a different person. Individual employees specialize in doing part of an activity rather than the entire activity.

During the first half of the twentieth century, managers viewed work specialization as an unending source of increased productivity. And for a time it was! Because it wasn't widely used, when work specialization was implemented, employee productivity rose. By the 1960s, however, it had become evident that a good thing could be carried too far. The point had been reached in some jobs where human diseconomies from work specialization—boredom, fatigue, stress, poor quality, increased absenteeism, and higher turnover—more than offset the economic advantages. In such instances, worker productivity could be increased by enlarging, not narrowing, the scope of job activities. In addition, managers found that employees, who were given a variety of work to do, allow doing the activities necessary to complete a whole job, and put into teams with interchangeable skills often achieved significantly higher output with increased employee satisfaction.

Most managers today see work specialization as an important organizing mechanism but not as a source of ever-increasing productivity. They recognize the economies it provides in certain types of jobs, but they also recognize the problems it creates when it's carried to extremes.

Mechanistic types of organizational structures tend to be efficiency machines, well oiled by rules, regulations, standardized tasks, and similar controls. This organizational design tries to minimize the impact of differing personalities, judgments, and ambiguity because these human traits are seen as inefficient and inconsistent. Although no pure form of a mechanistic organization exists in reality, almost all large corporations and governmental agencies have at least some of these mechanistic characteristics.

In direct contrast to the mechanistic form of organization is the organic organization, which is as highly adaptive and flexible a structure as the mechanistic organization is rigid and stable. Rather than having standardized jobs and regulations, the organic organization is flexible, which allows it to change rapidly as needs require. Organic organizations have division of labor, but the jobs people do are not standardized. Employees are highly trained and empowered to handle diverse job activities and problems, and these organizations frequently use employee teams. Employees in organic-type organizations require minimal formal rules and little direct supervision. Their high levels of skills and training and the support provided by other team members make formalization and tight managerial controls unnecessary.

Mechanistic vs. Organic Models

The Mechanistic Model

- High specialization
- Rigid departmentalization
- Clear chain of command
- Narrow spans of control
- Centralization
- High formalization

The Organic Model

- Cross-functional teams
- Cross-hierarchical teams
- Free flow of information
- Wide spans of control
- Decentralization
- Low formalization

When is a mechanistic structure preferable and when is an organic one more appropriate? Let's look at the key contingency factors that influence the decision.

Organizational Structure

- How job tasks are formally divided, grouped and coordinated
- How parts of organization fit together to coordinate employees to achieve organizational goals.
- Formal structure shows the intended configuration of positions, job duties and the lines of authority among different parts of the enterprise.

Work Specialization

- The degree to which tasks in the organization are subdivided into separate jobs.

Departmentalization

- The basis by which jobs are grouped together.

Once jobs have been divided up through work specialization, they have to be grouped back together so that common tasks can be coordinated. The basis by which jobs are grouped together is called departmentalization. Every organization will have its own specific way of classifying and grouping work activities.

Functional departmentalization groups jobs by functions performed. This approach can be used in all types of organizations, although the functions change to reflect the organization's objectives and work activities. Product departmentalization groups jobs by product line. In this approach, each major product area is placed under the authority of a manager who's a specialist in, and is responsible for, everything having to do with that product line. Geographical departmentalization groups jobs on the basis of territory or geography such as southern, Midwestern, or northwestern regions for an organization operating only in the United States; or for a global company, maybe U.S., European, Canadian, and Asian-Pacific regions. Process departmentalization groups jobs on the basis of product or customer flow. In this approach, work activities follow a natural processing flow of products or even of customers. Finally, customer departmentalization groups jobs on the basis of common customers who have common needs or problems that can best be met by having specialists for each.

Large organizations often combine most or all of these forms of departmentalization. For example, a major Japanese electronics firm organizes each of its divisions along functional lines, its manufacturing units around processes, its sales units around seven geographic regions, and its sales regions into four customer groupings.

Two trends are currently popular regarding departmentalization. First, customer departmentalization is increasingly being used as an approach to better monitor customers' needs and to be better able to respond to changes in those needs. For example, L. L. Bean organized around a half-dozen customer groups on the basis of what customers generally purchased. This arrangement allowed the company to better understand its customers and to respond faster to their needs. Second, managers are using cross-functional teams, groups of individuals who are experts in various specialties and who work together. For instance, at Thermos Corporation (known worldwide for its beverage containers and lunch boxes) flexible interdisciplinary teams replaced the old tradition-bound functionally departmentalized structure. One of these teams—the Lifestyle Team—developed a new electric grill that has been extremely popular with consumers. This team of individuals from engineering, marketing, and manufacturing was involved in every aspect of bringing this winning product to market—from defining the target market, to defining the product, to working with manufacturing on a feasible design.

For many years, the chain-of-command concept was a cornerstone of organizational design. As you'll see, it has far less importance today. But contemporary managers still need to consider its implications when deciding how best to structure their organizations.

The chain of command is the continuous line of authority that extends from upper organizational levels to the lowest levels and clarifies who reports to whom. It helps employees answer questions such as "Who do I go to if I have a problem?" or "To whom am I responsible?"

You can't discuss the chain of command without discussing three other concepts: authority, responsibility, and unity of command. Authority refers to the rights inherent in a managerial position to tell people what to do and to expect them to do it. To facilitate decision making and coordination, an organization's managers are part of the chain of command and are granted a certain degree of authority to meet their responsibilities. As managers coordinate and integrate the work of employees, those employees assume an obligation to perform any assigned duties. This obligation or expectation to perform is known as responsibility. Finally, the unity of command principle (one of Fayol's 14 principles of management) helps preserve the concept of a continuous line of authority. It states that a person should report to only one manager. Without unity of command, conflicting demands and priorities from multiple bosses can create problems.

Early management theorists (Fayol, Weber, Taylor, and others) were enamored with the concepts of chain of command, authority, responsibility, and unity of command. However, times change and so do the basic tenets of organizational design. These concepts are considerably less relevant today because of information technology and employee empowerment. Employees throughout the organization can access information that used to be available only to top managers in a matter of a few seconds. Also, using computers, employees communicate with anyone else anywhere in the organization without going through formal channels—that is, the chain of command. Moreover, as employees are empowered to make decisions that previously were reserved for management, as more organizations use self-managed and cross-functional teams, and as new organizational designs with multiple bosses continue to be implemented, the traditional concepts of authority, responsibility, and chain of command are becoming less relevant.

How many employees can a manager efficiently and effectively manage? This question of span of control is important because, to a large degree, it determines the number of levels and managers an organization has. All things being equal, the wider or larger the span, the more efficient the organization. An example can show why.

Assume that we have two organizations, both of which have approximately 4,100 employees. As Exhibit 10.3 shows, if one organization has a uniform span of four and the other a span of eight, the wider span will have two fewer levels and approximately 800 fewer managers. If the average manager made $42,000 a year, the organization with the wider span would save over $33 million a year in management salaries alone! Obviously, wider spans are more efficient in terms of cost. However, at some point, wider spans reduce effectiveness. That is, when the span becomes too large, employee performance suffers because managers no longer have the time to provide the necessary leadership and support.

The contemporary view of span of control recognizes that many factors influence the appropriate number of employees that a manager can efficiently and effectively manage. These factors encompass the skills and abilities of the manager and the employees and characteristics of the work being done. For instance, the more training and experience employees have, the less direct supervision they'll need. Therefore, managers with well-trained and experienced employees can function quite well with a wider span. Other contingency variables that will determine the appropriate span include similarity of employee tasks, the complexity of those tasks, the physical proximity of subordinates, the degree to which standardized procedures are in place, the sophistication of the organization's information system, the strength of the organization's culture, and the preferred style of the manager.

The trend in recent years has been toward larger spans of control. Wide spans of control are consistent with managers' efforts to reduce costs, speed up decision making, increase flexibility, get closer to customers, and empower employees. However, to ensure that performance doesn't suffer because of these wider spans, organizations are investing heavily in employee training. Managers recognize that they can handle a wider span when employees know their jobs inside and out or can turn to co-workers if they have questions.

Centralization and Decentralization

- The concentration of authority and responsibility for decision making in the hands of managers at the top of an organization's hierarchy (the degree to which decision making is concentrated at a single point in the organization)

Decentralization

- Distribution of authority and responsibility for decision making to managers at all levels of an organization's hierarchy (decision discretion is pushed down to lower-level employees)

Formalization

- The degree to which jobs within the organization are standardized.

The Effect of Technology on Structure

- The more the technology requires interdependence between individuals and/or groups, the greater the need for coordination
- "As technology moves from routine to non-routine, subunits adopt less formalized and centralized structures"

Lesson 31

ORGANIZATIONAL DESIGN*The Basics of Organizational Structure

- Organizational structure defines how job tasks are formally divided, grouped, and coordinated.
- The organization chart is a visual representation of this division, grouping, and coordination.

Designing an Organization Structure

- Managers must decide how to divide the overall tasks of the organization into successively smaller jobs.
- Managers must decide the basis by which to group the individual jobs.
- Managers must decide the appropriate size of the group reporting to each supervisor
- Managers must distribute authority among the jobs.

Three Types of Relationships:

- Direct single
–Between a manager and each subordinate individually
- Direct group
–Between a manager and each possible permutation of subordinates
- Cross
–Between subordinates and other subordinates

The basis by which jobs are grouped together is called departmentalization. Every organization will have its own specific way of classifying and grouping work activities

An organizational structure is the formal framework by which job tasks are divided, grouped, and coordinated. When managers develop or change an organization's structure, they are engaged in organizational design, a process that involves decisions about six key elements: work specialization, departmentalization, chain of command, span of control, centralization and decentralization, and formalization

| Functional Authority | Permits staff managers to make decisions about specific activities performed by employees within other departments. |

Elements of Organizational Structure

Today we use the term work specialization to describe the degree to which tasks in an organization are divided into separate jobs. The essence of work specialization is that an entire job is not done by one individual but instead is broken down into steps, and each step is completed by a different person. Individual employees specialize in doing part of an activity rather than the entire activity.

During the first half of the twentieth century, managers viewed work specialization as an unending source of increased productivity. And for a time it was! Because it wasn't widely used, when work specialization was implemented, employee productivity rose. By the 1960s, however, it had become evident that a good thing could be carried too far. In addition, managers found that employees who were given a variety of work to do, allowed to do the activities necessary to complete a whole job, and put into teams with interchangeable skills often achieved significantly higher output with increased employee satisfaction.

Most managers today see work specialization as an important organizing mechanism but not as a source of ever-increasing productivity. They recognize the economies it provides in certain types of jobs, but they also recognize the problems it creates when it's carried to extremes. McDonald's, for example, uses high work specialization to efficiently make and sell its fast-food products, and most employees in health care organizations are specialized. However, other organizations, such as Saturn Corporation, Hallmark, and Ford Australia, have successfully broadened the scope of jobs and reduced work specialization.

Functional departmentalization groups jobs by functions performed. This approach can be used in all types of organizations, although the functions change to reflect the organization's objectives and work activities. Product departmentalization groups jobs by product line. In this approach, each major product area is placed under the authority of a manager who's a specialist in, and is responsible for, everything having to do with that product line. Geographical departmentalization groups jobs on the basis of territory or geography such as southern, Midwestern, or northwestern regions for an organization operating only in the United States; or for a global company, maybe U.S., European, Canadian, and Asian-Pacific regions. Process departmentalization groups jobs on the basis of product or customer flow. In this approach, work activities follow a natural processing flow of products or even of customers. Finally, customer departmentalization groups jobs on the basis of common customers who have common needs or problems that can best be met by having specialists for each.

Large organizations often combine most or all of these forms of departmentalization. For example, a major Japanese electronics firm organizes each of its divisions along functional lines, its manufacturing units around processes, its sales units around seven geographic regions, and its sales regions into four customer groupings.

Two trends are currently popular regarding departmentalization. This team of individuals from engineering, marketing, and manufacturing was involved in every aspect of bringing this winning product to market—from defining the target market, to defining the product, to working with manufacturing on a feasible design.

Formalization

Formalization refers to the degree to which jobs within the organization are standardized and the extent to which employee behavior is guided by rules and procedures. If a job is highly formalized, then the person doing that job has a minimum amount of discretion over what is to be done, when it's to be done, and how he or she could do it. Employees can be expected to handle the same input in exactly the same way, resulting in consistent and uniform output. In organizations with high formalization, there are explicit job descriptions, numerous organizational rules, and clearly defined procedures covering work processes. Where formalization is low, job behaviors are relatively unstructured and employees have a great deal of freedom in how they do their work. Because an individual's discretion on the job is inversely related to the amount of behavior in that job that is preprogrammed by the organization, the greater the standardization, the less input the employee has into how work is done. Standardization not only eliminates the possibility that employees will engage in alternative behaviors, it even removes the need for employees to consider alternatives.

The degree of formalization can vary widely between organizations and even within organizations. For instance, at a newspaper publisher, news reporters often have a great deal of discretion in their jobs. They may pick their news topic, find their own stories, research them the way they want, and write them up, usually within minimal guidelines. On the other hand, the compositors and typesetters who lay out the newspaper pages don't have that type of freedom. They have constraints—both time and space—that standardize how they do their work.

Chain of command

For many years, the chain-of-command concept was a cornerstone of organizational design. As you'll see, it has far less importance today. But contemporary managers still need to consider its implications when deciding how best to structure their organizations.

The chain of command is the continuous line of authority that extends from upper organizational levels to the lowest levels and clarifies who reports to whom. It helps employees answer questions such as "Who do I go to if I have a problem?" or "To whom am I responsible?"

You can't discuss the chain of command without discussing three other concepts: authority, responsibility, and unity of command. As managers coordinate and integrate the work of employees, those employees assume an obligation to perform any assigned duties. This obligation or expectation to perform is known as responsibility. Finally, the unity of command principle (one of Fayol's 14 principles of management) helps preserve the concept of a continuous line of authority. It states that a person should report to only one manager. Without unity of command, conflicting demands and priorities from multiple bosses can create problems.

Span of control

How many employees can a manager efficiently and effectively manage? ### Common Organizational Design

- Simple Structure

A structure characterized by a low degree of departmentalization, wide spans of control, authority centralized in a single person, and little formalization.

- Bureaucracy

A structure with highly routine operating tasks achieved through specialization, very formalized rules and regulations, tasks that are grouped into functional departments, centralized authority, narrow spans of control, and decision making that follows the chain of command.

- Matrix Structure

A structure that creates dual lines of authority and combines functional and product departmentalization

Matrix Organizational Design

- Rejects the unity of command principal
- Uses multiple authority structures, so that many people report to two managers
- People from different functional areas work on various projects

- Strengths

- Functional economies of scale
- Minimum duplication of personnel and equipment
- Enhanced communication
- Centralized decision making

- Weaknesses

- Subunit conflicts with organizational goals
- Obsessive concern with rules and regulations
- Lack of employee discretion to deal with problems

WORK DESIGN AND TECHNOLOGY

Overview

This lecture considers the creation and use organizational structure and culture to manage individuals and inter-group relations effectively, particularly between different functions and divisions. It describes how managers group people and resources, integrate people and groups to stimulate them to work together, and how organizational values and norms influence inter-group relationships and organizational effectiveness.

Managers try to: encourage employees to work hard, develop supportive work attitudes, and allow people and groups to cooperate and work together effectively. An organization's structure and culture affect the way people and groups behave.

Organizational structure is the formal system of task and reporting relationships that controls, coordinates, and motivates employees so they cooperate and work together to achieve organizational goals.

Organizational culture is the informal set of values and norms that controls how people and groups interact with others inside and outside the organization.

Because structure and culture affect attitudes, behaviors, and goals, organizations base design decisions on desired behaviors, attitudes, and goals.

Organizational design is the selection and management of various dimensions of structure and culture to achieve goals.

Design decisions consider contingencies, possible events to be considered in planning. Three major contingencies that determine organizational structure and culture include: environment, technology, and strategy.

Four Symptoms of Structural Weakness

- Delay in decision making
Overloaded hierarchy; information funneling limited to too few channels
- Poor quality decision making
Right information not reaching right people in right format
- Lack of innovative response to changing environment
No coordinating effort
- High level of conflict
Departments work against each other, not for organizational goals

Environmental Factors

In order to correctly identify opportunities and monitor threats, the company must begin with a thorough understanding of the environment in which the firm operates. The management environment consists of all the actors and forces outside management that affect the management's ability to develop and maintain successful relationships with its all factors. Though these factors and forces may vary depending on the specific company and industrial group, they can generally be divided into broad micro environmental and macro environmental components. For most companies, the micro environmental components are: the company, suppliers, management channel firms (intermediaries), customer markets, competitors, and publics. The macro environmental components are thought to be: demographic, economic, natural, technological, political, and cultural forces. The wise management manager knows that he or she cannot always affect environmental forces. Smart managers can take a proactive, rather than reactive, approach to the management environment.

As a company's management collects and processes data on these environments, it must be ever vigilant in its efforts to apply what it learns to developing opportunities and dealing with threats. Studies have shown that excellent companies not only have a keen sense of customer but an appreciation of the environmental forces swirling around them. By constantly looking at the dynamic changes that are occurring in the aforementioned environments, companies are better prepared to adapt to change, prepare long-range strategy, meet the needs of today's and tomorrow's customers, and compete with the intense competition present in the global marketplace.

1. Environmental Uncertainty

- Exists when managers have little information about environmental events and their impact on the organization.
- When the organizational environment is complex and dynamic, the manager may have little information about future events and have great difficulty predicting them.

2. Environmental Complexity

- The number of environmental components that effects on organizational decision making.

3. Environmental Dynamism

- The degree to which these components change.

Technology in the Workplace

1. We defined the term technology earlier to mean "how an organization transfers its inputs into outputs."
2. Today it is also widely used to describe machinery and equipment that use sophisticated electronics and computers to produce those outputs.
3. The common theme of these technologies is that they substitute for human labor in the transformation of inputs into outputs. This has been happening since the mid 1800s.

4. We are concerned about the behavior of people at work—it is important to discuss how recent advances in technology are changing the work place and the work lives of employees.

Process Reengineering

1. Process reengineering is described as "considering how things would be done if you could start all over from scratch." It comes from the process of taking apart an electronics product and designing a better version.
2. Michael Hammer coined the term as applied to organizations. Reengineering means management should start with a clean sheet of paper—rethinking and redesigning those processes by which the organization creates value and does work, ridding itself of operations that have become antiquated in the computer age.

Three key elements:

- Identifying an organization's distinctive competencies, assessing core processes, and reorganizing horizontally by process
  - a. Distinctive competencies define what it is that the organization is more superior at delivering than its competition.
  - b. Superior store locations, a more efficient distribution system, higher-quality products, more knowledgeable sales personnel, or superior technical support
- Core processes transform materials, capital, information, and labor into products and services that the customer values.
  - a. These range from strategic planning to after-sales customer support; management can determine to what degree each adds value.
  - b. Process value analysis typically uncovers a whole lot of activities that add little value.
- Reengineering requires management to reorganize around horizontal processes.
  - a. This means cross-functional and self-managed teams
  - b. It means focusing on processes rather than functions.
  - c. One of the goals of reengineering is to minimize the necessary amount of management.

Downsizing and Rightsizing

- Downsizing (rightsizing) involves reducing the size of the organization by selling off or closing down units or product lines to increase profitability.
- Probably will call for a change in structure.

Mergers and Acquisitions

- The search for competitiveness may call for the joining of two or more firms through Mergers and Acquisitions.
- The challenge for these firms is to find a structure that works for the combined entity.

What's an e-Organization?

1. E-commerce refers to the sales side of electronic business. For example, people shopping in the Internet, businesses setting up web sites, fulfilling orders and getting paid are all parts of e-commerce. It is a subset of e-business.
2. E-business is the full breadth of activities included in a success Internet-based enterprise. It includes:
  - a. Developing strategies for running an Internet based business.
  - b. Improving communication between employees, suppliers and customers.
  - c. Collaborating with partners.
3. E-organizations refer to the applications of e-business concepts to all organizations.

4. The e-organization has three underlying components:

- The Internet—a world wide network of interconnected computers
- Intranets—an organization's private Internet
- Extranets—extended Intranets accessible only to selected employees and authorized outsiders.

Selected Implications for Individual Behavior

Ethics

- How do e-orgs affect employee behavior? Since e-orgs refer to a range of technology applications. The more an organization uses global and private network linkages, the more the comments below are applicable to employees.

Motivation

- Employees are more susceptible to distractions that can undermine their work effort and reduce their productivity. For example, cyber loafing.

Decision Making

- Cyber loafing refers to using the organization's Internet access during formal work hours to surf non-job related Web sites or sending/receiving personal email.
- If work is not interesting workers may be motivated to "do something else"—often surfing the Internet is the diversion. Solutions are to make jobs more interesting, provide formal breaks, and set out explicit guidelines for behavior.
- Electronic surveillance of employees is an issue that puts an organization's desire for control against an employee's right to privacy.
- Employers argue they need those controls. Forty one and one-half percent of U.S. employers actively monitor or restrict employees' Web activity. They say controls allow them to make sure employees are not goofing off, not distributing company secrets, and preventing hostile work environments.
- Most would agree that employees should not use the employer's equipment for unauthorized purposes—and when they know they are being watched—but with home and work life becoming increasingly intermingled the ethics of the practice are less clear.

Selected Implications for Group Behavior

On-line leadership differs from face-to-face leadership. Three other issues: decision making, communication, and organizational politics take on a different look in e-organizations.

1. Decision Making:

- The traditional method taken in OB when discussing decision making needs to be modified. Two projections:
  - a. Group decision-making models will take on greater relevance.
  - b. Rational models will be replaced by action models.
- Decisions in e-organizations will most often need to be made fast with little previous experience. The firms will need to recover fast from mistakes.

2. Communication:

- Traditional hierarchical levels no longer constrain communication.
- Employees are encouraged to communicate instantly, anytime with anyone.
- Concepts such as the distinction between formal and informal networks, nonverbal communication, and filtering become obsolete.
- Activities such as meetings, negotiations, and supervision are also redefined.

- Gossip can be shared electronically; websites can be grapevines. The downside is that employees are experiencing communication overload.
3. Politics and Networking:
- Cyber-schmoozing—or on-line networking—activities are necessary in addition to traditional face-to-face impression management techniques.

Work Space Design

This topic is concerned with the workspace made available to employees and how it may affect an employee's behavior.

1. Size:

- Size is defined by the square feet per employee.
- Historically, the most important determinant of space provided to employees was status. This no longer seems to be true.
- Organizations seeking to become more egalitarian are reducing space dedicated to specific employees, lessening or eliminating space allocations based on hierarchical position, etc.
- Over the past decade, the personal office space is estimated to have shrunk 25–50 percent.
  - a. Part of this has been economically motivated.
  - b. Much of this reduction can be traced to reengineering.
- The trend today is toward setting extra space aside where people can meet and teams can work.

2. Arrangement:

- Arrangement refers to the distance between people and facilities.
- This is important primarily because it significantly influences social interaction. Research supports that you are more likely to interact with those individuals who are physically close.
- Furniture arrangements in traditional offices have received considerable attention.

Work Redesign Options

- Job Rotation: The periodic shifting of a worker from one task to another.
- Job Enlargement: The horizontal expansion of jobs.
- Job Enrichment: The vertical expansion of jobs.

Work Schedule Options

- Flextime: Employees work during a common core time period each day but have discretion in forming their total workday from a flexible set of hours outside the core.
- Job Sharing: The practice of having two or more people split a 40-hour-a-week job.
- Telecommuting: Employees do their work at home on a computer that is linked to their office.

HUMAN RESOURCE POLICIES AND PRACTICES

Human Resource Management

“Managerial function that tries to match an organization’s needs to the skills and abilities of its employees”

What is Human Resource Management?

- Conducting job analysis
- Planning labor needs
- Selecting job candidates
- Orienting and training new employees
- Managing wages and salaries
- Providing incentives and benefits
- Appraising performance
- Communicating
- Training and developing
- Building employee commitment

Why Is HR Management Important to All Managers?

Helps you avoid common personnel mistakes:

- Hiring the wrong person for the job
- Experiencing high turnover
- Finding your people not doing their best
- Wasting time with useless interviews
- Having your company taken to court because of your discriminatory actions
- Having your company cited for bad reputation

HRM Activities

1. Getting people
2. Preparing people
3. Stimulating people
4. Keeping people

1. Staffing (Getting people)

- Strategic human resource planning
- Recruiting
- Selection

Staffing Activities

- Employment planning
  - Strategic goals and objectives
  - Job requirements change
- Job analysis
  - Job description

- Job skills

- Recruiting
- Selection

2. Training and Development (Preparing people)

- Orientation
- Training
- Development
  - Employee
  - Career
  - Organization

Training and Development Goals

- Adapt to new surroundings
- Cope with change
- Meet organizational needs

3. Motivation (Stimulating people)

- Job design
- Performance appraisals
- Rewards and compensation
- Employee benefits

Motivation Goal

- Competent and adapted employees
- With up-to-date skills, knowledge, abilities
- Exerting high energy levels

Motivation

- Implications
  - Individual
  - Managerial
  - Organizational
- Performance
  - Willingness
  - Ability
- Respect

4. Maintenance (Keeping people)

- Health and safety
- Communications
- Employee relations

Maintenance

- Health
- Safety
- Communications
- Employee assistance programs
- Environment where employee voices are heard

Managing Human Resources for This Era

Organizational ability

- To Attract
- To Develop
- To Motivate and
- To Keep talented people

Successful HRM

- Organization: High level of profitability, Higher annual sales per employee, High market value.
- Employee: More employment security, More job opportunities, High wages.
- Society: Elevating the standard of living, Strengthening ethical guidelines.

Job analysis

Job Analysis is the SYSTEMATIC process of collecting and making judgments about all the important information related to a job.

Job analysis outcomes

- ☞ Job description
- ☞ Job specification
- ☞ Job evaluation

Lesson 34

HUMAN RESOURCE POLICIES AND PRACTICES*Job Analysis

Job analysis is the procedure through which you determine the duties and nature of the jobs and the kinds of people who should be hired for them. You can utilize the information it provides to write job descriptions and job specifications, which are utilized in recruitment and selection, compensation, performance appraisal, and training.

I. Steps in Job Analysis

Job Analysis process has following steps:

- a. Identify how the information will be used because that will determine what data will be collected and how it should be collected. Interviewing and position analysis questionnaire are some examples of data collection techniques.
- b. Review relevant background information, such as organization charts, process charts, and job descriptions.
- c. Select representative positions to analyze because there may be too many similar jobs to analyze, and it may not be necessary to analyze them all.
- d. Analyze the job by collecting data on job activities, required employee behaviors, working conditions, and human traits and abilities needed to perform the job.
- e. Review and verify the job analysis information with job incumbents to confirm that it is factually correct and complete.
- f. Develop a job description and job specification from the job analysis information.

II. Job Analysis Methods

Job analysis traditionally has been conducted in a number of different ways. Also, firms differ in their needs and in the resources they have for conducting job analysis.

Methods of Collecting Job Analysis Information*Introduction

- An HR specialist (an HR specialist, job analyst, or consultant), a worker, and the worker's supervisor usually work together in conducting the job analysis.
- Job analysis data is usually collected from several employees from different departments, using interviews and questionnaires. The data is then averaged, taking into account the departmental context of the employees, to determine how much time a typical employee spends on each of several specific tasks.

a. The Interview

1. The three types of interviews managers use to collect job analysis data are: individual (to get the employee's perspective on the job's duties and responsibilities, group (when large numbers of employees perform the same job), and supervisor (to get his/her perspective on the job's duties and responsibilities).
2. The pros of using an interview are that it is: simple, quick, and more comprehensive because the interviewer can unearth activities that may never appear in written form.
3. The following questions are some examples of typical questions. "What is the job being performed?" "In what activities do you participate?" "What are the health and safety conditions?"
4. The following are interview guidelines: a) the job analyst and supervisor should identify the workers who know the job best and would be objective; b) establish a rapport with the interviewee; c) follow a structured guide or checklist; d) ask worker to list duties in order of importance and frequency of occurrence; and e) review and verify the data.

b. Questionnaire

1. Structured or unstructured questionnaires may be used to obtain job analysis information
2. Questionnaires can be a quick, efficient way of gathering information from a large number of employees. But, developing and testing a questionnaire can be expensive and time consuming.

c. Observation

1. Direct observations are useful when jobs consist of mainly observable physical activity as opposed to mental activity.
2. Reactivity can be a problem with direct observations, which is where the worker changes what he/she normally does because he/she is being watched.
3. Managers often use direct observation and interviewing together.

d. Participant Diary / Logs

1. The employee records every activity he/she engages in, in a diary or log along with the amount of time to perform each activity to produce a complete picture of the job.
2. Employees may try to exaggerate some activities and underplay others.

e. Quantitative Job Analysis Techniques

1. Position Analysis Questionnaire (PAQ) is a questionnaire used to collect quantifiable data concerning the duties and responsibilities of various jobs, , on five basic activities: a) having decision-making/communication/social responsibilities, b) performing skilled activities, c) being physically active, d) operating vehicles/equipment, and e) processing information.
2. Department of Labor Procedure (DOL) is a standardized method for rating, classifying, and comparing virtually every kind of job based on data, people, and things. '
3. Functional job analysis: 1) rates a job on data; people; things; the extent to which specific instructions are necessary to perform the task; the extent to which reasoning and judgment are required to perform the task; and mathematical ability required to perform the task; and 2) identifies performance standards and training requirements.

f. Using Multiple Sources of Information

Likely, no one job analysis method will be used exclusively. A combination is often more appropriate.

1. Where possible, collect job analysis data using several types of collection techniques and respondents.
2. Potential inaccuracies in peoples' judgments could lead to inaccurate conclusions

III. Source of Data

Main sources of collection of data for job analysis are as following:

- Employees
- Supervisor
- Manager
- Job Analyst
- Job Analyst (HR)
- Outside consultant
- Supervisor/Manager

IV. Problems with Job Analysis

Too lengthy

- Time consuming and requires much patience
- Might be a reflection of stereotypes

V. Job analysis outcomes

a. Job description

The job description is a document that provides information regarding the tasks, duties, and responsibilities of the job. Job description takes on an even greater importance under the Americans with Disabilities Act because the description of essential job functions may be critical to a defense regarding reasonable accommodation.

1. Job Identification – contains the job title, the FLSA status, date, and possible space to indicate who approved the description, the location of the job, the immediate supervisor's title, salary and/or pay scale.
2. Job Summary – should describe the general nature of the job, and includes only its major functions or activities.
3. Relationships – occasionally a relationships statement is included. It shows the jobholders' relationships with others inside and outside the organization.
4. Responsibilities and Duties – The Department of Labor's Dictionary of Occupational Titles can be used for itemizing the job's duties and responsibilities.
5. Standards of Performance – states the standards the employee is expected to achieve under each of the job description's main duties and responsibilities.

b. Job specification

Minimum acceptable qualifications that a person should possess to perform the job are included in the job specification. Some of the items often included are requirements for education, experience, personality, and physical abilities.

c. Job evaluation

In Job Evaluation process the worth of job is identified based upon job comparability and according to worth, importance of job and relative value Compensation is designed and selected.

Lesson 35

HUMAN RESOURCE POLICIES AND PRACTICES*Overview

In this lecture, we first discuss the concept of career, career planning and development. Next, we distinguish between job security and career security. Then, we identify several factors that affect career planning and discuss both individual and organizational career planning. We next address career paths and discuss career development, then, career planning and development methods are described. We devote the last part of the chapter to a discussion of developing unique segments of the workforce.

A. Career

Career can be defined as a general course of action a person chooses to pursue throughout his or her working life

I. Career planning

Career planning is an ongoing process through which an individual sets career goals and identifies the means to achieve them. The process by which individuals plan their life's work is referred to as career planning. Through career planning, a person evaluates his or her own abilities and interests, considers alternative career opportunities, establishes career goals, and plans practical developmental activities. Usually, career planning programs are expected to achieve one or more of the following objectives:

1. More effective development of available talent.
  2. Self-appraisal opportunities for employees considering new or nontraditional career paths.
  3. More efficient development of human resources within and among divisions and/or geographic locations.
  4. A demonstration of a tangible commitment to EEO and affirmative action.
  5. Satisfaction of employees' personal development needs.
  6. Improvement of performance through on-the-job training experiences provided by horizontal and vertical career moves.
  7. Increased employee loyalty and motivation, leading to decreased turnover.
  8. A method of determining training and development needs.
- Individual career planning—Career planning begins with self-understanding. Then, the person is in a position to establish realistic goals and determine what to do to achieve these goals. Learning about oneself is referred to as self-assessment. Some useful tools include a strength/weakness balance sheet and a likes and dislikes survey.
    1. Strength/weakness balance sheet: A self-evaluation procedure assists people in becoming aware of their strengths and weaknesses.
    2. Likes and dislikes survey: A procedure that assists individuals in recognizing restrictions they place on themselves.
  - Career Assessment On The Web—The Web has numerous tests and assessments sites available to assist job seekers.
  - Organizational Career Planning—The process of establishing career paths within a firm.

II. Career Paths

Career paths have historically focused on upward mobility within a particular occupation. One of four types of career paths may be used: traditional, network, lateral, and dual.

- a. Traditional Career Path—An employee progresses vertically upward in the organization from one specific job to the next.
- b. Network Career Path—A method of career pathing that contains both a vertical sequence of jobs and a series of horizontal opportunities.
- c. Lateral Skill Path—Traditionally, a career path was viewed as moving upward to higher levels of management in the organization. The availability of the previous two options has diminished considerably in recent years. But this does not mean that an individual has to remain in the same job for life. There are often lateral moves within the firm that can be taken to allow an employee to become revitalized and find new challenges.
- d. Dual-Career Path— A career-path method, that recognizes that technical specialists can and should be allowed to continue to contribute their expertise to a company without having to become managers.
- e. Adding Value To Retain Present Job—Regardless of the career path pursued, today's workers need to develop a plan whereby they are viewed as continually adding value to the organization. If employees cannot add value, the company does not need them, and much of the evolving work environments cannot use them either. Workers must anticipate what tools will be needed for success in the future and obtain these skills. These workers must look across company lines to other organizations to determine what skills are transferable, and then go and get them. Essentially, today's workers must manage their own careers as never before.
- f. Demotion—Demotions have long been associated with failure, but limited promotional opportunities in the future and the fast pace of technological change may make them more legitimate career options.

III. Career Development

A formal approach taken by an organization to help people acquire the skills and experiences needed to perform current and future jobs is termed as career development. Company's policies especially policies regarding promotion, counseling the employees, opportunities to excel in future help employees to develop their career. Consist of skills, education and experiences as well as behavioral modification and refinement techniques that allow individuals to work better and add value.

Career development is an ongoing organized and formalized effort that recognizes people as a vital organizational resource. It differs from training in that it has a wider focus, longer time frame, and broader scope. The goal of training is improvement in performance; the goal of development is enrichment and more capable workers.

Recently, career development has come to be seen as a means for meeting both organizational and employee needs, as opposed to solely meeting the needs of the organization as it had done in the past. Now, organizations see career development as a way of preventing job burnout, providing career information to employees, improving the quality of work lives and meeting affirmative action goals. That is, career development must be seen as a key business strategy if an organization wants to survive in an increasingly competitive and global business environment.

IV. Career Planning and Development Methods

There are numerous methods for career planning and development. Some currently utilized methods, most of which are used in various combinations, are discussed next.

- a. Discussions with Knowledgeable Individuals—In a formal discussion, the superior and subordinate may jointly agree on what type of career planning and development activities are best. In other instances, psychologists and guidance counselors provide this service. In an academic setting, colleges and universities often provide career planning and development information to students. Students often go to their professors for career advice.

- b. Company Material—Some firms provide material specifically developed to assist their workers in career planning and development. Such material is tailored to the firm's special needs. In addition, job descriptions provide valuable insight for individuals to personally determine if a match exists with their strengths and weaknesses and specific positions considered.
- c. Performance Appraisal System—The firm's performance appraisal system can also be a valuable tool in career planning and development. Noting and discussing an employee's strengths and weaknesses with his or her supervisor can uncover developmental needs. If overcoming a particular weakness seems difficult or even impossible, an alternate career path may be the solution.
- d. Workshops—Some organizations conduct workshops lasting two or three days for the purpose of helping workers develop careers within the company. Employees define and match their specific career objectives with the needs of the company. At other times, workshops are available in the community that the company may send the worker to or workers may initiate the visit themselves.
- e. Personal Development Plans (PDP)—Many employers encourage employees to write their own personal development plans. This is a summary of a person's personal development needs and an action plan to achieve them. Workers are encouraged to analyze their strengths and weaknesses.
- f. Software Packages—Some software packages assist employees in navigating their careers.
- g. Career Planning Web Sites—There are numerous Web sites available that provide career planning and career counseling as well as career testing and assessment.

V. Challenges in Career Development

While most business people today agree that their organizations should invest in career development, it is not always clear exactly what form this investment should take. Before putting a career development program in place, management needs to consider three major challenges.

a. Who Will Be Responsible?

Many modern organizations have concluded that employees must take an active role in planning and implementing their own personal development plans. Situations have led companies to encourage their employees to take responsibility for their own development; these may include mergers, acquisitions, downsizing, and employee empowerment. However, employees need at least general guidance regarding the steps they can take to develop their careers, both within and outside the company.

b. How Much Emphasis Is Appropriate?

Too much emphasis on career enhancement can harm an organization's effectiveness. Employees with extreme career orientation can become more concerned about their image than their performance. Some warning signs a manager should be on the lookout for include a heavy focus on advancement opportunities, managing impressions, and socializing versus job performance.

Serious side effects of career development programs include employee dissatisfaction, poor performance, and turnover in the event that it fosters unrealistic expectations for advancement.

c. How Will The Needs of a Diverse Work Force Be Met?

Companies need to break down the barriers some employees face in achieving advancement in order to meet the career development needs of today's diverse work force. In 1991, a government study revealed that women and minorities are frequently excluded from the informal career development activities like networking, mentoring, and participation in policy-making committees.

Perhaps the best way a company can ensure that women and minorities have a fair chance at managerial and executive positions is to design a broad-based approach to employee development that is anchored in education and training.

Another employee group that may need special consideration consists of dual-career couples. Common organizational approaches that are becoming increasingly popular in dealing with the needs of dual career couples are flexible work schedules, telecommuting, and the offering of child-care services. Some companies have also been counseling couples in career management.

VI. Meeting the Challenges of Effective Career Development

Creative decision making is a must in designing and implementing an effective development program. The three phases of development often blend together in a real life program. These three phases include the assessment phase, the direction phase, and the development phase.

a. The Assessment Phase

The assessment phase involves activities ranging from self-assessment to organizationally provided assessment. The goal of both of these types of assessment is to identify employees' strengths and weaknesses.

1. Self-assessment
2. Organizational assessment

b. The Direction Phase

This involves determining the type of career that employees want and the steps they must take to make their career goals a reality.

1. Individual career counseling
2. Information services

c. The Development Phase

The development phase is taking actions to create and increase skills to prepare for future job opportunities and is meant to foster this growth and self-improvement.

1. Mentoring & Coaching: It has become increasingly clear over the years that employees who aspire to higher management levels in the organization often need the assistance and advocacy of someone higher up in the organization. When senior employee takes an active role in guiding another individual, we refer to this activity as mentoring and coaching. This can occur at any level and can be most effective when the two individuals do not have any type of reporting relationship.
2. Job rotation: Involves moving employees from one job to another for the purpose of providing them with broader experience.

3. Tuition assistance programs: To help individuals plan their careers, organizations try to provide additional information in order to have better choice of the career.

Self-Development

When an employer does not routinely offer development programs, it is essential that employees work out their own development plan. Planning for your career should include a consideration of how you can demonstrate that you make a difference to the organization.

- Development Suggestions

Development suggestions focus on personal growth and direction. These suggestions include statements such as "Create your own personal mission statement."

- Advancement Suggestion

Advancement suggestions focus on the steps that employees can take to improve their chances of being considered for advancement. These suggestions include statements such as "Remember that performance in your function is important, but interpersonal performance is critical."

VII. Career-Impacted Life Stages

Each person's career goes through stages that influence an individual's knowledge of, and preference for, various occupations. People change constantly and, thus, view their careers differently at various stages of their lives. Some of these changes result from the aging process and others from opportunities for growth and status. The main stages of the career cycle include the growth, exploration, establishment, maintenance, and decline.

- a. Growth stage: The growth stage is roughly from birth to age 14 and is a period during which an individual develops a self-concept by identifying and interacting with other people. Basically, during this stage an individual establishes his or her identity.
- b. Exploration stage: The exploration stage is the period roughly from ages 15 to 24, during which an individual seriously explores various occupational alternatives. The person attempts to match these occupational alternatives with his or her own interests and abilities resulting from education, leisure activities, and work.
- c. Establishment stage: The establishment stage is roughly from ages 25 to 44 and is the primary part of most people's work lives. Hopefully, during this period, a suitable occupation is found and the person engages in those activities that help earn a permanent career. During this period, the individual is continually testing personal capabilities and ambitions against those of the initial occupational choice.
- d. Maintenance stage: Between the ages of 45 to 65, many people move from the stabilization sub stage into the maintenance stage. During maintenance, the individual has usually created a place in the work world, and most efforts are directed at maintaining the career gains earned.
- e. Decline stage: As retirement becomes an inevitable reality, in the decline stage, there is frequently a period of adjustment, where many begin to accept reduced levels of power and responsibility.

Lesson 36*ORGANIZATIONAL CULTURE*Overview

Employees form an overall subjective perception of the organization based on such factors as degree of risk tolerance, team emphasis, and support of people. This overall perception becomes, in effect, the organization's culture or personality. These favorable or unfavorable perceptions then affect employee performance and satisfaction, with the impact being greater for stronger cultures.

Just as people's personalities tend to be stable over time, so too do strong cultures. This makes strong cultures difficult for managers to change. When a culture becomes mismatched to its environment, management will want to change it. However, as the Point-Counterpoint debate for this chapter demonstrates, changing an organization's culture is a long and difficult process. The result, at least in the short term, is that managers should treat their organization's culture as relatively fixed.

One of the more important managerial implications of organizational culture relates to selection decisions. Hiring individuals whose values do not align with those of the organization is likely to lead to employees who lack motivation and commitment and who are dissatisfied with their jobs and the organization. Not surprisingly, employee "misfits" have considerably higher turnover rates than individuals who perceive a good fit.

We should also not overlook the influence socialization has on employee performance. An employee's performance depends to a considerable degree on knowing what he should or should not do. Understanding the right way to do a job indicates proper socialization. Furthermore, the appraisal of an individual's performance includes how well the person fits into the organization. Can he or she get along with coworkers? Does he/she have acceptable work habits and demonstrate the right attitude? These qualities differ between jobs and organizations. For instance, on some jobs, employees will be evaluated more favorably if they are aggressive and outwardly indicate that they are ambitious. On another job, or on the same job in another organization, such an approach may be evaluated negatively. As a result, proper socialization becomes a significant factor in influencing both actual job performance and how it is perceived by others.

Organizational Culture

"The set of shared, taken-for-granted implicit assumptions that a group holds and that determines how it perceives, thinks about, and reacts to its various environments"

Culture Is a Descriptive Term

1. Organizational culture is concerned with how employees perceive its characteristics, not if they like them. Research on organizational culture has sought to measure how employees see their organization.
2. Job satisfaction seeks to measure affective responses to the work environment, such as how employees feel about the organization's expectations, reward practices, etc.
3. Organizational culture is descriptive, while job satisfaction is evaluative.

Definition of Organizational Culture

1. Organizational Culture is the set of values, often taken for granted, that help people in an organization understand which actions are considered acceptable and which are considered unacceptable.
2. Values are often communicated through stories and other symbolic means.

Do Organizations Have Uniform Cultures?

1. Individuals with different backgrounds or at different levels in the organization will tend to describe the organization's culture in similar terms.
2. There can be subcultures. Most large organizations have a dominant culture and numerous sets of subcultures.
3. A dominant culture expresses the core values that are shared by a majority:
  - An organization's culture is its dominant culture.
  - This macro view of culture that gives an organization its distinct personality.
4. Subcultures tend to develop in large organizations to reflect common problems, situations, or experiences that members face:
  - Defined by department designations and geographical separation
  - It will include the core values plus additional values unique to members of the subculture.
  - The core values are essentially retained but modified to reflect the subculture.
5. If organizations had no dominant culture and were composed only of numerous subcultures, the value of organizational culture as an independent variable would be significantly lessened:
  - It is the "shared meaning" aspect of culture that makes it such a potent device for guiding and shaping behavior.

We cannot ignore the reality that many organizations also have subcultures that can influence the behavior of members.

Strong vs. Weak Cultures

The argument is that strong cultures have a greater impact on employee behavior and are more directly related to reduce turnover:

- The organization's core values are both intensely held and widely shared.
- A strong culture will have a great influence on the behavior of its members because the high degree of shared-ness and intensity creates an internal climate of high behavioral control.

One specific result of a strong culture should be lower employee turnover. A high agreement about what the organization stands for builds cohesiveness, loyalty, and organizational commitment.

What Do Cultures Do?

Culture's Functions

1. It has a boundary-defining role. It creates distinctions between one organization and others.
2. It conveys a sense of identity for organization members.
3. Culture facilitates commitment to something larger than one's individual self-interest.
4. Culture is the social glue that helps hold the organization together. It enhances social system stability.
5. Culture serves as a sense-making and control mechanism that guides and shapes the attitudes and behavior of employees. This last function is of particular interest to us:
  - Culture by definition is elusive, intangible, implicit, and taken for granted.
  - Every organization develops a core set of assumptions, understandings, and implicit rules that govern day-to-day behavior in the workplace.
6. The role of culture in influencing employee behavior appears to be increasingly important. The shared meaning of a strong culture ensures that everyone is pointed in the same direction.

7. Who receives a job offer to join the organization, who is appraised as a high performer, and who gets the promotion is strongly influenced by the individual-organization “fit.”

Culture as a Liability

1. We are treating culture in a nonjudgmental manner.
2. Culture enhances organizational commitment and increases the consistency of employee behavior, but there are potentially dysfunctional aspects of culture.]]
3. Barrier to change:
  - Culture is a liability when the shared values are not in agreement with those that will further the organization’s effectiveness. This is most likely to occur when an organization’s environment is dynamic.
  - This helps to explain the challenges that executives at companies like Mitsubishi, General Motors, Eastman Kodak, Kellogg, and Boeing have had in recent years in adapting to upheavals in their environment.
4. Barrier to diversity:
  - Hiring new employees who, because of race, gender, disability, or other differences, are not like the majority of the organization’s members creates a paradox.
  - Management wants new employees to accept the organization’s core cultural values but, at the same time, they want to support the differences that these employees bring to the workplace.
  - Strong cultures put considerable pressure on employees to conform. They limit the range of values and styles that are acceptable.
  - Organizations seek out and hire diverse individuals because of their alternative strengths, yet these diverse behaviors and strengths are likely to diminish in strong cultures.
  - Strong cultures, therefore, can be liabilities when:
    - b. They effectively eliminate the unique strengths that diverse people bring to the organization.
    - b. They support institutional bias or become insensitive to people who are different.
5. Barrier to acquisitions and mergers:
  - Historically, the key factors that management looked at in making acquisition/merger decisions:
    - a. Financial advantages
    - b. Product synergy
  - Cultural compatibility has become the primary concern. Whether the acquisition actually works seems to have more to do with how well the two organizations’ cultures match up.

How Employees Learn Culture

Stories

1. During the days when Henry Ford II was chairman of the Ford Motor Co., the message was Henry Ford II ran the company.
2. Nordstrom employees are fond of the story when Mr. Nordstrom instructed the clerk to take the tires back and provide a full cash refund. After the customer had received his refund and left, the perplexed clerk looked at the boss. “But, Mr. Nordstrom, we don’t sell tires!,” “I know,” replied the boss, “but we do whatever we need to do to make the customer happy.”
3. Stories such as these typically contain a narrative of events about the organization’s founders, rule breaking, rags-to-riches successes, reductions in the workforce, relocation of employees, reactions to past mistakes, and organizational coping.
4. They anchor the present in the past and provide explanations and legitimacy for current practices:
  - For the most part, these stories develop spontaneously.
5. Some organizations actually try to manage this element of culture learning.

Rituals

1. Rituals are repetitive sequences of activities that express and reinforce the key values of the organization, what goals are most important, which people are important, and which are expendable.
2. College faculty members undergo a lengthy ritual in their quest for permanent employment—tenure. The astute faculty member will assess early on in the probationary period what attitudes and behaviors his or her colleagues want and will then proceed to give them what they want.

Material Symbols

1. The headquarters of Alcoa does not look like your typical head office operation:
  - There are few individual offices.
  - The informal corporate headquarters conveys to employees that Alcoa values openness, equality, creativity, and flexibility.
2. Some corporations provide their top executives with a variety of expensive perks. Others provide fewer and less elaborate perks.
3. The layout of corporate headquarters, the types of automobiles top executives that are given, and the presence or absence of corporate aircraft are a few examples of material symbols.
4. These material symbols convey to employees who is important, the degree of egalitarianism desired by top management, and the kinds of behavior that are appropriate.

Language

1. Many organizations and units use language as a way to identify members of a culture or subculture. By learning this language, members attest to their acceptance of the culture and help to preserve it.
2. Organizations, over time, often develop unique terms to describe equipment, offices, key personnel, suppliers, customers, or products that relate to its business.
3. New employees are frequently overwhelmed with acronyms and jargon that, after six months on the job, have become fully part of their language.
4. Once assimilated, this terminology acts as a common denominator that unites members of a given culture or subculture.

Components of Organizational Culture

1. Routine behaviors.
2. Norms shared by teams.
3. Dominant values.
4. Guiding philosophy for policies toward employees and customers.
5. The rules of the game for getting along in the organization.
6. The climate of the organization.

Dimensions of Culture

1. Innovation
2. Stability
3. People orientation
4. Outcome orientation
5. Easygoingness
6. Detail orientation
7. Team orientation
8. Communications
9. Training & Development

10. Rewards
11. Decision-making
12. Risk taking
13. Planning
14. Teamwork
15. Management practices

Functions of Culture

- Supports the organization's business strategy.
- Prescribes acceptable ways for managers to interact with external constituencies.
- Makes staffing decisions.
- Sets performance criteria.
- Guides the nature of acceptable interpersonal relationships in the company
- Selects appropriate management styles.

Keeping Culture Alive

- Selection
  - Concerned with how well the candidates will fit into the organization.
  - Provides information to candidates about the organization.
- Top Management
  - Senior executives help establish behavioral norms that are adopted by the organization.
- Socialization
  - The process that helps new employees adapt to the organization's culture.

Five Most Important Elements in Managing Culture

- What leaders pay attention to
- How leaders react to crises
- How leaders behave
- How leaders allocate rewards
- How leaders hire and fire individuals

Strengthening organizational culture

Embedding Organizational Culture

- Formal statements of organizational philosophy, mission, vision, values, and materials used for recruiting, selection and socialization
- The design of physical space, work environments, and buildings
- Slogans, language, and sayings
- Deliberate role modeling, training programs, teaching and coaching by managers and supervisors
- Explicit rewards, status symbols (e.g., titles), and promotion criteria
- Stories, legends, and myths about key people and events
- The organizational activities, processes, or outcomes that leaders pay attention to, measure, and control
- Leader reactions to critical incidents and organizational crises
- The workflow and organizational structure
- Organizational systems and procedures
- Organizational goals and the associated criteria used for recruitment, selection, development, promotion, layoffs, and retirement of people

How to Change a Culture

- If the culture no longer supports the goals and strategy of an organization, it should be changed.
- Mergers and acquisitions generally result in a change in culture.

Requirements for Successfully Changing Organizational Culture

- Understand the old culture first.
- Support employees and teams who have ideas for a better culture and are willing to act on those ideas.
- Find the most effective subculture in the organization and use it as a model.
- Help employees and teams do their jobs more effectively.
- Use the vision of a new culture as a guide for change.
- Recognize that significant cultural change takes time.

Lesson 37

ORGANIZATIONAL CHANGE*How to Change a Culture

- If the culture no longer supports the goals and strategy of an organization, it should be changed.
- Mergers and acquisitions generally result in a change in culture.

Requirements for Successfully Changing Organizational Culture

- Understand the old culture first.
- Support employees and teams who have ideas for a better culture and are willing to act on those ideas.
- Find the most effective subculture in the organization and use it as a model.
- Help employees and teams do their jobs more effectively.
- Use the vision of a new culture as a guide for change.
- Recognize that significant cultural change takes time.

Guidelines for Managing Cultural Diversity

- Organization members must:
  - Recognize and value a variety of opinion and insight.
  - Recognize the learning opportunities and challenges presented by the expression of different perspectives.
- The organizational culture must:
  - Foster high performance expectations for everyone.
  - Stimulate personal development.
  - Encourage openness.
  - Make workers feel valued.
- The organization must have:
  - A well-articulated and widely understood mission.

Effects of Organizational Culture on Employee Behavior and Performance

- Allows employees to understand the firm's history and current approach.
- Fosters commitment to corporate philosophy and values.
- Serves as a control mechanism for employee behaviors.
- Certain cultural types may produce greater effectiveness and productivity.

Organizational Change

The need for change has been implied throughout this text. "A casual reflection on change should indicate that it encompasses almost all our concepts in the organizational behavior literature. Think about leadership, motivation, organizational environment, and roles. It is impossible to think about these and other concepts without inquiring about change."

If environments were perfectly static, if employees' skills and abilities were always up to date and incapable of deteriorating, and if tomorrow were always exactly the same as today, organizational change would have little or no relevance to managers. The real world, however, is turbulent, requiring organizations and their members to undergo dynamic change if they are to perform at competitive levels.

Managers are the primary change agents in most organizations. By the decisions they make and their role-modeling behaviors, they shape the organization's change culture. For instance, management decisions related to structural design, cultural factors, and human resource policies largely determine the level of innovation within the organization. Similarly, management decisions, policies, and practices will determine the degree to which the organization learns and adapts to changing environmental factors.

We found that the existence of work stress, in and of itself, need not imply lower performance. The evidence indicates that stress can be either a positive or negative influence on employee performance. For many people, low to moderate amounts of stress enable them to perform their jobs better by increasing their work intensity, alertness, and ability to react. However, a high level of stress, or even a moderate amount sustained over a long period of time, eventually takes its toll and performance declines. The impact of stress on satisfaction is far more straightforward. Job-related tension tends to decrease general job satisfaction. Even though low to moderate levels of stress may improve job performance, employees find stress dissatisfying.

Organizational change is the movement of an organization away from its present state and toward some future state to increase its effectiveness. Forces for organizational change include competitive forces, economic, political, global, demographic, social, and ethical forces. Organizations are often reluctant to change because resistance to change at the organization, group, and individual levels gives rise to organizational inertia.

- Sources of organizational-level resistance to change include power and conflict, differences in functional orientation, mechanistic structure, and organizational culture. Sources of group-level resistance to change include group norms, group cohesiveness, groupthink, and escalation of commitment. Sources of individual-level resistance to change include uncertainty and insecurity, selective perception and retention, and habit.
- According to Lewin's force-field theory of change, organizations are balanced between forces pushing for change and forces resistant to change. To get an organization to change, managers must find a way to increase the forces for change, reduce resistance to change, or do both simultaneously.
- Types of change fall into two broad categories: evolutionary and revolutionary. The main instruments of evolutionary change are socio-technical systems theory and total quality management. The main instruments of revolutionary change are reengineering, restructuring, and innovation.

Change

When we speak of change, we mean an alteration in organization design, strategy or processes, or some other attempt to influence an organization's members to behave differently.

Forces for change

1. The changing nature of the workforce:

- A multicultural environment.
- Human resource policies and practices changed to attract and keep this more diverse workforce.
- Large expenditure on training to upgrade reading, math, computer, and other skills of employees

2. Technology is changing jobs and organizations:

- Sophisticated information technology is also making organizations more responsive. As organizations have had to become more adaptable, so too have their employees.
- We live in an “age of discontinuity.” Beginning in the early 1970s with the overnight quadrupling of world oil prices, economic shocks have continued to impose changes on organizations.

3. Competition is changing:

- The global economy means global competitors.
- Established organizations need to defend themselves against both traditional competitors and small, entrepreneurial firms with innovative offerings.
- Successful organizations will be the ones that can change in response to the competition.

4. Social trends during the past generation suggest changes that organizations have to adjust for:

- The expansion of the Internet, Baby Boomers retiring, and people moving from the suburbs back to cities
- A global context for OB is required. No one could have imagined how world politics would change in recent years.
- September 11th has caused changes organizations have made in terms of practices concerning security, back-up systems, employee stereotyping, etc.

Managing Planned Change

Some organizations treat all change as an accidental occurrence, however, change as an intentional, goal-oriented activity is planned change.

1. There are two goals of planned change:

- Improve the ability of the organization to adapt to changes in its environment.
- Change employee behavior.

2. Examples of planned-change activities are needed to stimulate innovation, empower employees, and introduce work teams.

3. An organization's success or failure is essentially due to the things that employees do or fail to do, so planned change is also concerned with changing the behavior of individuals and groups within the organization.

4. Who in organizations are responsible for managing change activities?

- Change agents can be managers, employees of the organization, or outside consultants.
- Typically, we look to senior executives as agents of change.

5. For major change efforts, top managers are increasingly turning to temporary outside consultants with specialized knowledge in the theory and methods of change.

- Consultant change agents can offer a more objective perspective than insiders can.
- They are disadvantaged in that they often have an inadequate understanding of the organization's history, culture, operating procedures, and personnel.

- Outside consultants are also more willing to initiate second-order changes.
- Internal change agents are often more cautious for fear of offending friends and associates.

Strategic Change

- Major transformations in the structure, size, or functioning of an organization for the purpose of achieving strategic objectives
- Degree of Change:
  - Radical change
    - Major adjustments in the ways a firm does business
  - Incremental change
    - Evolution over time
    - Many small routine changes

Timing of Change

- Reactive Change:
  - Responding to changes in the external or internal environment.
- Anticipatory Change:
  - Looking for better ways to stay ahead of the competition.

Why People Resist Change

1. Direct Costs/Limited Resources
2. Saving Face/Vested Interests
3. Fear of the Unknown
4. Breaking Traditions/Routines
5. Incongruent Systems
6. Incongruent Team Dynamics

One of the well-documented findings is that organizations and their members resist change. It provides a degree of stability and predictability to behavior. There is a definite downside to resistance to change. It hinders adaptation and progress.

Resistance to change does not necessarily surface in standardized ways. Resistance can be overt, implicit, immediate, or deferred. It is easiest for management to deal with resistance when it is overt and immediate.

Implicit resistance efforts are more subtle—loss of loyalty to the organization, loss of motivation to work, increased errors or mistakes, increased absenteeism due to “sickness”—and hence more difficult to recognize.

Similarly, deferred actions cloud the link between the source of the resistance and the reaction to it. A change may produce what appears to be only a minimal reaction at the time it is initiated, but then resistance surfaces weeks, months, or even years later. Reactions to change can build up and then explode seemingly totally out of proportion. The resistance was deferred and stockpiled, and what surfaces is a cumulative response.

CHANGE MANAGEMENT

Resistance to Change

1. One of the well-documented findings is that organizations and their members resist change.
  - It provides a degree of stability and predictability to behavior.
  - There is a definite downside to resistance to change. It hinders adaptation and progress.
2. Resistance to change does not necessarily surface in standardized ways.
  - Resistance can be overt, implicit, immediate, or deferred.
  - It is easiest for management to deal with resistance when it is overt and immediate.
3. Implicit resistance efforts are more subtle—loss of loyalty to the organization, loss of motivation to work, increased errors or mistakes, increased absenteeism due to “sickness”—and hence more difficult to recognize.
4. Similarly, deferred actions cloud the link between the source of the resistance and the reaction to it.
  - A change may produce what appears to be only a minimal reaction at the time it is initiated, but then resistance surfaces weeks, months, or even years later.
    - a. Reactions to change can build up and then explode seemingly totally out of proportion.
    - b. The resistance was deferred and stockpiled, and what surfaces is a cumulative response.

Individual Resistance

Five reasons why individuals may resist change are

1. Habit: Life is complex, to cope with having to make hundreds of decisions everyday, we all rely on habits or programmed responses.
2. Security: People with a high need for security are likely to resist change because it threatens their feelings of safety.
3. Economic factors: Another source of individual resistance is concern that changes will lower one's income.
4. Fear of the unknown: Changes substitute ambiguity and uncertainty for the known.
5. Selective information processing: Individuals shape their world through their perceptions. Once they have created this world, it resists change.

Organizational Resistance

Organizations, by their very nature, are conservative. They actively resist change. There are six major sources of organizational resistance

1. Structural inertia: Organizations have built-in mechanisms to produce stability; this structural inertia acts as a counterbalance to sustain stability.
2. Limited focus of change: Organizations are made up of a number of interdependent subsystems. Changing one affects the others.
3. Group inertia: Group norms may act as a constraint.
4. Threat to expertise: Changes in organizational patterns may threaten the expertise of specialized groups.

5. Threat to established power relationships: Redistribution of decision-making authority can threaten long-established power relationships.
6. Threat to established resource allocations: Groups in the organization that control sizable resources often see change as a threat. They tend to be content with the way things are.

Overcoming Resistance to Change

Six tactics used by change agents in dealing with resistance to change:

1. Education and communication:
  - Resistance can be reduced through communicating to help employees see the logic of a change. The assumption is that the source of resistance lies in misinformation or poor communication.
  - It works provided that the source of resistance is inadequate communication and that management-employee relations are characterized by mutual trust and credibility.
2. Participation:
  - It is difficult for individuals to resist a change decision in which they participated.
  - Prior to making a change, those opposed can be brought into the decision process, assuming they have the expertise to make a meaningful contribution.
  - The negatives—potential for a poor solution and great time consumption.
3. Facilitation and support:
  - Employee counseling and therapy, new-skills training, or a short paid leave of absence may facilitate adjustment. The drawbacks—it is time-consuming, expensive, and its implementation offers no assurance of success.
4. Negotiation:
  - Negotiation as a tactic may be necessary when resistance comes from a powerful source.
  - It has potentially high costs, and there is the risk that the change agent is open to the possibility of being blackmailed by other individuals in positions of power.
5. Manipulation and cooptation:
  - Manipulation refers to “covert influence attempts, twisting and distorting facts to make them appear more attractive, withholding undesirable information, and creating false rumors to get employees to accept a change.”
  - Cooptation is “a form of both manipulation and participation.” It seeks to “buy off” the leaders of a resistance group by giving them a key role in the change decision.
  - Both manipulation and cooptation are relatively inexpensive and easy ways to gain support. The tactics can backfire if the targets become aware that they are being tricked or used.
6. Coercion:
  - This is “the application of direct threats or force upon the resisters.”

Examples of coercion are threats of transfer, loss of promotions, negative performance evaluations, and a poor letter of recommendation

The New World of Work

- Peoples’ roles change - from controlled to empowered
- Job preparation changes - from training to education
- Focus of performance measures and compensation shifts - from activities to results
- Advancement criteria change - from protective to productive
- Managers change - from supervisors to coaches
- Organization structures change - from hierarchical to flat

- Executives change - from scorekeepers to leaders

Areas Where Change Can Occur

- Change Technology
- Change the Organization's Structure or Design
- Change Job Responsibilities or tasks performed
- Change People

The Change Agent's Role

Change agent - the individual or group who undertakes the task of introducing and managing a change in an organization

The change agent can be internal or external

The Change Agent

- Generators
- Key Change Agents
- Demonstrators
- Patrons
- Defenders
- Implementers
- External
- Internal
- Adopters

What Can Change Agents Change?

1. Structure

Change Agents can alter one or more of the key elements in an organization's design.

2. Technology

Competitive factors or innovations within an industry often require change agents to introduce new equipment, tools, or operating methods.

Physical Settings

3. People

Change agents help individuals and groups within the organization work more effectively together.

Lesson 39

ORGANIZATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Organizational development (OD) is a term used to encompass a collection of planned-change interventions built on humanistic-democratic values that seek to improve organizational effectiveness and employee well-being.

The OD paradigm values human and organizational growth, collaborative and participative processes, and a spirit of inquiry.

The underlying values in most OD efforts:

- Respect for people
- Trust and support
- Power equalization
- Confrontation
- Participation

OD techniques or interventions for bringing about change: Sensitivity training

- It can go by a variety of names—laboratory training, groups, or T-groups (training groups)—but all refer to a thorough unstructured group interaction.
- Participants discuss themselves and their interactive processes, loosely directed by a professional behavioral scientist.
- Specific results sought include increased ability to empathize with others, improved listening skills, greater openness, increased tolerance of individual differences, and improved conflict resolution skills.

 Survey feedback

- One tool for assessing attitudes held by organizational members, identifying discrepancies among member perceptions, and solving these differences is the survey feedback approach.
- Everyone can participate, but of key importance is the organizational “family.”
  - a. A questionnaire is usually completed by all members in the organization or unit.
  - b. Organization members may be asked to suggest questions or may be interviewed.
  - c. The questionnaire asks for perceptions and attitudes on a broad range of topics.
- The data from this questionnaire are tabulated with data pertaining to an individual’s specific “family” and to the entire organization and distributed to employees.
  - a. These data then become the springboard for identifying problems and clarifying issues.
  - b. Particular attention is given to encouraging discussion and ensuring that discussions focus on issues and ideas and not on attacking individuals.
- Finally, group discussion in the survey feedback approach should result in members identifying possible implications of the questionnaire’s findings.

 Process consultation

- The purpose of process consultation is for an outside consultant to assist a manager, “to perceive, understand, and act upon process events” that might include work flow, informal relationships among unit members, and formal communication channels.
- The consultant works with the client in jointly diagnosing what processes need improvement.

- a. By having the client actively participate in both the diagnosis and the development of alternatives, there will be greater understanding of the process and the remedy and less resistance to the action plan chosen.
- b. The process consultant need not be an expert in solving the particular problem that is identified. The consultant's expertise lies in diagnosis and developing a helping relationship.

Team building

- It utilizes high-interaction group activities to increase trust and openness among team members.
- Team building can be applied within groups or at the inter-group level.
- Team building is applicable to the case of interdependence. The objective is to improve coordinative efforts of members, which will result in increasing the team's performance.
- The activities considered in team building typically include goal setting, development of interpersonal relations among team members, role analysis, and team process analysis.
- Team building attempts to use high interaction among members to increase trust and openness.
  - a. Begin by having members attempt to define the goals and priorities of the team.
  - b. Following this, members can evaluate the team's performance—how effective is the team in structuring priorities and achieving its goals?
  - c. This should identify potential problem areas.
- Team building can also address itself to clarifying each member's role on the team.

Inter-group development

- A major area of concern in OD is the dysfunctional conflict that exists between groups. It seeks to change the attitudes, stereotypes, and perceptions that groups have of each other.
- There are several approaches to inter-group development. A popular method emphasizes problem solving.
  - a. Each group meets independently to develop lists of its perception of itself, the other group, and how it believes the other group perceives it.
  - b. The groups then share their lists, after which similarities and differences are discussed.
  - c. Differences are clearly articulated, and the groups look for the causes of the disparities.
- Once the causes of the difficulty have been identified, the groups can move to the integration phase—working to develop solutions that will improve relations between the groups.
- Subgroups, with members from each of the conflicting groups, can now be created for further diagnosis and to begin to formulate possible alternative actions that will improve relations.

Appreciative Inquiry

- Most OD approaches are problem-centered. They identify a problem or set of problems, then look for a solution. Appreciative inquiry seeks to identify the unique qualities and special strengths of an organization.

The AI process essentially consists of four steps

- Discovery. The idea is to find out what people think are the strengths of the organization. For instance, employees are asked to recount times they felt the organization worked best or when they specifically felt most satisfied with their jobs.
- Dreaming. The information from the discovery phase is used to speculate on possible futures for the organization. For instance, people are asked to envision the organization in five years and to describe what is different.

- Design. Based on the dream articulation, participants focus on finding a common vision of how the organization will look and agree on its unique qualities.
- Destiny. In this final step, participants discuss how the organization is going to fulfill its dream. This typically includes the writing of action plans and development of implementation strategies.

Contemporary Change Issues for Today's Managers

Stimulating Innovation

1. *How can an organization become more innovative?

- There is no guaranteed formula; certain characteristics surface again and again. They are grouped into structural, cultural, and human resource categories.

2. *Change refers to making things different. Innovation is a more specialized kind of change.

- Innovation is a new idea applied to initiating or improving a product, process, or service.
- All innovations involve change, but not all changes necessarily involve new ideas or lead to significant improvements.
- Innovations in organizations can range from small incremental improvements to significant change efforts.

3. *Sources of innovation:

- Structural variables are the most studied potential source of innovation.
- First, organic structures positively influence innovation because they facilitate flexibility, adaptation and cross-fertilization.
- Second, long tenure in management is associated with innovation. Managerial tenure apparently provides legitimacy and knowledge of how to accomplish tasks and obtain desired outcomes.
- Third, innovation is nurtured where there are slack resources.
- Finally, inter-unit communication is high in innovative organizations. There is a high use of committee, task forces, cross-functional teams and other mechanisms that facilitate interaction.

4. *Innovative organizations tend to have similar cultures:

- They encourage experimentation.
- They reward both successes and failures.
- They celebrate mistakes.
- Managers in innovative organizations recognize that failures are a natural by-product of venturing into the unknown.

5. *Human resources:

- Innovative organizations actively promote the training and development. They offer high job security so employees do not fear getting fired for making mistakes.
- They encourage individuals to become champions of change. Once a new idea is developed, idea champions actively and enthusiastically promote the idea, build support, overcome resistance, and ensure that the innovation is implemented.
- Champions have common personality characteristics: extremely high self-confidence, persistence, energy, and a tendency to take risks.
- They also display characteristics associated with transformational leadership. Idea champions have jobs that provide considerable decision-making discretion.

Lesson 40

STRESS AND MANAGING STRESS*Overview

Stress affects individual well-being and has the potential to affect the extent to which individuals and organizations achieve their goals and perform at a high level. Stress is bound up with workers' personal lives; thus the study of stress also entails exploring the nature of work-life linkages.

- ☛ People experience stress when they face opportunities or threats that they perceive as important and also perceive they might not be able to handle or deal with effectively. An opportunity is something that has the potential to benefit a person. A threat is something that has the potential to harm a person. Stress is a highly personal experience influenced by an individual's personality, abilities, and perceptions; what is stressful for one person might not be stressful for another.
- ☛ Stress can have physiological, psychological, and behavioral consequences. The relationship between stress and physiological consequences is complicated, and the most serious physiological consequences (for example, cardiovascular disease and heart attack) result only after considerably high levels of stress have been experienced for a prolonged period of time. Psychological consequences of stress include negative feelings, moods, and emotions; negative attitudes; and burnout. Potential behavioral consequences of stress include job performance, strained interpersonal relations, absenteeism, and turnover.
- ☛ Workers who are responsible for helping others sometimes experience burnout. The three key signs of burnout are feelings of low personal accomplishment, emotional exhaustion, and depersonalization.
- ☛ A certain level of stress is positive in that it can result in high levels of job performance. When stress levels are excessively high, negative stress is experienced, and performance suffers. Other potential behavioral consequences of high stress include strained interpersonal relations, absenteeism, and turnover.
- ☛ Potential stresses can arise from workers' personal lives, job responsibilities, membership in work groups and organizations, and work-life linkages. Stresses from workers' personal lives include major and minor life events. Job-related stresses include role conflict, role ambiguity, overload, under-load, challenging assignments, and promotions, and conditions that impact workers' economic well-being. Group- and organization-related stresses include misunderstandings, conflicts and interpersonal disagreements, uncomfortable working conditions, and dangerous or unsafe working conditions. Stresses arising out of work-life linkages result when work roles conflict with people's personal lives.
- ☛ Coping is the step people take to deal with stresses. Problem-focused coping is the step people take to deal directly with the source of stress. Emotion-focused coping is the step people take to deal with their stressful feelings and emotions. Most of the time, people engage in both types of coping when dealing with a stressor.
- ☛ Some problem-focused coping strategies that individuals can use are time management, getting help from a mentor, and role negotiation. Some emotion-focused coping strategies for individuals are exercise, meditation, social support, and clinical counseling. Some problem-focused coping strategies that organizations can use are job redesign and rotation, reduction of uncertainty, job security, company day care, flexible work schedules and job sharing, and telecommuting. Some emotion-focused coping strategies for organizations are on-site exercise facilities, personal days and sabbaticals, organizational support, and employee assistance programs.

Consequences of Stress

Stress shows itself in a number of ways—physiological, psychological, and behavioral symptoms.

1. Physiological symptoms:

- Most of the early concern with stress was directed at physiological symptoms due to the fact that specialists in the health and medical sciences researched the topic.
- Physiological symptoms have the least direct relevance to students of OB.

2. Psychological symptoms:

Job-related stress can cause job-related dissatisfaction.

- Job dissatisfaction is “the simplest and most obvious psychological effect” of stress.
- Multiple and conflicting demands—lack of clarity as to the incumbent’s duties, authority, and responsibilities—increase stress and dissatisfaction.
- The less control people have over the pace of their work, the greater the stress and dissatisfaction.

3. Behavioral symptoms:

- Behaviorally related stress symptoms include changes in productivity, absence, and turnover, as well as changes in eating habits, increased smoking or consumption of alcohol, rapid speech, fidgeting, and sleep disorders.
- The stress-performance relationship is shown in Exhibit 19-11.
  - a. The logic underlying the inverted U is that low to moderate levels of stress stimulate the body and increase its ability to react.
  - b. Individuals then often perform their tasks better, more intensely, or more rapidly.
  - c. But too much stress places unattainable demands or constraints on a person, which result in lower performance.
  - d. Even moderate levels of stress can have a negative influence on performance over the long term as the continued intensity of the stress wears down the individual and saps his/her energy resources.
- In spite of the popularity and intuitive appeal of the inverted-U model, it doesn’t get a lot of empirical support.

Recognizing Stress

- Short-term physical symptoms
- Long-term physical symptoms

- Internal symptoms
- Behavioral symptoms

Short-Term Physical Symptoms

- Faster heart beat
- Increased sweating
- Cool skin
- Cold hands and feet
- Feelings of nausea, or 'Butterflies in stomach'
- Rapid Breathing
- Tense Muscles
- Dry Mouth
- A desire to urinate
- Diarrhea

Long-term Physical Symptoms

- Change in appetite
- Frequent colds
- Illnesses such as:
- Asthma
- Back pain
- Digestive problems
- Headaches
- Aches and pains
- Feelings of intense and long-term tiredness

Internal Symptoms

- Worry or anxiety
- Confusion, and an inability to concentrate or make decisions
- Feeling ill
- Feeling out of control or overwhelmed by events
- Mood changes:
  - Depression
  - Frustration
  - Hostility
- Helplessness
- Restlessness
- Being more lethargic
- Difficulty sleeping
- Drinking more alcohol and smoking more
- Changing eating habits
- Relying more on medication

Behavioral Symptoms

- Talking too fast or too loud
- Fiddling and twitching, nail biting, grinding teeth, drumming fingers, pacing, etc.
- Bad moods
- Being irritable
- Defensiveness

- Being critical
- Aggression
- Irrationality
- Overreaction and reacting emotionally
- Reduced personal effectiveness
- Being unreasonably negative
- Making less realistic judgments
- Being unable to concentrate and having difficulty making decisions
- Being more forgetful
- Making more mistakes
- Being more accident prone
- Changing work habits
- Increased absenteeism
- Neglect of personal appearance

Chemical and Nutritional Stress

- Caffeine-raises levels of stress hormones
- Sweets or chocolate-causes body to release too much insulin
- Salt-raises blood pressure
- Unhealthy diet-leads to illness which increases stress

Lifestyle and Job Stress

- Too much or too little work
- Having to perform beyond your experience or perceived abilities
- Having to overcome unnecessary obstacles
- Time pressures and deadlines
- Keeping up with new developments
- Changes in procedures and policies
- Lack of relevant information, support and advice
- Lack of clear objectives
- Unclear expectations of your role
- Responsibility for people, budgets or equipment
- Career development stress:
  - Under-promotion, frustration and boredom with current role
  - Over-promotion beyond abilities
  - Lack of a clear plan for career development
  - Lack of opportunity
  - Lack of job security
- Stress from your organization or your clients.
- Personal and family stresses.

Environment and Job Stress

- Your working environment can cause stress
  - Crowding or invasion of personal space
  - Insufficient work space
  - Noise
  - Dirty or untidy conditions
  - Pollution
  - Other environmental causes

Fatigue and Overwork

- Stress builds up over a long time
- Trying to achieve too much in too little time
- “Hurry Sickness”-vicious circle of stress causing you to hurry jobs and do them badly.

Managing Stress

High or low levels of stress sustained over long periods of time, can lead to reduced employee performance and, thus, require action by management.

1. Individual approaches:

- Effective individual strategies include implementing time management techniques, increasing physical exercise, relaxation training, and expanding the social support network.
- Practicing time management principles such as:
  - a. making daily lists of activities to be accomplished
  - b. prioritizing activities by importance and urgency
  - c. scheduling activities according to the priorities set
  - d. knowing your daily cycle and handling the most demanding parts of your job during the high part of your cycle when you are most alert and productive
- Noncompetitive physical exercise has long been recommended as a way to deal with excessive stress levels.
- Individuals can teach themselves to reduce tension through relaxation techniques such as meditation, hypnosis, and biofeedback.
- Having friends, family, or work colleagues to talk to provides an outlet for excessive stress.

2. Organizational approaches

- Strategies that management might want to consider include:
  - a. improved personnel selection and job placement
  - b. use of realistic goal setting, redesigning of jobs
  - c. training
  - d. increased employee involvement
  - e. improved organizational communication
  - f. establishment of corporate wellness programs

Stress Management

“Stress Management Procedures for helping people cope with or reduce stress already being experienced”

Stress Prevention

Dealing with Long-Term Stress

- Fatigue and exhaustion
  - Go to bed earlier
  - Take a good break (vacation)
  - Change work commitments if possible
  - Time management strategies
- Handling depression
  - Deep depression is a clinical illness and should be handled professionally
  - Otherwise
- Positive thinking
- Talk to people and get support
- Get away from situation causing stress
- Lack of self-confidence
  - Set personal goals
  - List your shortcomings and deal with them
  - List the things that worry you and see if it is really important to worry about them at all.

- Write down the things you do well
- Positive thinking
- Relationships
  - Being more assertive will help
  - Improve your social skills
  - Are other people contributing to this problem? Are you better off without them?
- Standards
  - Are your standards impossibly high?

Guide to Performance Management

This Guide to Performance Management has been produced and published by the UCSD Human Resources Department. It is intended for anyone who manages the performance of others. Whether you are a first-time work leader or an experienced supervisor, manager, program director or department chair, this Guide will provide you with useful information and step-by-step guidelines about the performance management process.

You are involved in performance management when you:

- establish specific job assignments
- write job descriptions assign responsibility for strategic initiatives develop and apply performance standards
- discuss job performance with the employee and provide feedback on strengths and improvements needed
- conduct an annual performance evaluation
- plan for improved performance and employee development goals.

This Guide will help you and those whose performance you manage to plan for results which will meet or exceed your expectations. You will learn how to work collaboratively with your employees to:

- identify and describe the employee's essential job functions in support of the mission of the organization
- identify and define strategic initiatives appropriate to the employee's essential functions which support the goals of the organization
- develop realistic and appropriate performance standards
- give and receive helpful behavioral feedback about performance
- write and deliver constructive performance evaluations
- plan education and development opportunities to sustain, improve or build on current performance.

If you have questions, or if you have not managed work performance before, we recommend that you:

- read the personnel policies and procedures concerning your employees
- contact the Human Resources Generalist for your area at the Medical Center
- consult the Human Resources representative in your campus department
- consult the Employee Relations consultant for your campus department
- Enroll in the performance management-related courses offered by Staff Education and Development on campus.

Question No: 66 ( Marks: 5 )

Discuss why reward power is the easiest base of power to use.

The opposite of coercive power is reward power.

People get motivation when they get positive benefits; therefore, one who can distribute rewards they view them as valuable.

If we can give someone something of positive value or remove something of negative value, we have reward power over that person.

These rewards could of different types depending upon the how the person value these rewards

- Coercive power and reward power opposite of each other.

If we can remove something of positive value from someone or give something of negative value upon him then we have coercive power over that person.

Being an agent of change we like to proceed

Question No: 67 ( Marks: 10 )

What factors provoke the organizational change; as being the initiator of such change how will you proceed?

Organizational change is the process to take an organization away from its present state and toward some future state to increase its effectiveness. Due to changing nature of our environment its necessary to keeping changing organizational strategies to adjust with environment.

Force like economic, Policies , diversity , competitive forces keep changing with the passage of time and an organization is continuously interacting with these forces.

So its become necessity for the organization to change to handle those external changes.

Managers are the primary change agents in most organizations.

There are two type of forces of change

Internal and external

External foces : economics, Technology, social and Political forces

Internal : company crises, effectiveness of decision making,

During the change we face the different type of internal resistance.

Will try to overcome the resistance by

Education and communication: we can reduce resistance by provide more information about the change and giving positive view of that change

Manipulation and cooptation:

Twisting and distorting facts to make them appear more attractive, and hide undesirable information, and creating false rumors to get employees to accept a change

Support and Training Employee counseling is very powerful tool to get support, New-skills training, or a short paid leave also can facilitate adjustment. Only draw back of it is, time-consuming, expensive, implementation offers no guarantee of success.

Negotiation Negotiation as a tactic may be necessary when resistance is from powerful source.

Coercion we can use threats of transfer, loss of promotions, negative performance Evaluations, and a poor letter of recommendation

Question No: 68 ( Marks: 10 )

Which bases of power are more effective, also explain how these bases can be used productively.?

Power :

Power refers to a capacity that A has to influence the behavior of B, so that B acts in accordance with A's wishes

Referent Power:

Referent power is based on identification with a person who has desirable resources or personal qualities.

If I like, respect and admire you, you can exercise power on me because I want to please you. It helps explain, for instance why celebrities are paid so high to introduce products in commercial Marketing. These celebrities has referent power.

Expert power

Expert power is influence as a result of expertise or special skill or knowledge.

As jobs become more specialized we become increasingly dependent on experts to achieve goals. Like doctors have expert power what prescription or advice they give they exercise their expert power.

Most of us follow their advice that our they gives us.

you should also recognize that computer specialists are able to wield power as a result of their expertise. Expertise has become one of the most powerful sources of influence as the world has become more technologically oriented.

Legitimate Power: in organization most frequent access to one or more of the power bases is structural position. This is called legitimate power. It represents the formal authority to control and use organizational resources.

It include reward and coercive power. Legitimate power, is border than the power to coerce and reward. Specifically, it includes acceptance by members in an organization of the authority of a position. School principals, CEO of company are some of example of legitimate power.

Charismatic Power:

- Is an extension of referent power. An individual's personality and interpersonal style make others to follow because they can articulate attractive visions.

Holder of this kind of power , take personal risks, demonstrate follower sensitivity.

Coercive Power:

Base of coercive power is dependent on fear or threat of application of physical pain or generate the fear.

In the organization, A has coercive power over B if A can dismiss, suspend, or demote B

Reward Power:

The opposite of coercive power is reward power. People comply because doing so produces positive benefits; therefore, one who can distribute rewards that others view as valuable. These rewards can be anything depending upon the person how much that reward is valuable for him.

I think Reward power is more powerful because you can give reward to person depending up on that how much they value that reward. Like in organization if you wanted to get something done and your subordinate know that their work will be given a proper reward then he/she put his best to give output by keep his reward in mind

- ▶ Classical conditioning
- ▶ Operant conditioning
- ▶ Social learning
- ▶ Contemporary theory

Operant conditioning where there is reinforcement of the behavior by a reward or a punishment. The theory of operant conditioning was developed by B.F. Skinner and is known as Radical Behaviorism. The word 'operant' refers to the way in which behavior 'operates on the environment'. Briefly, a behavior may result either in reinforcement, which increases the likelihood of the behavior recurring, or punishment, which decreases the likelihood of the behavior recurring. It is important to note that, a punishment is not considered to be applicable if it does not result in the reduction of the behavior, and so the terms punishment and reinforcement are determined as a result of the actions. Within this framework, behaviorists are particularly interested in measurable changes in behavior.

What continuum in the two-factor theory is made up of the hygiene factors?

► No dissatisfaction to dissatisfaction

► No dissatisfaction to satisfaction

► Satisfaction to no satisfaction

► Satisfaction to dissatisfaction

According to Herzberg, the factors that led to job satisfaction were separate and distinct from those that led to job dissatisfaction. Therefore, managers who sought to eliminate factors that created job dissatisfaction could bring about workplace harmony but not necessarily motivation. Because they don't motivate employees, the extrinsic factors that create job dissatisfaction were called hygiene factors. When these factors are adequate, people will not be dissatisfied, but they will not be satisfied (or motivated) either. To motivate people on their jobs, Herzberg suggested emphasizing motivators, the intrinsic factors that increase job satisfaction.

How can charismatic leadership hurt an organization?

Answer :

A charismatic leader is one who might not have legitimate authority over the followers but followers respect him for his charisma, knowledge, expertise and his vision.

Charismatic leaders can hurt an organization because their followers might go against the legitimate chain of command of the organization to follow the leader. As it is not necessary for the charismatic leader to have legitimate authority therefore he might not follow the proper chain of command. This creates the problem of unity of command. People will follow two managers. One will be their manager according to the company hierarchy or structure and one will be the leader. This might create people-role conflict for employees. This affects the organization in a negative way and hurt the organization.

Question No: 66 ( Marks: 5 )

“As important as attracting good employees is, it is just as important to retain them”. How you can justify this statement.

Answer : Employees are the biggest assets for an organization. They are the real distinctive competency of an organization. The organizations who pay heed to this fact are the most successful ones. Technology and other resources that a successful organization holds can be acquired by other organizations as well but motivated, expert and skilled employees that one firm has cannot be duplicated easily by other firms. That is the main reason competing firms try to buy out employees from their rivals in an attempt to gain the distinctive competencies that the rival holds because of these employees.

Therefore for an organization to be successful, it should not only attract or hire good employees but it should also retain them. There are a number of reasons why retaining is also as important or even more important than hiring good employees. Some of the reasons are:

- 1) The company might spend a lot of money on the training and development of employees and once the employee leaves the company, the company not only suffers in terms of employee loss but also financial loss which was caused because of the wastage of training resources on the leaving employee.
- 2) When an employee leaves and his position is vacant, the company will need to hire someone new in his/her place. The new person will need to be trained or will take time to get to work on the same position. This wastes valuable company resources and lowers productivity of the company.
- 3) The employee who has been working for a company for a longer time knows the company culture and has accepted it to a great extent. But when this employee leaves and a new employee is hired in his place, it will take time for the new employee to get acquainted with the culture and norms of the organization.
- 4) When an employee leaves this does not only affect him but demoralizes other employees as well and gives an impression that people don't like to work for this company and the employees who are sticking around might be making a mistake. This often urges other employees also to either look for better opportunities and they lose loyalty and commitment to the company.
- 5) The employee working for a company might have acquired good experience after a considerable amount of time working for the company and if he leaves then this experience can't be replaced. The company might hire some one with the same qualification but the experience that the leaving employee has will not be there.

Because of all the important reasons mentioned above, it is very important that a company not only attracts good employees but should also strive to retain them by making policies that foster long term commitment and loyalty.

Question No: 67 ( Marks: 10 )

What is flextime? What are the advantages of flextime from an employee's perspective and from management's perspective?

Answer : Flextime is a work arrangement where an employee works for the same core hours during the day but the arrangement of these hours or how he makes up these hours from the day is flexible. For example a company might have a policy for employees to work for eight hours every day and the company starts at 8.00 AM. So in flextime arrangement the employee might be given the discretion of working for eight hours but not necessarily from 8 AM. An employee might start for example at 10 AM and work up to 6 AM thereby completing eight hours of work and starting at his convenient time.

This is only one example of flextime. Other methods include flexible or compressed work weeks where the employee can work for more hours during some days and thereby reducing the total working days during the week. Others include job sharing , part time work arrangements and telecommuting.

Advantages from employee's perspective:

- 1) Flexible working hours will suit many people and they will be more satisfied with their work and will not have to look for other employment options.
- 2) Working husbands and wives can easily arrange work to take care of their children. For example the wife might arrange her working hours so that either she or the husband is always with the children.
- 3) If a company allows telecommuting for example then it can get more work force options because then those women can also work who need to be at home. Working from home can help these women earn money as well as attending to their family commitments.
- 4) Compressed working weeks might help those people who can work for a less number of days for a week for example four out of seven days and extend their working hours per day and then go to their families during the three days off in case their families live in some other area or away from their place of work.
- 5) There might be many people who would not work at all if flextime option was not available for example for college students who want to work part time because during the day they cannot work. So for these cases flextime will make more types of jobs available to them and they can easily work for example during the evenings and earn without affecting their education.

Advantages from employer's perspective

- 1) The biggest advantage from the employer's perspective is that he will get better productivity from employees working in flextime
- 2) The employees will be satisfied and hence the employer will not have to worry about boosting the morale of the employees or for employees leaving the company to find other jobs that suits them..
- 3) This is a very good method to retain employees because when employees get such a good option of flexible timing, they will not be tempted to leave the organization.
- 4) Using flextime the company can hire experts who will not be willing to work for example during the day maybe because they might be working with some other company. So this way the company can get the experts they need by allowing them to work as part-timers.

Question No: 68 ( Marks: 10 )

Sometimes data gathered from interview is biased. Explain different interviewing mistakes that can lessen the effectiveness of a job interview.

Answer :

Interview is a method of verbal communication and therefore is subjective. It depends a lot on the context under which the interview was conducted and also on the interviewer's skills as well his perceptions. As human interaction gets involved here, therefore the interview can become very subjective instead of being objective. A lot of issues related to human nature can be introduced during the interview which might make it biased. The biasness depends on many factors. These factors can lead to interviewing mistakes which adversely affects the effectiveness of the job interview.

Some of the mistakes that can lessen the effectiveness of the job interview are :

1) Selective perception: The selective perception of the interviewer might affect the interview. Different people perceive the same situation at the same time in different ways. This is due to their life experiences, education, values and personality. So based on these they might interpret the same situation in different ways. This might create biasness in their judgment.

2) Projection: Some interviewers might have some qualities and they might value them a lot and might want to see the same qualities in the interviewee and if they don't see the same qualities, they will be biased in their interview.

3) Stereotyping : Stereotyping is the preset judgement a person makes based on the group to which the interviewee belongs. For example the interviewer might have a stereotype that women are not good for managerial positions so he might get biased into not giving good review in job interview to a woman who applied for the a management position.

4) Halo effect: Halo effect is when a person makes good or bad judgement based on just one quality. In this the interviewer might get biased based on just one quality and might give good reviews without paying attention to other good qualities or bad qualities that a person has. Similarly the same thing goes for a bad quality that the interviewer might see in the interviewee.

5) Similar to me effect :: In this the interviewer might try to find qualities in an interviewee which is similar to the interviewer. If he doesn't find any such quality he will be biased to not hire the job applicant. If on the other hand he sees such a quality then he will be biased to hire the job applicant without paying attention to other qualities needed for the job

6) Inadequate knowledge about the job: Some times the interviewer might not be well-versed with the exact requirements for a position for which he might be conducting the interview. For example an HR manager hiring for a technical job in the information technology department. As this is a completely technical field so the manager taking the interview might not be capable enough to do the interview because of his limited knowledge of the field of computer sciences. In this case he will be biased to see human or communications skills more than the technical skills the job applicant has that are more important to the job than his human skills. Similarly the interviewer might be hiring for a non technical position but he might lack the knowledge of the exact requirements or specifications for the job opening.

7) Previous interviewee effect: If an interviewee is being interviewed immediately after a perceived good or bad interviewee then he will be judged against the previous interviewee. If the previous interviewee was perceived as very good by the interviewer then the next person will have difficulties in making a good impression on the interviewer and if the previous interviewee was perceived as bad then the next one will be considered good even if he is just slightly better than the previous. So this creates a bias on the part of the interviewer and is one of the mistakes in job interviews which lessens its effectiveness.

8) Preconceived notion about the interviewee : If the interviewer has already heard about the job interviewee before the interview from some other sources whether it is something good or bad about him, the interviewer will already have made an impression about the interviewee even before the interview begins. So this can introduce a good or a bad bias on the part of the interviewer and lessens the effectiveness of the interview.

9) Emotional state of the interviewer : As interview is a human interaction so it is prone to human emotions. If the interviewer is not emotionally stable then it might bias the interview. For example an interviewer sitting down to take the interview has just heard some bad news before the start of the interview sessions and that might affect his judgement in reviewing the right person for the job.

All the factors mentioned above are mistakes that are involved in the interview process and that might affect the effectiveness of the job interview. There are many techniques to cope with these problems and make the interview as objective as possible so that exactly the right person can be hired for the right job.

Which of the following is NOT a strategy to reduce social loafing?

- ▶ Have group members evaluate each other's contributions

- ▶ Keep work groups as small as possible
- ▶ Make individual contributions or levels of performance in a group identifiable
- ▶ Contributions of the group, not the individual, are most important

To reduce social loafing, group members must know that each individual's contributions will be evaluated. The more a person can evaluate individuals the less social loafing will happen in a group

Question No: 41 ( Marks: 5 )

What purposes do performance evaluations serve in organizations?

Performance evaluations have good effect on organizations. An employee's performance appraisal is very much dependent on the perceptual process. Although the appraisal can be objective, many jobs are evaluated in subjective terms. Subjective measures are, by definition, judgmental. To the degree that managers use subjective measures in appraising employees, what the evaluator perceives to be good or bad employee characteristics or behaviors will significantly influence the outcome of the appraisal.

Question No: 43 ( Marks: 10 )

Distinguish between the roles of mediator, arbitrator, conciliator, and consultant.

Consultant: The consultant works with the client in jointly diagnosing what processes need improvement. The consultant's expertise lies in diagnosis and developing a helping relationship.

Arbitrator: An arbitrator undertakes an awesome responsibility. He or she will be judge, jury, clerk, stenographic reporter and appellate review tribunal compressed into a single individual. When an arbitrator decides a case it is assumed that the arbitrator heard the evidence, understood it completely and applied the law and/or principles of justice and equity to achieve the correct result. The parties must have complete confidence in the arbitrator's fairness and integrity and in his or her ability to do all of these things.

How do the parties know that the person they selected has these attributes and will do these things? In classic arbitration they knew and trusted the individual. The arbitrator was the wise old man on the fishing boat dock, whom everyone knew, and who was trusted to know more about fish than anyone else. The fishermen were able to place complete confidence in him because they knew him intimately. Today we have gone to the opposite extreme. The arbitrator who is sufficiently close to a party to have instilled this type of confidence is for that very reason arguably disqualified. The arbitrator selected ideally has no relationships with any of the parties or their counsel. The parties must attempt to select the right person based in large part upon the information they can obtain from the potential arbitrator. The disclosure process has thus become the modern surrogate for the common knowledge of the marketplace.

Mediator: A mediator is a neutral third party who facilitates a negotiated solution by using reasoning and persuasion, suggesting alternatives, and the like.

Conciliator: The conciliator can contact and interview disputing parties over the telephone, provide information about the Residential Tenancies and Rooming Accommodation Act 2008, assist the parties in the exchange of information including relevant documents such as receipts, facilitate the resolution of disputes by sharing offers and suggesting options, provide a notice of unresolved dispute to enable an application to the tribunal for a hearing where a dispute remains unresolved.

Question No: 44 ( Marks: 10 )

What is flextime? What are the advantages of flextime from an employee's perspective and from management's perspective?

Flextime: Employees work during a common core time period each day but have discretion in forming their total workday from a flexible set of hours outside the core.

In today's competitive work place employers must remain attuned to the needs of their work force. Those that do will have a distinct advantage. One of the tools being used by U. S. firms to meet this objective is the use of flextime. The reason is simple: it is very popular from the employee's viewpoint. A recent survey showed that 78 percent of the respondents favored flexible work schedules so that they could spend more time with their families, even if it meant slower career advancement.

The concept of flextime refers to a variety of flexible arrangements including unconventional hours, part-time work, job sharing, leaves of absence and working at home. From a company's perspective, allowing employees to work fewer and more pliable hours is a powerful way to attract and retain top caliber people.

From the employee's perspective, having flexible work arrangements gives one a greater sense of empowerment. Flextime gives many a stronger feeling that their company trusts them. Additionally, in these times of dual-career parents, it helps parents raise their children more responsibly. It also turns out that professional who have such arrangements are fiercely loyal to their employers

Survey feedback is an organizational development technique for bringing change. Discuss.

Survey feedback

One tool for assessing attitudes held by organizational members, identifying discrepancies among member perceptions, and solving these differences is the survey feedback approach. Everyone can participate, but of key importance is the organizational "family." A questionnaire is usually completed by all members in the organization or unit. Organization members may be asked to suggest questions or may be interviewed. The questionnaire asks for perceptions and attitudes on a broad range of topics. The data from this questionnaire are tabulated with data pertaining to an individual's specific "family" and to the entire organization and distributed to employees. These data then become the springboard for identifying problems and clarifying issues. Particular attention is given to encouraging discussion and ensuring that discussions focus on issues and ideas and not on attacking individuals. Finally, group discussion in the survey feedback approach should result in members identifying possible implications of the questionnaire's findings.

Differentiate between job description and job specification.

Answer

Job description

The job description is a document that provides information regarding the tasks, duties, and responsibilities of the job. Job description takes on an even greater importance under the Americans with Disabilities Act because the description of essential job functions may be critical to a defense regarding reasonable accommodation.

1. Job Identification – contains the job title, the FLSA status, date, and possible space to indicate who approved the description, the location of the job, the immediate supervisor's title, salary and/or pay scale.
2. Job Summary – should describe the general nature of the job, and includes only its major functions or activities.
3. Relationships – occasionally a relationships statement is included. It shows the jobholders' relationships with others inside and outside the organization.
4. Responsibilities and Duties – The Department of Labor's Dictionary of Occupational Titles can be used for itemizing the job's duties and responsibilities.
5. Standards of Performance – states the standards the employee is expected to achieve under each of the job description's main duties and responsibilities.

Job specification

Minimum acceptable qualifications that a person should possess to perform the job are included in the job specification. Some of the items often included are requirements for education, experience, personality, and physical abilities.

When the organizations opt for the process reengineering?

Answer

Process Reengineering

1. Process reengineering is described as "considering how things would be done if you could start all over from scratch." It comes from the process of taking apart an electronics product and designing a better version.
2. Michael Hammer coined the term as applied to organizations. Reengineering means management should start with a clean sheet of paper—rethinking and redesigning those processes by which the organization creates value and does work, ridding itself of operations that have become antiquated in the computer age.

Three key elements:

- Identifying an organization's distinctive competencies, assessing core processes, and reorganizing horizontally by process
  - a. Distinctive competencies define what it is that the organization is more superior at delivering than its competition.
  - b. Superior store locations, a more efficient distribution system, higher-quality products, more knowledgeable sales personnel, or superior technical support

- Core processes transform materials, capital, information, and labor into products and services that the customer values.
  - a. These range from strategic planning to after-sales customer support; management can determine to what degree each adds value.
  - b. Process value analysis typically uncovers a whole lot of activities that add little value.
- Reengineering requires management to reorganize around horizontal processes.
  - a. This means cross-functional and self-managed teams
  - b. It means focusing on processes rather than functions.
  - c. One of the goals of reengineering is to minimize the necessary amount of management.

How ISO has impacted organizational behavior?

Products or services all over the world have some properties attached to them. The satisfaction they provide, against the resources paid, is called quality of the product. ISO tried to put some basic properties of the product, by which we can understand that the product, will provide the benefit at least the level of the quality prescribed.

The organizations which follow the standards provide by the ISO for their product and services are globally accepted. So in the current situation if any organization would like to introduce their product globally they have to follow some rules and regulation prescribed by ISO.

Quality can be achieved by applying some strict rules in the transformation process of the organization. And to follow these rules is the responsibility for everyone in the organization.

Edwerd Deming introduced the TQM (Total Quality Management) concept at organizational level. This quality management are the steps by following an organization produce quality products, and keep survival in the competitive world.

Question No: 65 ( Marks: 3 )

How can charismatic leadership hurt an organization?

Answer :

A charismatic leader is one who might not have legitimate authority over the followers but followers respect him for his charisma, knowledge, expertise and his vision.

Charismatic leaders can hurt an organization because their followers might go against the legitimate chain of command of the organization to follow the leader. As it is not necessary for the charismatic leader to have legitimate authority therefore he might not follow the proper chain of command. This creates the problem of unity of command. People will follow two managers. One will be their manager according to the company hierarchy or structure and one will be the leader. This might create people-role conflict for employees. This affects the organization in a negative way and hurt the organization.

“As important as attracting good employees is, it is just as important to retain them”. How you can justify this statement.

Answer : Employees are the biggest assets for an organization. They are the real distinctive competency of an organization. The organizations who pay heed to this fact are the most successful ones. Technology and other resources that a successful organization holds can be acquired by other organizations as well but motivated, expert and skilled employees that one firm has cannot be duplicated easily by other firms. That is the main reason competing firms try to buy out employees from their rivals in an attempt to gain the distinctive competencies that the rival holds because of these employees.

Therefore for an organization to be successful, it should not only attract or hire good employees but it should also retain them. There are a number of reasons why retaining is also as important or even more important than hiring good employees. Some of the reasons are:

- 1) The company might spend a lot of money on the training and development of employees and once the employee leaves the company, the company not only suffers in terms of employee loss but also financial loss which was caused because of the wastage of training resources on the leaving employee.
- 2) When an employee leaves and his position is vacant, the company will need to hire someone new in his/her place. The new person will need to be trained or will take time to get to work on the same position. This wastes valuable company resources and lowers productivity of the company.
- 3) The employee who has been working for a company for a longer time knows the company culture and has accepted it to a great extent. But when this employee leaves and a new employee is hired in his place, it will take time for the new employee to get acquainted with the culture and norms of the organization.
- 4) When an employee leaves this does not only affect him but demoralizes other employees as well and gives an impression that people don't like to work for this company and the employees who are sticking around might be making a mistake. This often urges other employees also to either look for better opportunities and they lose loyalty and commitment to the company.
- 5) The employee working for a company might have acquired good experience after a considerable amount of time working for the company and if he leaves then this experience can't be replaced. The company might hire some one with the same qualification but the experience that the leaving employee has will not be there.

Because of all the important reasons mentioned above, it is very important that a company not only attracts good employees but should also strive to retain them by making policies that foster long term commitment and loyalty.

Question No: 67 ( Marks: 10 )

What is flextime? What are the advantages of flextime from an employee's perspective and from management's perspective?

Answer : Flextime is a work arrangement where an employee works for the same core hours during the day but the arrangement of these hours or how he makes up these hours from the day is flexible. For example a company might have a policy for employees to work for eight hours every day and the company starts at 8.00 AM. So in flextime arrangement the employee might be given the discretion of working for eight hours but not necessarily from 8 AM. An employee might start for example at 10 AM and work up to 6 AM thereby completing eight hours of work and starting at his convenient time.

This is only one example of flextime. Other methods include flexible or compressed work weeks where the employee can work for more hours during some days and thereby reducing the total working days during the week. Others include job sharing , part time work arrangements and telecommuting.

Advantages from employee's perspective:

- 1) Flexible working hours will suit many people and they will be more satisfied with their work and will not have to look for other employment options.
- 2) Working husbands and wives can easily arrange work to take care of their children. For example the wife might arrange her working hours so that either she or the husband is always with the children.
- 3) If a company allows telecommuting for example then it can get more work force options because then those women can also work who need to be at home. Working from home can help these women earn money as well as attending to their family commitments.
- 4) Compressed working weeks might help those people who can work for a less number of days for a week for example four out of seven days and extend their working hours per day and then go to their families during the three days off in case their families live in some other area or away from their place of work.

- 5) There might be many people who would not work at all if flextime option was not available for example for college students who want to work part time because during the day they cannot work. So for these cases flextime will make more types of jobs available to them and they can easily work for example during the evenings and earn without affecting their education.

Advantages from employer's perspective

- 1) The biggest advantage from the employer's perspective is that he will get better productivity from employees working in flextime
- 2) The employees will be satisfied and hence the employer will not have to worry about boosting the morale of the employees or for employees leaving the company to find other jobs that suits them..
- 3) This is a very good method to retain employees because when employees get such a good option of flexible timing, they will not be tempted to leave the organization.
- 4) Using flextime the company can hire experts who will not be willing to work for example during the day maybe because they might be working with some other company. So this way the company can get the experts they need by allowing them to work as part-timers.

Question No: 68 ( Marks: 10 )

Sometimes data gathered from interview is biased. Explain different interviewing mistakes that can lessen the effectiveness of a job interview.

Answer :

Interview is a method of verbal communication and therefore is subjective. It depends a lot on the context under which the interview was conducted and also on the interviewer's skills as well his perceptions. As human interaction gets involved here, therefore the interview can become very subjective instead of being objective. A lot of issues related to human nature can be introduced during the interview which might make it biased. The biasness depends on many factors. These factors can lead to interviewing mistakes which adversely affects the effectiveness of the job interview.

Some of the mistakes that can lessen the effectiveness of the job interview are :

- 1) Selective perception: The selective perception of the interviewer might affect the interview. Different people perceive the same situation at the same time in different ways. This is due to their life experiences, education, values and personality. So based on these they might interpret the same situation in different ways. This might create biasness in their judgment.
- 2) Projection: Some interviewers might have some qualities and they might value them a lot and might want to see the same qualities in the interviewee and if they don't see the same qualities, they will be biased in their interview.
- 3) Stereotyping : Stereotyping is the preset judgement a person makes based on the group to which the interviewee belongs. For example the interviewer might have a stereotype that women are not good for managerial positions so he might get biased into not giving good review in job interview to a woman who applied for the a management position.
- 4) Halo effect: Halo effect is when a person makes good or bad judgement based on just one quality. In this the interviewer might get biased based on just one quality and might give good reviews without paying attention to other good qualities or bad qualities that a person has. Similarly the same thing goes for a bad quality that the interviewer might see in the interviewee.
- 5) Similar to me effect :: In this the interviewer might try to find qualities in an interviewee which is similar to the interviewer. If he doesn't find any such quality he will be biased to not hire the job applicant. If on the other hand he sees such a quality then he will be biased to hire the job applicant without paying attention to other qualities needed for the job
- 6) Inadequate knowledge about the job: Some times the interviewer might not be well-versed with the exact requirements for a position for which he might be conducting the interview. For example an HR manager hiring for a technical job in the information technology department. As this is a completely technical field so the manager taking the interview might not be capable enough to do the interview because of his limited knowledge of the field of computer sciences. In this case he will be biased to see human or communications skills more than the technical skills the job applicant has that are more important to the job than his human skills. Similarly the interviewer might be hiring for a non technical position but he might lack the knowledge of the exact requirements or specifications for the job opening.

- 7) Previous interviewee effect: If an interviewee is being interviewed immediately after a perceived good or bad interviewee then he will be judged against the previous interviewee. If the previous interviewee was perceived as very good by the interviewer then the next person will have difficulties in making a good impression on the interviewer and if the previous interviewee was perceived as bad then the next one will be considered good even if he is just slightly better than the previous. So this creates a bias on the part of the interviewer and is one of the mistakes in job interviews which lessens its effectiveness.
- 8) Preconceived notion about the interviewee : If the interviewer has already heard about the job interviewee before the interview from some other sources whether it is something good or bad about him, the interviewer will already have made an impression about the interviewee even before the interview begins. So this can introduce a good or a bad bias on the part of the interviewer and lessens the effectiveness of the interview.
- 9) Emotional state of the interviewer : As interview is a human interaction so it is prone to human emotions. If the interviewer is not emotionally stable then it might bias the interview. For example an interviewer sitting down to take the interview has just heard some bad news before the start of the interview sessions and that might affect his judgement in reviewing the right person for the job.

All the factors mentioned above are mistakes that are involved in the interview process and that might affect the effectiveness of the job interview. There are many techniques to cope with these problems and make the interview as objective as possible so that exactly the right person can be hired for the right job.

Who in organizations are responsible for managing change activities? 3

- Change agents can be managers, employees of the organization, or outside consultants.
  - Typically, we look to senior executives as agents of change.
- For major change efforts, top managers are increasingly turning to temporary outside consultants with specialized knowledge in the theory and methods of change.
- Consultant change agents can offer a more objective perspective than insiders can.

- They are disadvantaged in that they often have an inadequate understanding of the organization's history, culture, operating procedures, and personnel.

What can management do to create a more ethical culture within an organization? 5

Ethical behavior

– “Good” and “right” as opposed to “bad” or “wrong” in a particular setting.

An organization's ethics are rules, beliefs, and values that outline ways in which managers and workers should behave when confronted with a situation that may help or harm other people inside or outside an organization. Ethical behavior enhances the well-being (the happiness, health, and prosperity) of individuals, groups, organizations, and the organizational environment. Ethics establish the goals and behaviors appropriate to the organization. Many organizations have the goal of making a profit, to be able to pay workers, suppliers, and shareholders. Ethics specifies what actions an organization should take to make a profit and what limits should be put on organizations and their managers to prevent harm. Ethics can also define an organization's social responsibility, moral responsibility toward individuals or groups outside the organization that are directly affected by its actions. Different organizations have different views about social responsibility. Being socially responsible means performing any action as long as it is legal. Others do more than law requires and work to advance the well-being of their employees, customers, and society in general. Ben & Jerry's Homemade, Inc. contributes a percent of profits to charities and community needs. Green Mountain Coffee Roasters seeks out coffee growers who do not use herbicides and pesticides and control soil erosion. All organizations need codes of conduct that spell out fair and equitable behavior to avoid doing harm.

What purposes do performance evaluations serve in organizations? 5

Reading this you can get the answer that what purposes it do for organization.

Performance evaluation

• Managers are strongly influenced in their decision making by the criteria by which they are evaluated. Their performance in decision making will reflect expectation.

Performance Evaluation

• An employee's performance appraisal is very much dependent on the perceptual process.

• Although the appraisal can be objective, many jobs are evaluated in subjective terms. Subjective measures are, by definition, judgmental.

• To the degree that managers use subjective measures in appraising employees, what the evaluator perceives to be good or bad employee characteristics or behaviors will significantly influence the outcome of the appraisal.

Distinguish between the roles of mediator, arbitrator, conciliator, and consultant? 5

- A mediator is a neutral third party who facilitates a negotiated solution by using reasoning and persuasion, suggesting alternatives, and the like.

Arbitrator:

This party imposes its decision on involved parties.

The third party acts as a mediator, taking a neutral stance and helping parties reconcile their differences. If no solution is reached, the third party acts as an arbiter, or judge, imposing a solution.

conciliatory

Two processes occur in any negotiation situation: (1) distributive bargaining, in which parties decide how resources are distributed, and (2) attitudinal structuring, in which parties try to influence their opponent's attitudes, perhaps appearing aggressive to increase their resource share or by appearing conciliatory to preserve a relationship.

consultant

The consultant works with the client in jointly diagnosing what processes need

Improvement

By having the client actively participate in both the diagnosis and the development of alternatives, there will be greater understanding of the process and the remedy and less resistance to the action plan chosen.

The process consultant need not be an expert in solving the particular problem that is identified. The consultant's expertise lies in diagnosis and developing a helping relationship.

What is flextime? What are the advantages of flextime from an employee's perspective and from management's perspective?

Flextime: Employees work during a common core time period each day but have discretion in forming their total workday from a flexible set of hours outside the core.

Survey feedback is an organizational development technique for bringing change. Discuss.?

Survey feedback

□ One tool for assessing attitudes held by organizational members, identifying discrepancies among member perceptions, and solving these differences is the survey feedback approach.

- Everyone can participate, but of key importance is the organizational “family.”
  - a. A questionnaire is usually completed by all members in the organization or unit.
  - b. Organization members may be asked to suggest questions or may be interviewed.
  - c. The questionnaire asks for perceptions and attitudes on a broad range of topics.
- The data from this questionnaire are tabulated with data pertaining to an individual’s specific “family” and to the entire organization and distributed to employees.
  - a. These data then become the springboard for identifying problems and clarifying issues.
  - b. Particular attention is given to encouraging discussion and ensuring that discussions focus on issues and ideas and not on attacking individuals.
- Finally, group discussion in the survey feedback approach should result in members identifying possible implications of the questionnaire’s findings.

How can conflict be managed successfully?

Pondy’s model suggests several methods to resolve conflicts. In collaboration, each side works toward a solution to satisfy its own goals plus the goals of the other side—both parties are better off after conflict resolution. In compromise, both parties negotiate to reach a mutually acceptable solution, but not necessarily one that achieves their goals. A primary responsibility of managers is to help subordinates resolve their disputes. Some managers spend much time managing conflict. Several techniques are helpful in managing conflict so that it results in functional rather than dysfunctional outcomes. These techniques concern changing attitudes and behaviors, changing task relationships, and changing the organizational structure or situation.

Conflict is the struggle that arises when the goal-directed behavior of another person or group.

Whether conflict benefits or harms an organization depends on how it is managed

Explain the role of 360 degree feedback in the measurement of performance.

The 360-degree evaluation is a common tool in human resource management. Simply put, it is a mechanism for evaluating someone's performance based on feedback from everyone with whom the individual comes in contact — supervisors, coworkers, partners, subordinates, the general public. It is a method of collecting input from many sources in an employee's environment.

This can be a powerful tool. Each of wants to know how we're doing in our work. This method of collecting evaluative input is an excellent source of motivation for employees because it provides a truly honest assessment of how the employee and her performance are viewed by a variety of constituents.

Today organizations are working in a dynamic environment where abrupt changes occur. How HR departments have adopted this change to survive in this environment? Explain with logical reasons.

These days market is going too fast and it is very difficult for HR department to retain the employee in the company for many years. Because of this some time HR made the changes in their policies in favor of company.

For example, these days HR has to give some benefits to employer to retain him in company like

Training
Job security
Extra benefits
High salary

These things become more important now a day because of competition in the market.

Initially company not give the transportation and medical to employees but due to change in market conditions now HR has to revive their policies and has to give theses facilities even that now HR announce the family medical insurance policy.

Distinguish between the roles of mediator, arbitrator, conciliator, and consultant.

Consultant: The consultant works with the client in jointly diagnosing what processes need improvement. The consultant's expertise lies in diagnosis and developing a helping relationship.

Arbitrator: An arbitrator undertakes an awesome responsibility. He or she will be judge, jury, clerk, stenographic reporter and appellate review tribunal compressed into a single individual. When an arbitrator decides a case it is assumed that the arbitrator heard the evidence, understood it completely and applied the law and/or principles of justice and equity to achieve the correct result. The parties must have complete confidence in the arbitrator's fairness and integrity and in his or her ability to do all of these things.

How do the parties know that the person they selected has these attributes and will do these things? In classic arbitration they knew and trusted the individual. The arbitrator was the wise old man on the fishing boat dock, whom everyone knew, and who was trusted to know more about fish than anyone else. The fishermen were able to place complete confidence in him because they knew him intimately. Today we have gone to the opposite extreme. The arbitrator who is sufficiently close to a party to have instilled this type of confidence is for that very reason arguably disqualified. The arbitrator selected ideally has no relationships with any of the parties or their counsel. The parties must attempt to select the right person based in large part upon the information they can obtain from the potential arbitrator. The disclosure process has thus become the modern surrogate for the common knowledge of the marketplace.

Mediator: A mediator is a neutral third party who facilitates a negotiated solution by using reasoning and persuasion, suggesting alternatives, and the like.

Conciliator: The conciliator can contact and interview disputing parties over the telephone, provide information about the Residential Tenancies and Rooming Accommodation Act 2008, assist the parties in the exchange of information including relevant documents such as receipts, facilitate the resolution of disputes by sharing offers and suggesting options, provide a notice of unresolved dispute to enable an application to the tribunal for a hearing where a dispute remains unresolved.

What is flextime? What are the advantages of flextime from an employee's perspective and from management's perspective?

Flextime: Employees work during a common core time period each day but have discretion in forming their total workday from a flexible set of hours outside the core.

In today's competitive work place employers must remain attuned to the needs of their work force. Those that do will have a distinct advantage. One of the tools being used by U. S. firms to meet this objective is the use of flextime. The reason is simple: it is very popular from the employee's viewpoint. A recent survey showed that 78 percent of the respondents favored flexible work schedules so that they could spend more time with their families, even if it meant slower career advancement.

The concept of flextime refers to a variety of flexible arrangements including unconventional hours, part-time work, job sharing, leaves of absence and working at home. From a company's perspective, allowing employees to work fewer and more pliable hours is a powerful way to attract and retain top caliber people.

From the employee's perspective, having flexible work arrangements gives one a greater sense of empowerment. Flextime gives many a stronger feeling that their company trusts them. Additionally, in these times of dual-career parents, it helps parents raise their children more responsibly. It also turns out that professional who have such arrangements are fiercely loyal to their employers

The job description is a document that provides information regarding the tasks, duties, and responsibilities of the job. Job description takes on an even greater importance under the Americans with Disabilities Act because the description of essential job functions may be critical to a defense regarding reasonable accommodation.

1. Job Identification – contains the job title, the FLSA status, date, and possible space to indicate who approved the description, the location of the job, the immediate supervisor's title, salary and/or pay scale.
2. Job Summary – should describe the general nature of the job, and includes only its major functions or activities.
3. Relationships – occasionally a relationships statement is included. It shows the jobholders' relationships with others inside and outside the organization.
4. Responsibilities and Duties – The Department of Labor's Dictionary of Occupational Titles can be used for itemizing the job's duties and responsibilities.
5. Standards of Performance – states the standards the employee is expected to achieve under each of the job description's main duties and responsibilities.

When the organizations opt for the process reengineering?

Answer

Process Reengineering

1. Process reengineering is described as "considering how things would be done if you could start all over from scratch." It comes from the process of taking apart an electronics product and designing a better version.
2. Michael Hammer coined the term as applied to organizations. Reengineering means management should start with a clean sheet of paper—rethinking and redesigning those processes by which the organization creates value and does work, ridding itself of operations that have become antiquated in the computer age.

Three key elements:

- Identifying an organization's distinctive competencies, assessing core processes, and reorganizing horizontally by process
  - a. Distinctive competencies define what it is that the organization is more superior at delivering than its competition.
  - b. Superior store locations, a more efficient distribution system, higher-quality products, more knowledgeable sales personnel, or superior technical support
- Core processes transform materials, capital, information, and labor into products and services that the customer values.
  - a. These range from strategic planning to after-sales customer support; management can determine to what degree each adds value.
  - b. Process value analysis typically uncovers a whole lot of activities that add little value.
- Reengineering requires management to reorganize around horizontal processes.
  - a. This means cross-functional and self-managed teams
  - b. It means focusing on processes rather than functions.
  - c. One of the goals of reengineering is to minimize the necessary amount of management.

How strong organizational cultures have great influence on the behavior of its employees?

Organizational cultures are learnt by stories, rituals, and handbook. But the intensity of the culture and the degree to follow it by employees depends upon the employee stage of satisfaction to the organization.

Normally satisfied employees try to follow and adopt organizational culture on them. But unsatisfied employees try to avoid as on where they can.

A strong organizational culture means every employee should follow and if not, negative reinforcement, or punishment will be applied upon him. Some organizations don't compromise on quality, customer satisfaction.

With this degree of how strong the organizational culture is employees have to follow it, otherwise they are ready for the reaction from the organization.

How ISO has impacted organizational behavior?

Products or services all over the world have some properties attached to them. The satisfaction they provide, against the resources paid, is called quality of the product. ISO tried to put some basic properties of the product, by which we can understand that the product, will provide the benefit at least the level of the quality prescribed.

The organizations which follow the standards provide by the ISO for their product and services are globally accepted. So in the current situation if any organization would like to introduce their product globally they have to follow some rules and regulation prescribed by ISO.

Quality can be achieved by applying some strict rules in the transformation process of the organization. And to follow these rules is the responsibility for everyone in the organization.

Edwerd Deming introduced the TQM (Total Quality Management) concept at organizational level. This quality management are the steps by following an organization produce quality products, and keep survival in the competitive world.
