All of the following are the rational steps for the development of a personal budget EXCEPT:
Select correct option:
Establishing goals
Getting the budget approved
Carrying out the budget
Evaluating the budget
Steps in budget making
Developing a budget can be divided into a series of logical steps.
Establishing goals
You should keep in mind your goals while establishing a budget so that you could make the best use of your money.
1. Estimating income
First of all estimate your income and then plan the spending of money. You should be aware of the total amount that you have in order to develop realistic budget.
2. Estimating expenses
Do this by keeping careful track of current spending.
3. Comparing expenses and income.
Remember that the true profit from your labor is the difference between your net income and total expenses. If you spend all your money and you are left with nothing, it is not sensible. You must save something for unseen expenses that may arise in future.
4. Carrying out the budget
Try to spend money according to your budget. If you spend more than the expected amount on various things, then it is no use of making budget.
6. Evaluating the Plan
A budget usually needs reworking until it fits your needs. You can evaluate your budget time to time.
