Case Formulation:

In case formulation section, you are supposed to add the reference of school of thoughts or researches to endorse the reasons of manifestation of any disorder. Suppose if the reason is unconscious conflicts, then you can support your case with the help of psycho-dynamic school of thought. You are also required to find research studies that have been done in regard of that school of thought and that are also linked somewhat to your client's identified problem.

Appendances:
This part would include the scanned copies of tests being used for the assessment of the client.

Instructions:

Mainly your report should encompass following sections, it has already been discussed in the format, but few details are as follows:

1. Background Information/ History

For instance, marital status, no of children (if any), work, health status, family mental health history, family and social relationships, drug and alcohol history, life difficulties, goals, and coping skills and weaknesses.

2. Description of the Presenting Problem

In the next section of your case study, you will describe the problem or symptoms that the client presented with. Describe any physical, emotional, or sensory symptoms reported by the client. Thoughts, feelings, and perceptions related to the symptoms should also be noted. Any screening or diagnostic assessments that are used should also be described in detail and all scores reported.

3. Your Diagnosis

Provide your diagnosis and give the appropriate DSM-5 code. Explain how you reached your diagnosis, how the clients symptoms fit the diagnostic criteria for the disorder(s), or any possible difficulties in reaching a diagnosis.

4. Intervention and Recommendations

The second section of your report will focus on the interventions that can be used to help the client. You may summarize two or more possible treatment approaches. Identify all the possible social, psychological and biological factors that can contribute to the problem of your client and provide recommendations accordingly.

5. Case formulation:

In case formulation you have to link your case with the prevailing theories and researches. You have to discuss which theory/school of thought supports this case, the causes that contributed in client's problems.

6. Appendixes

This part would include the scanned copies of tests being used for the assessment of the client.

Note:

I. Complete all the required parts of your report.

II. Though report would be written on only two cases but for presentation & viva voce, do prepare yourself to talk about the other cases and your experiences during your internship.

III. The internship report should be double space typed on A4 size with bold headings and sub headings, with margins set at top, bottom and right 1 inch whereas left margin should be 1.5 inch.

IV. Internship Report should be uploaded on LMS as an assignment. Hard copy of this report is not required.

V. Students will be provided reference letter by the university on request.
