Direction of Flow within the Organization

Downward Flow

Organizational decisions are made at top level and then flow down to the people who carry them. When employees receive appropriate downward communication from the management, they become motivated and more efficient. They need clear job directions, safety rules, facts about organizational strategy, products, and viewpoints on important controversial issues. They are also concerned about their benefits such as health care, promotions, pensions, training, etc.

Upward Flow

To solve problems and make intelligent decision managers need to know that what is going on in the organization. Upward internal communication is also very important. Many executives want comments from employees in addition to the usual periodic reports. Successful managers listen closely to opinions, complaints, problems, and suggestions, especially when these are clearly put forward. They want to know about problem, emerging trends etc.

Horizontal Flow

Horizontal flow takes place between peers in the organizations in order to solve problems, perform job duties, prepare for meetings, and cooperate on important projects. So, you can imagine that people spend time on listening to and making requests, writing notes and memos, and discussing and writing about projects and they do it through communication.

Informal Internal Communication

Every organization has an informal communication network – a grapevine – that supplements official channel. It is an important source of information. It is casual conversation of an organization.

External Communication

Communication that takes place outside the organization is called external communication. The right letter, proposal, report, telephone call, or personal conversation can win back an angry customer, create a desire for a firm's product or services, encourage collections, motivate performance, and in general, create goodwill.

LESSON 2

FLOW OF COMMUNICATION

Outline:

- Flow of Internal Communication
  - Formal Internal Communication
  - Informal Internal Communication
- Direction of Flow within the Organization
- External Communication
  - Various Aspects of Formal/Informal External Communication
  - Ways of External Communication

An organization is a group of people associated for business, political, professional, religious, social, or other purposes. Its activities require human beings to interact and react, that is, to communicate. They exchange information, ideas, plans, and order needed supplies and make decisions, rules, proposals, contracts, and agreements. All these activities require one skill that is communication. So we can say that communication is the "Lifeline" of every organization.
An exchange of information within an organization is called internal communication. It takes place at different levels -- downwards, upwards and horizontal.
To exchange information within and outside the organization, we use a variety of formal and informal forms of communication that carry the flow of information.

things you ask them. This list is endless.

Remember that other people may be seeking information in the messages you 'send' (and in the tone of your voice and other indications of what is 'between the lines'). This information may or may not be something you wish to communicate: you need to be aware of it before your listener/reader.

Establishing Relations

Establishing, acknowledging and maintaining relations with other people are vital functions of communication.

Importance

Communicating effectively in speaking and writing is useful in all areas of business, such as management, technical, clerical, and social positions as we have just seen.

The ability to communicate well has always given advantages to those who possess it. Communication has a rich history. The ancient world, both the East and the West, depended on oral communication. In ancient Greece and Rome, it was necessary to communicate when dealing with matters in assemblies and the courts. During the Medieval and Renaissance Periods, the oral tradition progressed. As writing became more important as a permanent record of communication, authors and books on written communication principles appeared.

So, we can say that some of today's principles of writing are a mixture of ancient oral and written traditions.

Advantages of Communication in your Career

- Your success in your career is based on your ability to do well both in written and oral communication.
- This ability to communicate effectively is a valuable asset for you.
- If your career requires mainly mental rather than manual labor, your progress will depend on how effectively you communicate your ideas to others who need or should receive them.
- Strong communication skills are required in every job description listed by companies' advertising positions. Communication is a primary responsibility in many careers, such as customer relations, labor relations, marketing personnel, public relations, sales, and teaching.
- Communication is also required in government and non-profit organizations. Communication skills play a major role at every level.
- Even if your work is mainly with figures, as in the accounting profession, the ability to communicate to those who read your financial reports is necessary.

a. Semantic barriers(Convention of Meaning)
b. Physical Barrier
c. Psychological barriers
   - Emotional barriers
   - Perceptual barriers
d. Barriers involving values attitudes etc.

i) Semantic Barrier (Convention of Meaning)

A basic principle of communication is that the symbols the sender uses to communicate messages must have the same meaning in both the sender's and receiver's minds. You can never be sure that the message in your mind will be clearly sent to your receiver. The world is full with errors, as a result of differences in semantic (meaning) understanding. A symbol is a sign for something that exits in reality. Thus your name is really a symbol or a word which represents you. Only through common experience we learn, in a connection made between the symbol and the word attached to you and the person you are in reality. Anyone with less common experience will not easily relate the symbol (your name) with you. Besides, there are problems in convention of meaning, so you must make yourself familiar with different types of meaning.

Denotation

A denotation is usually the dictionary definition of a word. Denotative meanings name objects, people or events without indicating positive or negative qualities. Such words as car, desk, book, house, and water convey denotative meanings. The receiver has a similar understanding of the thing in which the word is used.

A connotation is an implication of a word or a suggestion separate from the usual definition. Some words have connotative meanings, that is, qualitative judgment and personal reactions. The word man is denotative, father, prophet, brother are connotative. Some words have positive connotations in some contexts and negative meanings in others. For example, slim girl and slim chances.

ii) Physical Barriers

The communication does not consist of words alone. Another set of barriers is caused by your own physical appearance, your audience, or the context of the document or the presentation. Your ideas, however good and skillfully imparted, are at the mercy of various potential physical barriers.
