Question No: 16 (Marks: 5)

What are some of the differences between writing and speaking skills?

Ans: Learning to write is not a natural extension of learning to speak. Following are some differences between writing and speaking skill.

Speech	writing
Speakers pronounce.	Writers spell.
Speech is usually informal and repetitive.	Writing on the other hand is more formal and compact.
Speakers draw on their listeners reactions to know how or whether to continue.	Writers are often solitary in their process. even they don't know where are their readers
Speakers use pauses and intonation.	Writers use punctuations.

Speakers can gauge the attitudes, beliefs and feelings of their audience by their verbal and non verbal reactions.	Writers must consider what and how much their audience needs to know about a given topic.
