

524 MID TERM COMPILATION BY AMEER

Q. Second Mode of Communication?

The second mode of communication refers to written communication, while the first mode is spoken communication. Written communication includes texts such as books, articles, emails, reports, and social media posts. It is usually planned, structured, and permanent, unlike spoken communication which is spontaneous and temporary.

Q. Pragma-Dialectics (Short Note)

Pragma-dialectics is a method of studying arguments and discussions. It explains how people use language to solve disagreements in a logical and reasonable way. It also helps in finding mistakes in arguments (fallacies) and checks whether the discussion follows proper rules of communication.

Q. Discursive Strategy (Applied)

A discursive strategy refers to how language is used deliberately to achieve a social or ideological goal. For example, calling migrants “illegal” instead of “undocumented” is a discursive strategy that shapes public perception negatively. Thus, discursive strategies connect language choices with power, ideology, and intention.

Q. Textual Knowledge vs Primarily Knowledge-Related Critique?

Textual critique:

Focuses on problems inside the text, such as contradictions, missing information, or unclear ideas.

Knowledge-related critique:

Checks whether the text gives correct facts, history, or social information.

Q. Interpretation Stage (Standalone Explanation)

The interpretation stage in Norman Fairclough’s 3D model explains how readers or listeners understand and interpret a text. It focuses on how the text is produced, shared, and understood in a particular context. This stage also considers people’s thinking, background knowledge, and connections with other texts, treating discourse as a social practice rather than only language.

Q. Contextual Factors in CDA

Contextual factors in Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA) are the social and background elements that affect how language is used and understood. These include:

1. Social and institutional setting
2. Power relations
3. Ideology
4. Historical background
5. Participants’ roles and identities

These factors influence how discourse is produced, interpreted, and understood in society.

Q. Halliday & Webster: Textual Elements (Long Answer)?

Halliday and Webster explain that textual meaning helps make language clear, connected, and easy to understand. Textual elements include the organization of ideas, flow of information, and linking of sentences. These elements help writers and speakers present ideas in a logical way and help readers understand the message clearly.

Q. Bartlett's Research

Bartlett's research showed that people do not remember information exactly the same way they read or hear it. They change and rebuild it according to their own culture, experiences, and beliefs. His research explains that understanding depends not only on language but also on social and cultural background.

Q. Five Types to Select Text from a Corpus

Five common ways to select texts from a corpus are:

1. Genre-based selection
2. Topic-based selection
3. Time-based (diachronic) selection
4. Register-based selection
5. Purpose-based selection

These help ensure that corpus data is relevant and representative

Q. Macgilchrist's Strategies

Macgilchrist identified counter-discursive strategies such as:

- Parody
- Logical inversion
- Complexification
- Partial reframing
- Radical reframing

These strategies challenge dominant discourses by re-presenting social reality differently.

Q. Cameron's Views

Deborah Cameron believes that language is a social activity connected with power, ideas, and identity. She explains that language is not neutral because the words people choose can show gender differences, political views, and social inequality. Her work shows how language is related to everyday social life.

Q. Pragmatics

Pragmatics is the study of how people understand and use language in different situations and contexts. It explains how people understand meanings beyond the actual words by using situation, tone, and background knowledge. It includes ideas like hidden meanings, speech acts, politeness, and inference.

Q. Naturalization + Justification

- Naturalization:
Showing actions or events as normal or natural, while hiding who is responsible for them.
- Justification:
Presenting actions as reasonable, necessary, or morally correct.

Together, they help support power and ideology through language.

Q. Three Proofs in Rhetoric

According to Aristotle:

1. Ethos – credibility or trustworthiness of the speaker.
2. Pathos – emotional appeal to the audience.
3. Logos – logical reasoning and evidence.

Q. What are the assumptions of discourse analysis?

1. Language is ambiguous, so meanings are not always completely clear.
2. Language depends on context, place, and situation.
3. Language is connected with people's social identity and groups.
4. Language works together with tone, facial expressions, gestures, layout, and graphics.

Q. What are three important aspects of genres?

1. Genres are communicative events
2. Conventions and Constraints
3. Creativity

Q. What are the aims of CDA?

The aims of Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA) are:

1. To find hidden ideas, values, and viewpoints in texts.
2. To expose discrimination and unfair use of language.
3. To study how language is connected with social and cultural issues such as race, gender, politics, identity, and ideology.

Q. What are the assumptions of CDA?

1. Language use is always connected with society.
2. Discourse both reflects and shapes the social world.
3. Discourses are influenced by social, political, racial, and economic factors.

Q. Name any three scholars of CDA?

- Norman Fairclough
- Ruth Wodak
- Teun A. Van Dijk

Q. Name the approaches of CDA

- Socio-cultural approach
- Socio-cognitive approach
- Discourse-historical Approach

Q. How did Fairclough and Wodak summarized the main tenets of CDA? Or What are the main tenets of CDA? OR Who summarized the tenets of CDA?

Norman Fairclough and Ruth Wodak summarized the main tenets of Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA) as:

1. CDA studies social problems.
2. Power relations are shown through discourse.
3. Discourse shapes society and culture.
4. Discourse spreads ideology.
5. Discourse is connected with history.
6. The relationship between text and society is indirect and influenced by context.
7. Discourse analysis explains and interprets meanings.
8. Discourse is a form of social action.
9. CDA tries to expose and resist social inequality.
10. CDA has a clear social and critical purpose.

Q. What are the general principles of CCDA?

1. Every text is connected with its cultural context.
2. CCDA uses ideas and methods from cultural studies.
3. Cross-cultural study helps identify cultural meanings and codes.
4. Understanding cultural codes requires knowledge of language, culture, and history.
5. CCDA shows that power and rhetoric work similarly in both small and large cultures.

Q. WHAT ARE THE STRATEGIES OF NORMALIZATION?

Strategies of Normalization (easy explanation):

1. Euphemization:
Using positive or softer words to make something sound better.
2. Naturalization:
Showing something as normal, natural, or unavoidable.
3. Justification:
Presenting something as right, reasonable, or deserving support.

Q. Explain any five of the stage programs that DHA follows?

1. Literature Review:
Reading and discussing previous research and theories.
2. Collection of Data:
Gathering texts, discourses, and background information related to the topic.
3. Selection and Preparation of Data:
Choosing and organizing the relevant data for analysis.
4. Research Questions and Assumptions:
Deciding the main questions and forming assumptions for the study.
5. Qualitative Pilot Analysis:
Doing an initial analysis to test ideas and categories before detailed analysis.

Q. Three dimensions of DHA?

1. Specific contents or topics of a specific discourse are identified;
2. discursive strategies are investigated;
3. linguistic means are examined as types, and the specific, context-dependent linguistic realizations are examined as tokens.

Q. Name the discursive strategies in DHA?

Nomination • Predication • Argumentation • Perspectivization • Mitigation and Intensification

Q. What are the theoretical sources that are relevant for the understanding of “critique”?

1. Critical Theory of the first generation:
Early critical theorists studied society, power, and inequality to bring social change.
2. Michel Foucault’s ideas:
CDA is influenced by Michel Foucault’s ideas about discourse and power, although some reservations exist.
3. Jürgen Habermas’s Critical Theory:
Jürgen Habermas contributed ideas about discourse ethics and deliberative democracy, which are important for understanding critique in CDA.

Q. What are Three forms of critique in the DHA?

1. the text or discourse immanent critique,
2. the socio-diagnostic critique
3. the prospective critique

Q. The Concept of Discourse

1. Discourse is a social practice that both shapes society and is shaped by society.
2. Discourse helps represent, create, reproduce, and change social reality.
3. Discourse is more than a single sentence or text; it includes communication and interaction in a wider context.
4. Discourse consists of texts, conversations, interactions, and other communication events produced and understood by people in society.
5. These discursive units are connected with specific genres and communication patterns.

Q. How The Discourse Historical Approach distinguishes among four dimensions of “context”?

The Discourse Historical Approach (DHA) explains context through different dimensions.

1. First, it studies the language inside the text, such as word choice, grammar, meanings, and connections between ideas.
2. Second, it examines links between different texts and discourses through references and allusions.
3. Third, it considers social and institutional factors like place, time, formality, gender, age, profession, education, and political or cultural background. These dimensions help explain how discourse is produced and understood in society.

Q. Explain the three stages of Fairclough’s 3D model

1. Description

In this stage, the text is analyzed carefully by examining its words, grammar, structure, and language features.

2. Interpretation

This stage focuses on how readers or listeners understand, interpret, and mentally interact with the text.

3. Explanation

In this stage, the text is connected with the wider social and cultural context to explain its relationship with society, power, and ideology.

Q. What are the speaking mnemonics proposed by Hymes?

1. Setting

The physical or social place where communication happens.

2. Participants

The people involved in communication, such as speaker, listener, or audience.

3. Ends

The purpose, goals, or outcomes of the communication.

4. Act Sequence: The order and form of speech or conversation during communication.

5. Key: The tone, mood, or manner of speaking, such as serious, friendly, or humorous.

Q. Difference between stance and engagement

Stance:

Stance refers to how writers express their opinions, attitudes, judgments, and personal position in their writing.

Engagement:

Engagement refers to how writers involve and connect with readers by guiding their attention and including them in the discussion.

Q. What is multi-modality?

Multimodality means using different forms of communication together to share information, such as words, pictures, sounds, gestures, and visuals. It helps people understand information more effectively by combining different modes of communication.

Q. Examples of Multi-modality?

- a) Reading images: The grammar of visual design - Kress (2010)
- b) Multimodality: A social semiotic approach to contemporary communication - van Leeuwen's (2005).
- c) Introducing social semiotics - O'Halloran's (2004)
- d) Multimodal discourse analysis and Painter - Martin and Unsworth's (2012) Reading visual narratives.
- e) Machin and van Leeuwen (2007) discuss multimodality in relation to global media discourse.

Q. What are the three considerations that must attend to in deciding a sampling policy?

- 1. The language or variety to be sampled.
- 2. The criteria used for choosing samples.
- 3. The nature and size of the samples.

Q. How does Stibbe (2014) defines relationship as questioning the stories that underpin current unsustainable civilization?

- 1. Exposing stories that are clearly not working, that are leading to ecological destruction and social injustice;
- 2. Finding new stories that work better in the conditions of the world that we face"

Q. Five counter discursive strategies considered by Macgilchrist?

1. Logical Inversion:
Directly opposing the dominant facts or arguments with logical counterarguments.
2. Parody:
Using humor or mockery to question accepted ideas or beliefs.
3. Complexification:
Presenting both sides of an issue instead of showing only one viewpoint.
4. Partial Reframing:
Temporarily changing the usual way of looking at an issue by using a different perspective.
5. Radical Reframing:
Completely changing and challenging the mainstream view of an issue.

Q. The purview of CDA could include the documentation of?

Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA) can include the study of:

1. Minority and marginalized voices that are ignored by powerful institutions.
2. New discourses of mixed or hybrid identities that challenge dominant ideas.
3. How people reinterpret and reuse dominant texts according to their local needs and interests.
4. Small-scale strategies of resistance and counter-discourse used in everyday social and institutional interactions.

Q. How would you explain the letters in SPEAKING?

1. S – Setting/Scene:
The place, time, and situation where communication happens.
2. P – Participants:
The people involved, such as speaker and listener.
3. E – Ends:
The purpose, goals, or results of communication.
4. A – Act Sequence:
The form and order of the message or conversation.
5. K – Key:
The tone or manner of speaking, such as serious or friendly.
6. I – Instrumentalities:
The channel or method of communication, verbal or nonverbal.
7. N – Norms:
The social rules and expectations of communication.
8. G – Genre:
The type or category of text or speech, such as lecture, poem, or conversation.

Q. Malinowski and Firth proposed a three-part model of context. For them, context consists of?

- Field:
The social activity or action taking place.
- Tenor:
The participants and their relationships or roles.
- Mode:
The channel of communication and the role language plays in the situation.

Q. What does a context may include?

Context may include the physical setting, social situation, and mental understanding of the people involved in communication. It also includes social, political, and cultural background knowledge, as well as linguistic context (co-text), which means the words and sentences surrounding a word or expression.

Q. Define the three kinds of Acts given by Austin?

1. Locutionary Act:
The literal meaning of the words spoken.
2. Illocutionary Act:
The speaker's intention or purpose behind the words.
3. Perlocutionary Act:
The effect of the words on the listener's thoughts or actions.

Q. Difference between direct and indirect speech?

Direct Speech:

When a sentence directly shows its real meaning or purpose.

Example: "Close the door." (Direct command)

Indirect Speech:

When the speaker means something different from the literal words.

Example: "It's cold in here." (Indirect request to close the door)

Q. Examples of clause/ sentence level presuppositions?

1. "John stopped smoking."
→ Presupposition: John used to smoke.
2. "Sara's brother is coming."
→ Presupposition: Sara has a brother.
3. "Have you finished your homework?"
→ Presupposition: You had homework to do.
4. "The teacher realized the answer was correct."
→ Presupposition: The answer was correct.

Q. What are the Piller's (2012: 8) three-way division?

1. Comparative analyses of two or more cultures.
2. Analyses of interactions between speakers from different cultural backgrounds.
3. The discursive creation of culture.

Q. Why CCP is important?

CCP is important because people from different cultures interact more frequently in today's world. It helps create better and more respectful cross-cultural communication, reduces misunderstandings, and explains how language, culture, and power relations affect interaction. It is also important in education because cultural differences can influence communication and learning.

Q. Three Maxims of Politeness (Lakoff, 1973)

1. Don't impose – Avoid forcing others.
Example: "I'm sorry to bother you but..."
2. Give options – Let the listener choose.
Example: "Do you think you could possibly help me?"
3. Make your hearer feel good – Be friendly and supportive.
Example: "You're better at this than me."

Q. Difference between face-threatening act and face-saving act?

Face-Threatening Act	Face-Saving Act
A statement that may hurt or threaten a person's self-respect or image.	A statement used to protect someone's feelings and show politeness.
Example: "Give me that paper."	Example: "Could you pass me that paper?"
Can sound rude or direct.	Sounds polite and respectful.

Q. How did Halliday and Webster (2014) illustrate the analysis of texts using?

1. Ideational Component:
Studies language that expresses experiences, actions, participants, and situations.
2. Interpersonal Component:
Studies language that shows attitudes, emotions, roles, politeness, and social relationships.
3. Textual Component:
Studies how language is organized into connected and meaningful texts through cohesion and structure.

Q. SFL tools include?

1. Statistical comparison techniques
2. Comparison of lexical density and frequency
3. Rhetorical Structure Theory
4. Corpus Linguistic

Q. How metaphor is seen as a cognitive process?

Metaphor is a mental process in which we understand one thing in terms of another. It is not just a language style but a way of thinking. The metaphors we use in language come from ideas already present in our mind. This means our thinking system is naturally metaphorical, and we express these mental concepts in spoken or written language, often without realizing it.

Q. Discuss five “estates” of research suggested by the Grootendorst?

1. Philosophical Estate:
Focuses on defining “reasonableness,” which is the foundation of argumentation theory.
2. Theoretical Estate:
Builds a theory based on philosophical ideas, such as argumentation as a critical discussion to resolve differences of opinion.
3. Analytical Estate:
Reconstructs arguments by adding, deleting, or changing parts of a text to clarify meaning.
4. Empirical Estate:
Uses research to study how real argumentative texts and structures work in practice.
5. Practical Estate:
Aims to improve people’s understanding and use of argumentation in real life.

Q. What are the three areas where CDS being deployed in applied linguistics given by Lin (2014)

1. Studies of textbooks and school curricula.
2. School leadership and student identities.
3. Public-media discourse.

Q. CDA from a historiographical approach needs to?

1. Contextualize how the past is represented in social practices and locate where historical discourse is produced.
2. Examine how people receive and interpret discourse about the past.
3. Analyze different meanings and interpretations of historical discourse at various levels.
4. Consider how discourse about the past is justified, valued, and distributed in society.

Q. What is Macro versus Micro?

Macro level: Big social systems like government, politics, and institutions.

Micro level: Everyday language use like conversations at work or in daily life.

Both are connected because big social changes affect daily communication, and everyday language also reflects those big changes.

Q. Explain briefly about public discourse?

Public discourse means communication in public areas like media, politics, and society. It is studied using different methods and teamwork, and it helps us understand real social issues and apply research in practical life.

Q. Three main principles of CDA

1. CDA studies how language is connected with society.
2. It focuses on real social problems.
3. It sees language as a form of social action.

Q. Three approaches of CDA?

1. Norman Fairclough – Three-dimensional model
2. Ruth Wodak – Discourse-Historical Approach (DHA)
3. Teun A. van Dijk – Sociocognitive Approach

Q. Strategies of CDA

1. Nomination: Naming or referring to people or things.
2. Predication: Giving qualities or descriptions.
3. Argumentation: Giving reasons or justifying claims.

Q. Tenets of CDA

1. Language is not neutral; it shows ideas and beliefs.
2. Power relations are shown through language.
3. Discourse both affects and is affected by society.

Q. Three forms of critique in DHA

1. Immanent critique:
Criticizing the text by checking problems inside it.
2. Socio-diagnostic critique:
Explaining how discourse reflects social problems and power.
3. Prognostic critique:
Suggesting possible solutions or future changes.

Q. Key elements of an accessed text in imminent critique?

1. Finding contradictions in the text.
2. Checking inconsistencies in ideas.
3. Revealing hidden or implied ideologies.

Q. Definition of "design" by Kress?

Design means how meaning is organized and presented in communication. It focuses on the choices made to express ideas in multimodal texts.

Q. Objections to SFL in CDA by Van Dijk and Blommaert?

1. Teun A. van Dijk argues that SFL focuses too much on structure and not enough on how people think.
2. Jan Blommaert criticizes SFL for focusing too much on grammar and language form.

Q. Fairclough's criticisms of pragmatics?

Norman Fairclough criticizes pragmatics because:

1. It does not pay enough attention to power in language use.
2. It does not clearly focus on social structures and how they shape communication.

Q. Purpose of Positive Discourse Analysis (PDA)?

PDA focuses on how language can be used to create positive change in society instead of only criticizing problems.

Q. Definition of typification according to Millany?

Typification means forming categories of people or things based on shared social understanding.

Q. Role of HEC in ELT?

Higher Education Commission ensures quality standards and improvement in English Language Teaching (ELT).

Q. Three SFL tools for text analysis?

1. Transitivity analysis
2. Thematic analysis
3. Modality analysis

Q. Three meta-functions of SFL?

1. Ideational – representing experience
2. Interpersonal – showing relationships
3. Textual – organizing messages

Q. Objections to SFL in CDA?

- It focuses too much on language structure.
- It ignores cognitive and social factors.

Q. Role of SFL in discourse analysis?

It helps explain how language creates meaning in different social contexts.

Q. Definition of corpus linguistics?

Corpus linguistics is the study of language using large collections of real texts (corpora).

Q. How to select text from a corpus?

Selection is based on research goals, sampling method, and how representative the texts are.

Q. Five types of corpora?

1. General corpus
2. Specialized corpus

3. Parallel corpus
4. Learner corpus
5. Historical corpus

Q. What is Corpus-Assisted Discourse Studies (CADS)?

CADS is a method that combines corpus linguistics and discourse analysis to study large collections of texts and find patterns, meanings, and ideologies in language.

Q. What are the three kinds of domain-process corpus?

1. General corpus – covers broad everyday language.
2. Specialized corpus – focuses on a specific subject or field.
3. Monitor corpus – tracks language changes over time.

Q. What are the three aspects of genre?

1. Field – what the text is about.
2. Tenor – relationships between participants.
3. Mode – the type of communication, spoken or written.

Q. Write a note on genre-based teaching?

Genre-based teaching helps learners understand the structure and purpose of different types of texts used in social situations.

Q. What is the navigation structure of written text?

It is the way a text guides readers using headings, subheadings, bullet points, and logical organization.

Q. What is the importance of genre analysis?

1. Helps understand text structure and style.
2. Improves communication skills.
3. Supports language learning and professional writing.

Q. What are the major points of conversational analysis?

1. Turn-taking
2. Sequence organization
3. Repair mechanisms (correcting misunderstandings)

Q. Define pragmatic argument.

A pragmatic argument focuses on the practical results or consequences of an idea or statement.

Q. Differentiate between conventional and particularized implicatures?

Conventional implicatures:

Meanings linked to specific words or expressions.

Particularized implicatures:

Meanings that depend on the specific context or situation.

Q. Define context.

Context is the social, cultural, and situational background that affects communication and meaning.

Q. What is inter-meta-discourse?

Inter-meta-discourse means comments within discourse that help guide understanding and interaction.

Q. What is existential presupposition?

Existential presupposition assumes that something exists for the statement to make sense.

Q. Define presupposition?

Presupposition is an implied assumption that is accepted as true in a statement

Q. What are discursive strategies?

Discursive strategies are methods used in language to achieve goals and influence understanding. They include techniques like framing, metaphors, and rhetorical devices.

Q. What is the quantity maxim? Explain in 2-3 lines.

The quantity maxim, by Paul Grice, says that speakers should give the right amount of information — not too little and not too much.

Q. What are Jewitt's four assumptions?

1. Meaning is multimodal.
2. Social context affects representation.
3. Visuals are as important as language.
4. Communication changes according to context.

Q. What is multimodal discourse analysis (MMDA)?

MMDA studies how different communication modes like text, images, gestures, and sound work together to create meaning.

Q. Give five examples of MMDA.

1. Advertising analysis
2. Classroom interaction analysis
3. News media discourse
4. Political campaign studies
5. Digital communication analysis

Q . What are the three general principles of the Cultural Approach in CDA?

1. Culture influences discourse.
2. Power relations exist within cultural texts.
3. Discourse analysis should consider history and society.

Q. How is an image schema developed?

Image schemas develop through repeated daily experiences that shape how people understand ideas and relationships.

Q. Define image schema.

An image schema is a mental pattern created from bodily and sensory experiences that helps people understand concepts.

Q. What are the speaking mnemonics proposed by Hymes?

- S – Setting and Scene
- P – Participants
- E – Ends
- A – Act Sequence
- K – Key
- I – Instrumentalities
- N – Norms
- G – Genre

Q. What is the Silent Method in language teaching?

A teaching method where the teacher speaks very little and uses gestures or visual aids so students learn actively.

Q. What is the Direct Method in language teaching?

A method that teaches language through speaking and listening without translation, using only the target language.

Q. What are the general principles of CCDA (Critical Cultural Discourse Analysis)?

1. Discourse is influenced by culture.
2. Power and ideology are present in discourse.
3. Social and historical contexts affect meaning.

Q. What is the significance of CCP (Cognitive-Critical Pragmatics)?

CCP combines cognitive linguistics and CDA to study how meanings are created and understood.

Q. What is the difference between socio-diagnostic critique and prospective critique?

Socio-diagnostic critique:

Studies how discourse supports social inequality.

Prospective critique:

Suggests ways to improve discourse for positive social change.

Q. What are two objections of DHA?

1. It focuses too much on historical context.
2. Its methods can be difficult and complex to apply.

Q. Define positive politeness.

Positive politeness means using friendly and respectful language to create good relationships and make others feel valued.

Q. What is the difference between discourse and text?

Text: A spoken or written piece of language.

Discourse: Language together with its context, meaning, and social interaction.

Q. Define linguistic competence.

Linguistic competence is a person's internal knowledge of grammar, vocabulary, and language rules.

Q. What are the four assumptions of discourse analysis?

1. Language is organized and systematic.
2. Meaning depends on context.
3. Discourse reflects society.
4. Discourse is both a process and a product.

Q. What is the aim of positive discourse analysis?

To focus on positive, constructive, and empowering aspects of discourse.

Q. What is "face" in politeness theory?

"Face" means a person's self-image or social respect during communication.

Q. What is impersonalization in discourse?

Impersonalization is a strategy that removes personal responsibility or agency from statements.

Q. Why is CCP important in discourse studies?

CCP is important because it combines cognitive and critical approaches to study how discourse influences ideas, beliefs, and ideology.

Q. Explain Fairclough's 3D model of discourse analysis.

1. Text Analysis (Description):
Studies the language features of the text.
2. Discursive Practice (Interpretation):
Explains how the text is produced, shared, and understood.
3. Social Practice (Explanation):
Examines how society and culture influence discourse.

Q. What are Malinowski and Firth's three-part models of context?

1. Field: What is happening.
2. Tenor: The people involved and their relationships.
3. Mode: The way communication happens.

Q. What are the three modes of communication?

1. Interpersonal: Social interaction between people.
2. Interpretive: Understanding and analyzing messages.
3. Presentational: Expressing or presenting ideas.

Q. What is Cameron's contribution to discourse studies?

Deborah Cameron focused on gender, identity, and power in language and discourse.

Q. What does CARS stand for in research?

CARS means Create A Research Space model.

1. Establishing a research area.
2. Reviewing previous studies.
3. Presenting new research contribution.

Q. Explain the technologization of discourse.

It is the process in which technology changes and shapes communication and language use.

Q. What are the criteria for selecting text from a corpus?

1. Relevance to the research topic.
2. Representation of real language use.
3. Proper sampling methods.

THE END
Remember me In Your Prayers.....
