Replies to Inquiries

Use the direct plan when you say 'yes' to an inquiry or request, and be sure to follow the suggestions listed here in your reply.

1. Give the Exact Information Requested

- Say in the first sentence that you are granting the request or answering the inquiry. A common error in answering inquiries is failure to answer some of the questions asked. Prevent this common error by marking on the letter of inquiry the points or questions to be addressed. Before you send your reply, double-check with the original letter to see that each point or question has been adequately covered.
- When answering 'yes' to a request for an appointment or reservation, repeat in your letter all the details such as date, time, and place.

The following letter shows an answer to a request for a reservation.

Dear Mr. Ali,

We are happy to receive your registration form and deposit for the 21st Century Marketing Conference to be held April 3-7 in Lahore.

The Lahore Hilton has set aside a block of rooms at a special discounted rate for conference attendees. The rate is Rs. 1000 for a single, Rs. 1500 for a double. To make reservations, call 00 – 11 - 22 before February 1.

Pakistan International Airlines is offering conference attendees up to 40 percent off the regular fares. To make flight reservations, call 888-684-4000, and refer to identification number J0969.

When you arrive at the conference, be sure to register before noon on Monday, April 3, so that you can attend the 1:00 p.m. special roundtable discussion by market analysts.

Yours truly,

2. Express Appreciation for the Inquiry

Tell the customer, either directly or by implication that you are glad he or she has written to you about one of your organization's products or services. Write in the spirit of service and goodwill. The tone of your reply should express your appreciation.

4. AMS (Administrative Management Society)

1. The Block form / Modified – Block form

This form is named so because inside address, salutation and paragraphs are blocked not indented in this form. If plain paper is being used, heading, date, complimentary close and signature are typewritten at the horizontal centre of the page. They are placed so that they end near the right hand margin. Double spaces between two parts are given while single space is used within the paragraph. In Pakistan, closed punctuation is used. This form is a time saver as no part is indented in it.

2. Full Block

This format is considered to be the most modern. All essential parts in this form are started from the left-hand margin. Open punctuation should be used in this form. This form saves time more than any other form.

3. The Semi-Block

This form is much used in Pakistan. Heading, date, complimentary close and signature sections begin at the horizontal of the page or are placed so that they end near the right-hand margin. First line of each paragraph is indented five to seven spaces. Only closed form of punctuation is used in this form. This letter style is attractive on the page.

4. AMS (Administrative Management Society)

It has been in use since 1950, AMS is a simple style. It uses full-block form and open punctuation. No salutation or complimentary close is used. Reader's name is used in the first and last sentence. Subject and writer's name are typed in capitals.

The written record of the proceedings of a meeting is called the minutes of the meeting. Since most meetings in business are informal (that is, do not follow the rules of parliamentary procedure), the minutes are also informal. - Physical Barriers
- Psychological Barriers
  - Emotional Barriers
  - Perception barriers
    - Abstracting
    - Inferring
- Barriers Involving Values, Attitudes etc.
- Sender's credibility

People in the world are not exactly alike. Cultures or countries are not the same. These differences, however, can cause problems in conveying your meanings. Each person's mind is different from others. As a result, message sender's meanings and the receiver's response are affected by many factors, such as the following:

a. Semantic barriers(Convention of meaning)
b. Physical Barrier
c. Psychological barriers
   - Emotional barriers
   - Perceptual barriers
d. Barriers involving values attitudes etc

i) Semantic Barrier (Convention of meaning)

A basic principle of communication is that the symbols the sender uses to communicate messages must have the same meaning in both the sender's and receiver's minds. You can never be sure that the message in your mind will be clearly sent to your receiver. The world is full with errors, as a result of differences in semantic (meaning) understanding. A symbol is a sign for something that exits in reality. Thus your name is really a symbol or a word which represents you. Only through common experience we learn, in a connection made between the symbol and the word attached to you and the person you are in reality. Anyone with less common experience will not easily relate the symbol (your name) with you. Besides, there are problems in convention of meaning, so you must make yourself familiar with different types of meaning:

Denotation

A denotation is usually the dictionary definition of a word. Denotative meanings name objects, people or events without indicating positive or negative qualities. Such words as car, desk, book, house, and water convey denotative meanings. The receiver has a similar understanding of the thing in which the word is used.

Connotation

A connotation is an implication of a word or a suggestion separate from the usual definition. Some words have connotative meanings, that is, qualitative judgment and personal reactions. The word man is denotative, father, prophet, brother are connotative. Some words have positive connotations in some contexts and negative meanings in others. For example, slim girl and slim chances.

Persuasive Requests

A request for cooperation, gifts, or favors, without any intention to buy or sell, is a persuasive request. This type of letter attempts to persuade the reader to spend time or money or to go to some trouble to help the writer – usually without benefit to the reader.

1. Begin with something that will interest the Reader

11. Reduce language barriers: Train managers in the language of their employees, train employees in the language of most customers and of most people in the company, ask bilingual employees to serve as translators, print important health and safety instructions in as many languages as necessary.

C. Access how well you've been understood

1. Research the nonverbal reactions of other cultures; then be alert to facial expressions and other nonverbal signs that indicate confusion or embarrassment.
2. Probe for comprehension.
3. Encourage employees to ask questions in private and in writing.
4. Observe how employees use the information you've provided, and review any misunderstood points.

D. Offer feedback to improve communication

1. Focus on the positive aspect by explaining that should be done rather than what shouldn't be done.
2. Discuss a person's behaviors and the situation, rather than making a judgment about the person.
3. Be supportive as you offer feedback, and reassure individuals that their skills and contribution are important

Judging people to a great extent by their voice is a type of verbal sparring. Some native languages demand many tonal variations, giving the impression to a non-native of loudness, even arrogance.

A Myriad of nonverbal symbols exists for every culture, even in subcultures. Knowing the major desirable and undesirable cues helps knowing both intended and unintended communication errors.

PROCESS OF PREPARING EFFECTIVE BUSINESS MESSAGES

While preparing a written or an oral business message, you need to plan, organize, compose, edit and revise it. The message must also be proofread and corrected before it is mailed. Apart from the steps mentioned above the writer must take care of seven C qualities and also of legal aspect. Careful preparation of communication is important, even if the writer / speaker has the modern technology. The basic planning steps are as follows:

Five Planning Steps

Before writing a message, the following steps are necessary for effective communication.

1. Define the purpose of the message.
2. Analyze your audience – readers or listeners.
3. Choose the ideas to include.
4. Collect all the facts to back up these ideas.
5. Outline – organize – your message.

1. Define the purpose of the message.

Following are the two purposes of writing a business message:

a. General Purpose

General purpose is to inform, to persuade, to collaborate with your audience. This deters the amount of audience participation and amount of control your have over your message.

American are accused of being brisk, curt, impolite; they wish to get to the point – fast, "Getti are similar, quickly getting to the issue. Chinese, Pakistani, French, and British prefer mor social amenities.

In Japan, decision time is held back as group consensus moves toward a decision.
Your understanding of the decision process – adds to your success in dealing with forei people.

Perceptions of decision making

a. Is the pattern for making decisions consistent from one company to another?
b. Is placement of the major decision maker consistent in meeting situations?
c. Is an inductive or a deductive pattern of decision making preferred?

VERBAL AND NONVERBAL COMMUNICATION

A kind of verbal sparring occurs when strangers meet each other, seeking to determine whi acceptable and uncontroversial. The tone of voice of one's initial words can influence perception of whether the meeting is positive or negative. For example, 'see you later' can m day to the Asian workers or some indefinite time in the future to the Americans.

Arabs are loud and some Japanese use little volume. Chinese languages named as Canton tonal language, demands more volume to suggest changes in word meanings.

A. Accept cultural differences

1. Studying your own culture
2. Learn about other cultures through books, articles, videos, and other resources.
3. Encourages employees to discuss their culture's customs
4. Avoid being judgmental
5. Create a formal forum to teach employees about the customers of all cultures represente

Courtesy is a quality t enables a request to be refused without killing all hope of future business. Courtesy also means reply promptly to all letters. If you feel your correspondent's comments are unfair, try to answer tactfully. short, the whole letter should have a courteous tone. It is not what you say; it is how you say it.

Persuasive Request Plan

As good-news plan is similar to direct-request plan, so is persuasive plan to bad-news plan. Persuasion is the attempt to change a reader's attitude, beliefs or action in your favour. This plan is used to influence the readers who may resist otherwise. One way to organize persuasive messages is the AIDA plan, which is of four stages:

1. Attention 2. Interest 3. Desire 4. Action

In the attention stage, you convince the reader that you have something interesting or useful for him. In interest stage, you explain how your message is related to your reader. In the desire stage, you provide relevant evidence to prove your claim drawing attention to any enclosures. In the action stage, you close the message with an action ending that suggests a specific action the reader may take.

Religion

Be careful of religious beliefs in foreign countries. Although some basic beliefs overlap, yet there are some major differences. In connection with religion, there is a great need for tolerance. Buddhism, Hinduism, and Moslem religions are found in many parts of the world, affecting the values (and attire) of people professing these faiths. For instance, these three religions forbid consumption of alcohol.
Religious holidays affect international communication, interrupting work schedules or delaying responses to requests.
Be aware too that religion can affect the status of women, their positions within an economy and even their buying patterns and habits of dress.

Religion: Homogeneity and diversity of belief structure
a. Are you aware of the major religious beliefs that could affect your business relationships?
b. Will the religious holidays affect your rhythm of conducting business?
c. What personal behavior is acceptable and unacceptable?

Social Norms
In various ways any natural environmental constraints – education, law and regulations, economics, politics, religion – affect a nation's social norms. In many countries a male line of the family profoundly influences some business decisions. Decisions, buying patterns, pooling of resources, special interests affect behavior and business communication.
Beyond the immediate family a bond may exist between persons, based on caste, class, age, or even special interests. Be aware of a nation's social norms.

Social Norms: importance of family and role of past colonial influences
a. Are you aware of the social hierarchies of the country?
b. Is there a rank order of importance for participants at meetings?
c. Who will really make the business decision?
d. Is the previous colonial influence still evident in the host country?

Language
An important constraint that supersedes all the preceding variables is language. Obviously, unless both sender and receiver understand a common language, the opportunities for successful business communication are significantly limited.

Placing Orders

An order letter is a contract for selling and purchasing of services. Orders are considered one of t simplest types of direct request. While placing an order, you need not excite your reader's interes state your needs clearly and directly.

Many companies use special forms for ordering merchandise or service. They may use their own purchase order, or one provided by the seller, called an order form. These forms have blank spaces the inclusion of all necessary information. Their advantage is that they enable a company to ma so carefully file all expenditures.

Nevertheless, there will be times when an order must be put into letter format. At such times, be sure to include COMPLETE, ACCURATE INFORMATION because incomplete orders delayed deliveries, and inaccurate facts result in receipt of the wrong merchandise.

Here are some suggestions for writing effective order letters:

1. Give the Information in a Clear Format

Welcome Letters

Welcoming letters are written for many occasions. These messages may be morale builders. Usually they have a definite sales flavour, as:

- New customers.
- New subscribers.
- New charge account customers.
- New dealers.

These messages discuss organization services and products and invite readers to call or visit, but they avoid specific sales promotion.

The layout of a Business Letter

Written messages to persons outside the organization are business letters. Appearance of the letter conveys non-verbal impression that affects a reader's attitude. Business letters are usually arranged in different styles or layouts. The style or format is determined by certain conventions.

There are different styles in fashion and it is difficult to say which one is the best. Nowadays firms use the following type of styles and formats:

1. The Block-form / Modified – Block form
2. Full-Block form
3. The Semi-Block form
4. AMS (Administrative Management Society)

1. The Block form / Modified – Block form

This form is named so because inside address, salutation and paragraphs are blocked not indented in this form. If plain paper is being used, heading, date, complimentary close and signature are typewritten at the horizontal centre of the page. They are placed so that they end near the right hand margin. Double spaces between two parts are given while single space is used within the paragraph. In Pakistan, closed punctuation is used. This form is a time saver as no part is indented in it.

2. Full Block

This format is considered to be the most modern. All essential parts in this form are started from the left-hand margin. Open punctuation should be used in this form. This form saves time more than any other form.

3. The Semi-Block

This form is much used in Pakistan. Heading, date, complimentary close and signature sections begin at the horizontal of the page or are placed so that they end near the right-hand margin. First line of each paragraph is indented five to seven spaces. Only closed form of punctuation is used in this form. This letter style is attractive on the page.

4. AMS (Administrative Management Society)

It has been in use since 1950, AMS is a simple style. It uses full-block form and open punctuation. No salutation or complimentary close is used. Reader's name is used in the first and last sentence. Subject and writer's name are typed in capitals.

Organizational Plans:

1. Direct (Deductive) Organizational Plan

Direct (Deductive) Approach:
When you think that your audience will be interested in what you have to say or willing to cooperate with you, you can use the direct or deductive plan to organize your message. It means you present request or the main idea in the beginning, which follows up necessary details and then you close your message with a cordial statement of action you want. We use this approach when the request requires no special tact or persuasion. Close to direct request is good-news plan that is used to grant requests, announce favorable or neutral information and exchange routine information within or between organizations. Look at the outline of direct organizational plans and good-news plan.

Direct-Request Plan
1. State the request or main idea.
2. Give necessary desirable details for easy reading.
3. Close with a cordial request for specific action.

Look at the following letter which is a request to the seller and requires no special tact or persuasion.

Dear Sir,

We intend to purchase a new office copier. We would like to consider a BHP copier and wonder if you have a model that would suit our needs.

Our office is small, and a copier would generally be used by only three secretaries. We run approximately 3,000 copies a month and prefer a machine that uses regular paper. We rarely need to run off more than 25 copies at any one time.

We would also like to know about your warranty and repair service. We hope to hear from you soon.

Ethnic diversity within a country plays a part. Before drawing conclusions from cultural data, it is necessary to consider many factors a single cause rarely produces a valid conclusion.

While communicating the message sender and the receiver are both affected by external and internal stimuli. Communicating with business people in a foreign country you must realize that overall national and individual cultural differences within the culture further affect these stimuli.

Following are the global or macro constrains and variables that communicators must face while working with foreign receivers of their messages.

United States	Other Cultures
Concern with diversity	Less tolerance for diversity
Tendency to be obsessed with time	time is flexible
Expect answers, quickly to faxes, letters, or email	Fax and E-mail are slowly increasing in developing countries.
Few vacation periods	Many vacation days (about 17 in some countries).
Legalistic letter	More informal; a handshake is as good as a letter
Early starting time for work	Start working later in the day

United States	Other Cultures
Much use of slang	Less use of slang
Prefer deductive: it gets to the point more quickly.	Prefer inductive: it is less arrogant
Prefer paragraph headings and visual divisions	Prefer bullets or numbers
Rank is less important	Rank is important.

Completeness

A business message is complete when it contains all facts that the reader or listener needs for the reaction you desire. Sender and receivers are influenced by their background, viewpoint, needs, experience, attitude, status and emotions. Because of their difference, the receiver needs to be sure that he has included all relevant information. Completeness is closely related to clarity.

A complete message brings desired result. It does a better job of building goodwill. It helps remove costly lawsuits that may result if important information is missing. Moreover, the communication that seems unimportant can be surprisingly important if the information is complete and effective.

For completeness, keep the following guidelines in mind:

- Provide all necessary information
- Answer all questions asked
- Give something extra when desirable

Provide all necessary information

It means to provide entire information keeping in mind the readers' point of view for their better understanding. Your reader needs to know how much, what size, what type, and other details. To achieve this clarity, your message should answer the "five Ws and one H"

Decision Making

Patience – above all – is needed in intercultural communication, in doing business with other countries. Americans are typecast as moving too quickly in asking for a decision. Give more thought to inductive communication.
American are accused of being brisk, curt, impolite; they wish to get to the point – fast, "Getting down to business" is a trait of the western culture. The Germans, Singaporeans, Swiss, Dutch, and Scandinavians are similar, quickly getting to the issue. Chinese, Pakistani, French, and British prefer more pleasuring social amenities.
In Japan, decision time is held back as group consensus moves toward a decision.
Your understanding of the decision process – adds to your success in dealing with foreign business people.

Perceptions of decision making

a. Is the pattern for making decisions consistent from one company to another?
b. Is placement of the major decision maker consistent in meeting situations?
c. Is an inductive or a deductive pattern of decision making preferred?

VERBAL AND NONVERBAL COMMUNICATION

A kind of verbal sparring occurs when strangers meet each other, seeking to determine which topics are acceptable and uncontroversial. The tone of voice of one's initial words can influence your initial perception of whether the meeting is positive or negative. For example, 'see you later' can mean the same day to the Asian workers or some indefinite time in the future to the Americans.

Arabs are loud and some Japanese use little volume. Chinese languages named as Cantonese, being a tonal language, demands more volume to suggest changes in word meanings.

A. Accept cultural differences

1. Studying your own culture
2. Learn about other cultures through books, articles, videos, and other resources.
3. Encourages employees to discuss their culture's customs
4. Avoid being judgmental
5. Create a formal forum to teach employees about the customers of all cultures represented in the firm reader's forum.

Placing Orders

An order letter is a contract of selling and purchasing or services. Orders are considered one of the simplest types of direct request. While placing an order, you need not excite your reader's interest; just state your needs clearly and directly.

Many companiesuse special forms for ordering merchandise or service. They may use their own, called a purchase order, or one provided by the seller, called an order form. These forms have blank spaces to ensure the inclusion of all necessary information. Their advantage is that they enable a company to number and so carefully file all expenditures.

Nevertheless, there will be times when an order must be put into letter format. At such times, you must be sure to include COMPLETE, ACCURATE INFORMATION because incomplete orders result in delayed deliveries, and inaccurate facts result in receipt of the wrong merchandise.

Here are some suggestions for writing effective order letters:
