Complexity Involved

Nature of complexity:

- Change and flux in geopolitical situation-migration
- Material development-whose culture
- Integration with wider community?

ENG512_Topic181

Complexity Involved

Relationship between:

- Language and identity-individual-communal and national
- Language policies of the state
- Political factors
- Global factors

ENG512_Topic181

Complexity Involved

Complex decision making:

- Choice of languages
- Role of other languages
- Transition points
- The exchange value of linguistic capital

Flexibility

Variability depends on:

- Material resources
- Human resources
- Societal goals
- External and internal pressures

ENG512_Topic182

Flexibility

Variability is acceptable:

- No one type of programme better than the other
- Educational transitions need to be kept in mind
- Equity between languages does not mean equality

ENG512_Topic182

Flexibility

Bilingual programme examples:

- Beginning with 90:10 (tribal 90 minority language, while the other strengthened
- Multilingual complexity
- Minority language 90 % and regional 10% - later minority language phased out by Eng.

Flexibility

Inherent flexibility:

- Translanguaging practices of teachers and learners
- Teachers alter these percentages
- Unequal allocation not a problem if respect shown to all languages

Bilingual Allocation

Time allocation :

- The model of 90: 10
- The dominant language given more emphasis –CLIL programmes
- Sliding bilingual education 90:10

ENG512_Topic183

Bilingual Allocation

Time allocation :

- Distribution of languages
- Equitable allocation 50: 50
- Equal number of subjects in different languages

ENG512_Topic183

Bilingual Allocation

Immersion bilingualism:

- Begins with 100 % use of majority child's second language
- Gradually reduced with child's home language

ENG512_Topic183

Bilingual Arrangement

Strict separation:

- Time determined
- Teacher determined
- Place determined
- Subject determined

ENG512_Topic184

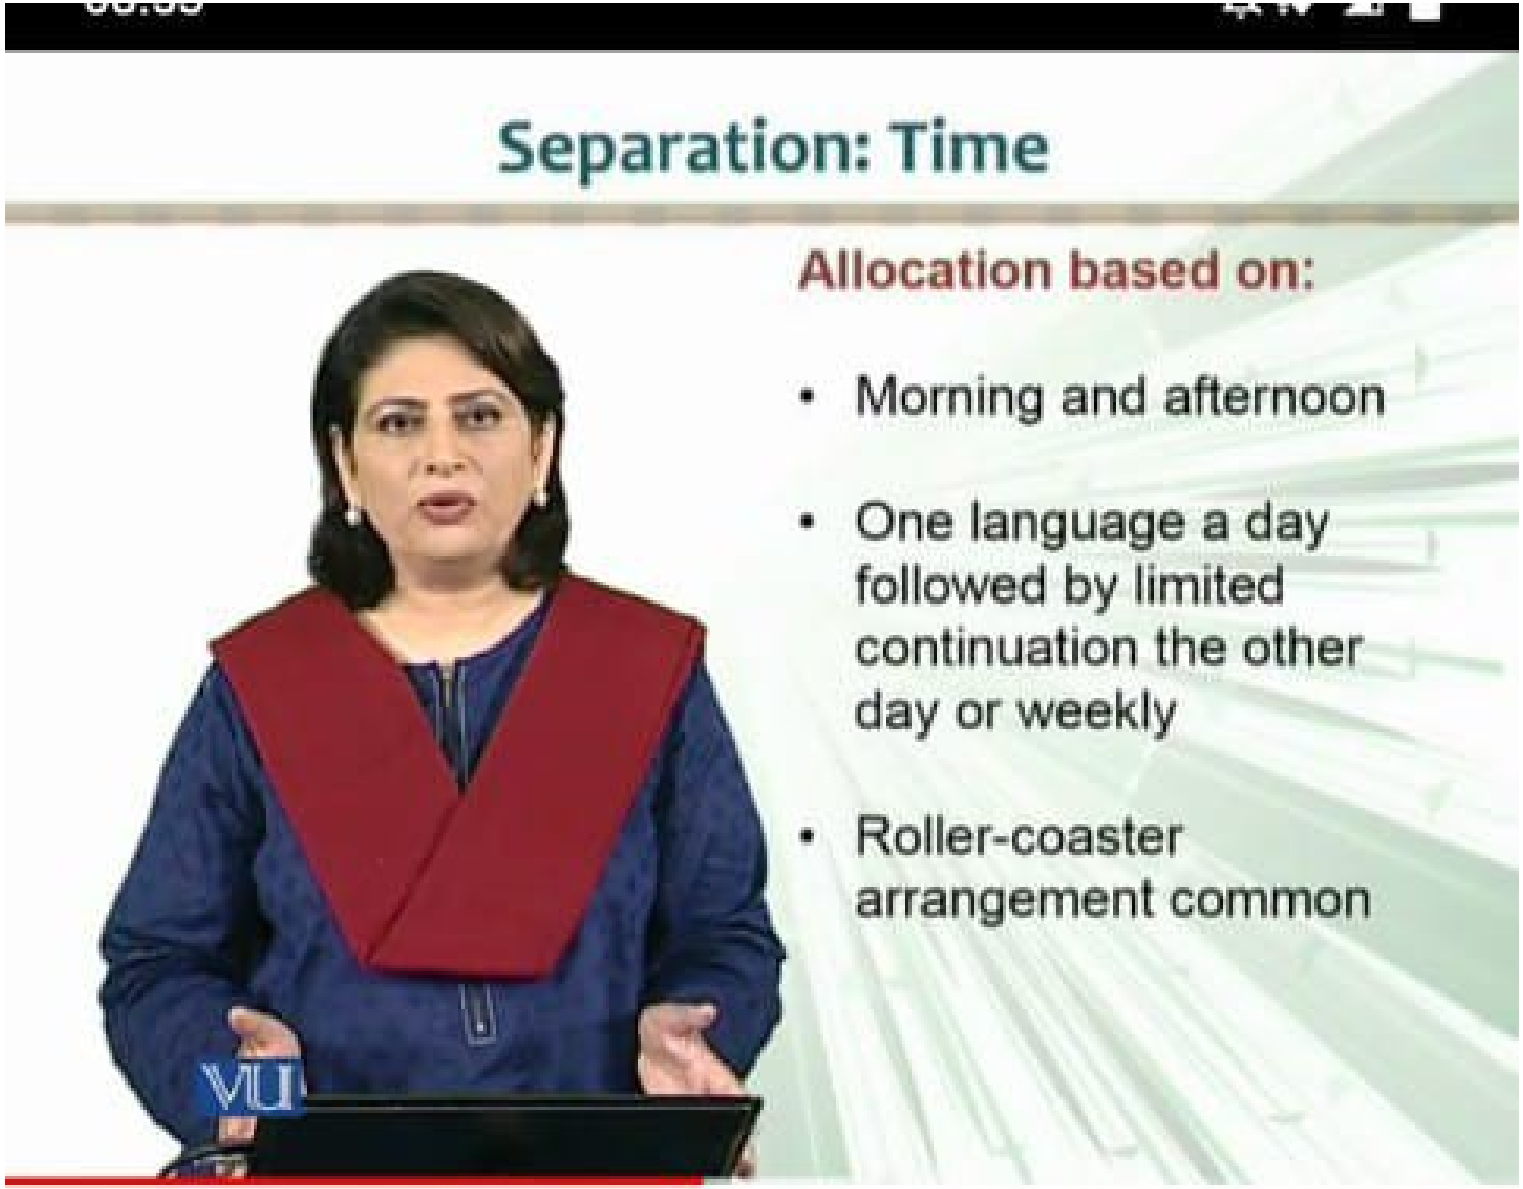

Bilingual Arrangement

Decisions about language arrangement:

- Strictly separating the languages
- Using them flexibly

ENG512_Topic184

ENG512_Topic185

Separation: Time

In early grades:

- Confusion from alternating languages at the same time
- Coded signal helpful- (colour)
- Good practice of keeping the same teacher throughout the day for support

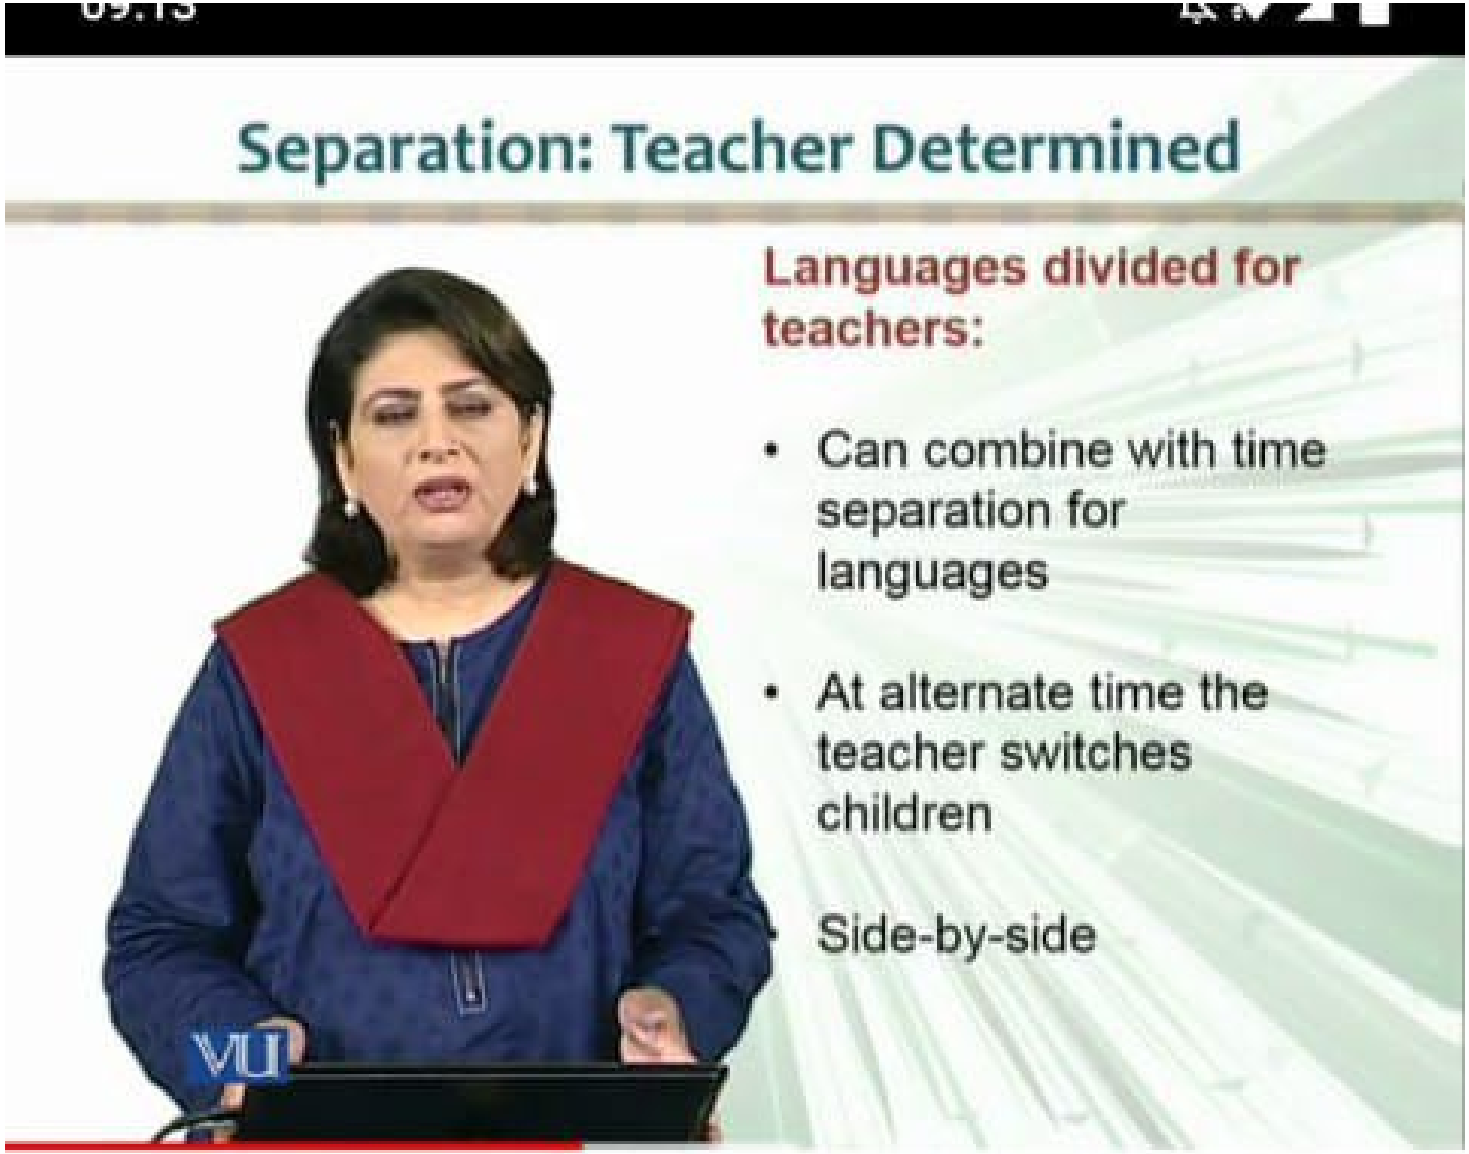

ENG512_Topic185

Separation: Time

Allocation based on:

- Same language at the same time
- Helpful if there is one teacher per grade
- Teacher needs to be highly proficient
- Preparation of materials

ENG512_Topic186

166 views 4y ago ENG512 - Bilingualism ...more

Separation: Teacher Determined

Side-by-side:

- Advantage teachers may be only receptive bilinguals in one language
- However, doubles the number of taught children

ENG512_Topic186

ENG512_Topic186

Separation: Teacher Determined

Side-by-side:

- Two teachers in the same class at the same time –each using one language
- Support to the students in the language they know best
- Cost is higher

ENG512_Topic186

Separation: Place Determined

Language assigned to different classrooms:

- Used in several European programmes
- Useful – landscape of the classroom becomes enabling
- Consistency
- Used often in secondary schools

ENG512_Topic187

Separation: Place Determined

Language assigned to different classrooms:

- Advantage-language surround
- Disadvantage- changing of rooms difficult at primary level
- Discourages – contrastive analysis of languages

ENG512_Topic187

ENG512_Topic187

Separation: Place Determined

Language assigned to different classrooms:

- Writing the languages in different colours may also be useful
- Encouraging contrastive analysis useful at later stages

ENG512_Topic187

Separation: Subject Determined

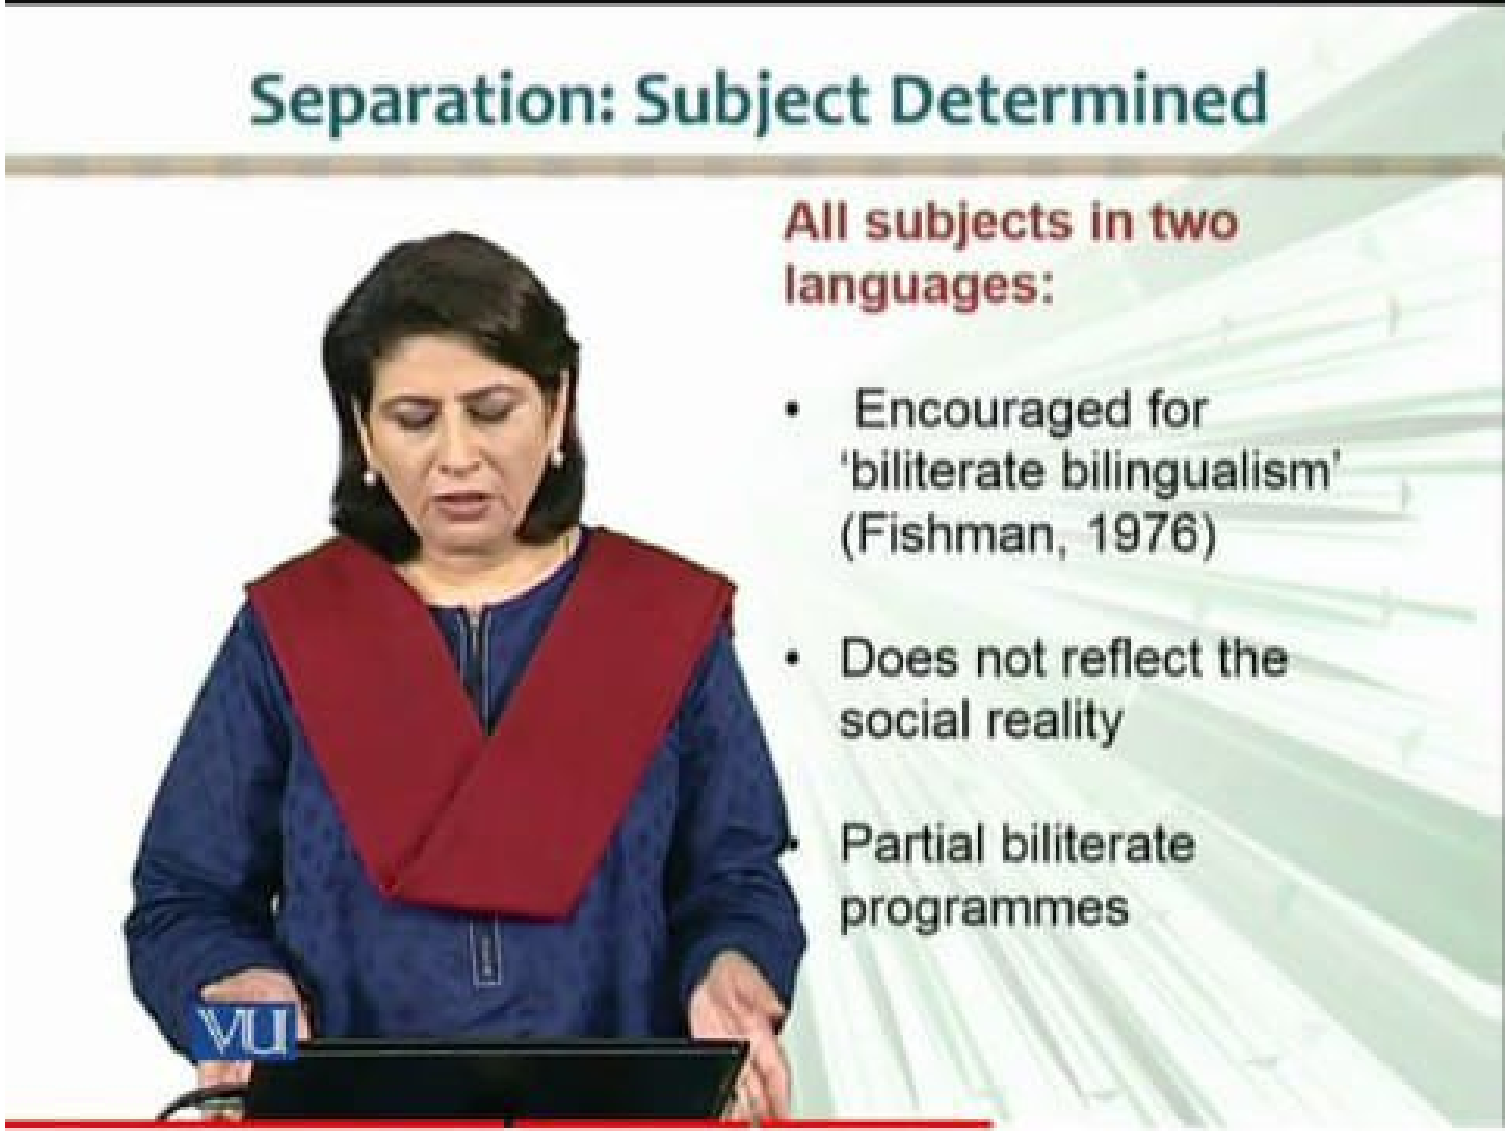

All subjects in two languages:

- Many programmes offer a mixture of the full or partial biliterate kinds
- Some subjects, though not the same material are taught in both languages

Separation: Subject Determined

Requires:

- A lot of teacher collaboration regarding the content
- Especially where teachers are sharing students

Separation: Subject Determined

Different language for different subjects:

- Common in secondary schools
- Math, Science and Technology in English
- Other subjects in vernaculars common
- Religious and state language

ENG512_Topic188

Arrangements: Flexible Convergent

Flexible convergence:

- Flexible use of language that aims at language shift
- Subtractive bilingualism
- Common across Pakistan also

ENG512_Topic189

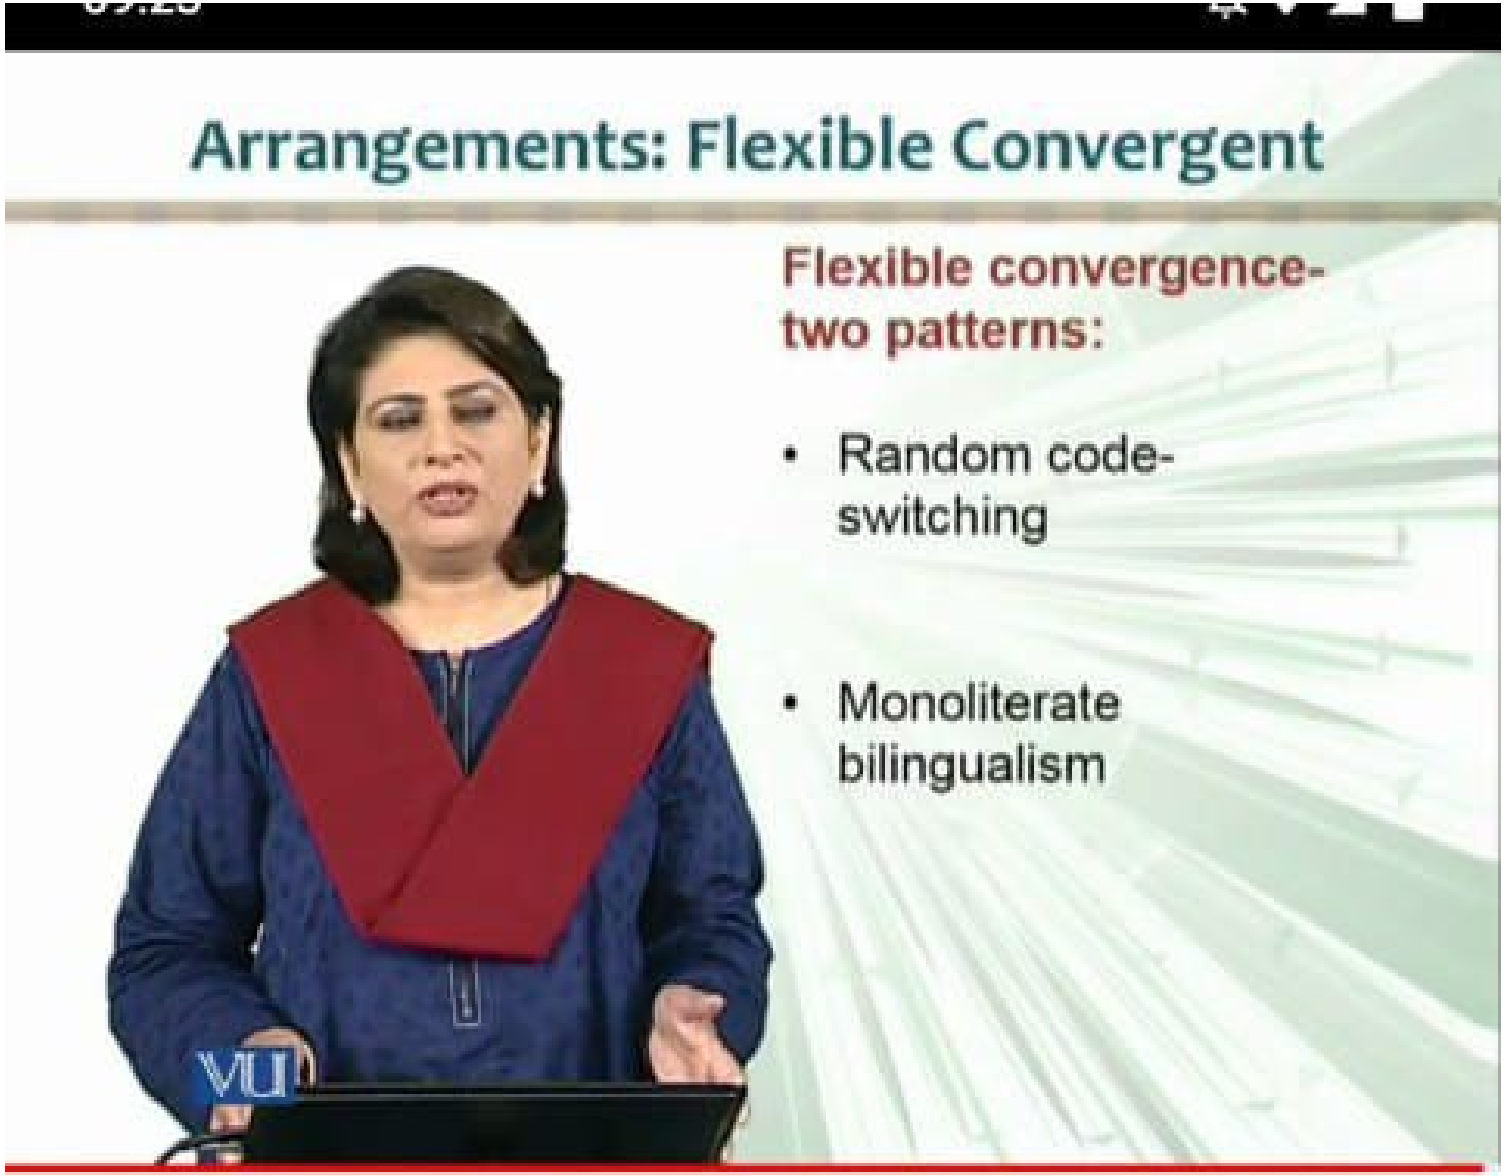

Arrangements: Flexible Convergent

ENG512_Topic201

Classroom Examples

Chinese in US English classrooms:

- Encouraging use of Chinese in English writing classes
- Developed writing skills faster
- Cross-linguistic analysis

ENG512_Topic202

Classroom Examples

In situations of unequal power between languages:

- Protecting minority language important (Fishman, 1991).
- Space along and apart from majority language
- Responsible code-switching a means to it

ENG512_Topic202

Classroom Examples

Chinese in US English classrooms:

- Encouraging use of Chinese in English writing classes
- Developed writing skills faster
- Cross-linguistic analysis
- Difference in strategies

Classroom Examples

Val d' Aoste bilingual programmes:

- Use micro and macro alternation mode in reading and writing
- Encouraged to write in one but switch to another when feel comfortable - tests
- Cognitive skills and learning of languages?

Dynamics of Unequal Power

Situations of Linguistic Hierarchy:

- Reflect social inequality
- Bilingual education needs to be carefully positioned
- Not enough to 'allow' use of minority language

Dynamics of Unequal Power

Situations of Linguistic Hierarchy:

- During minority language majority language instruction code-switching to be planned
- Flexibility is a must
- Protecting the minority language important

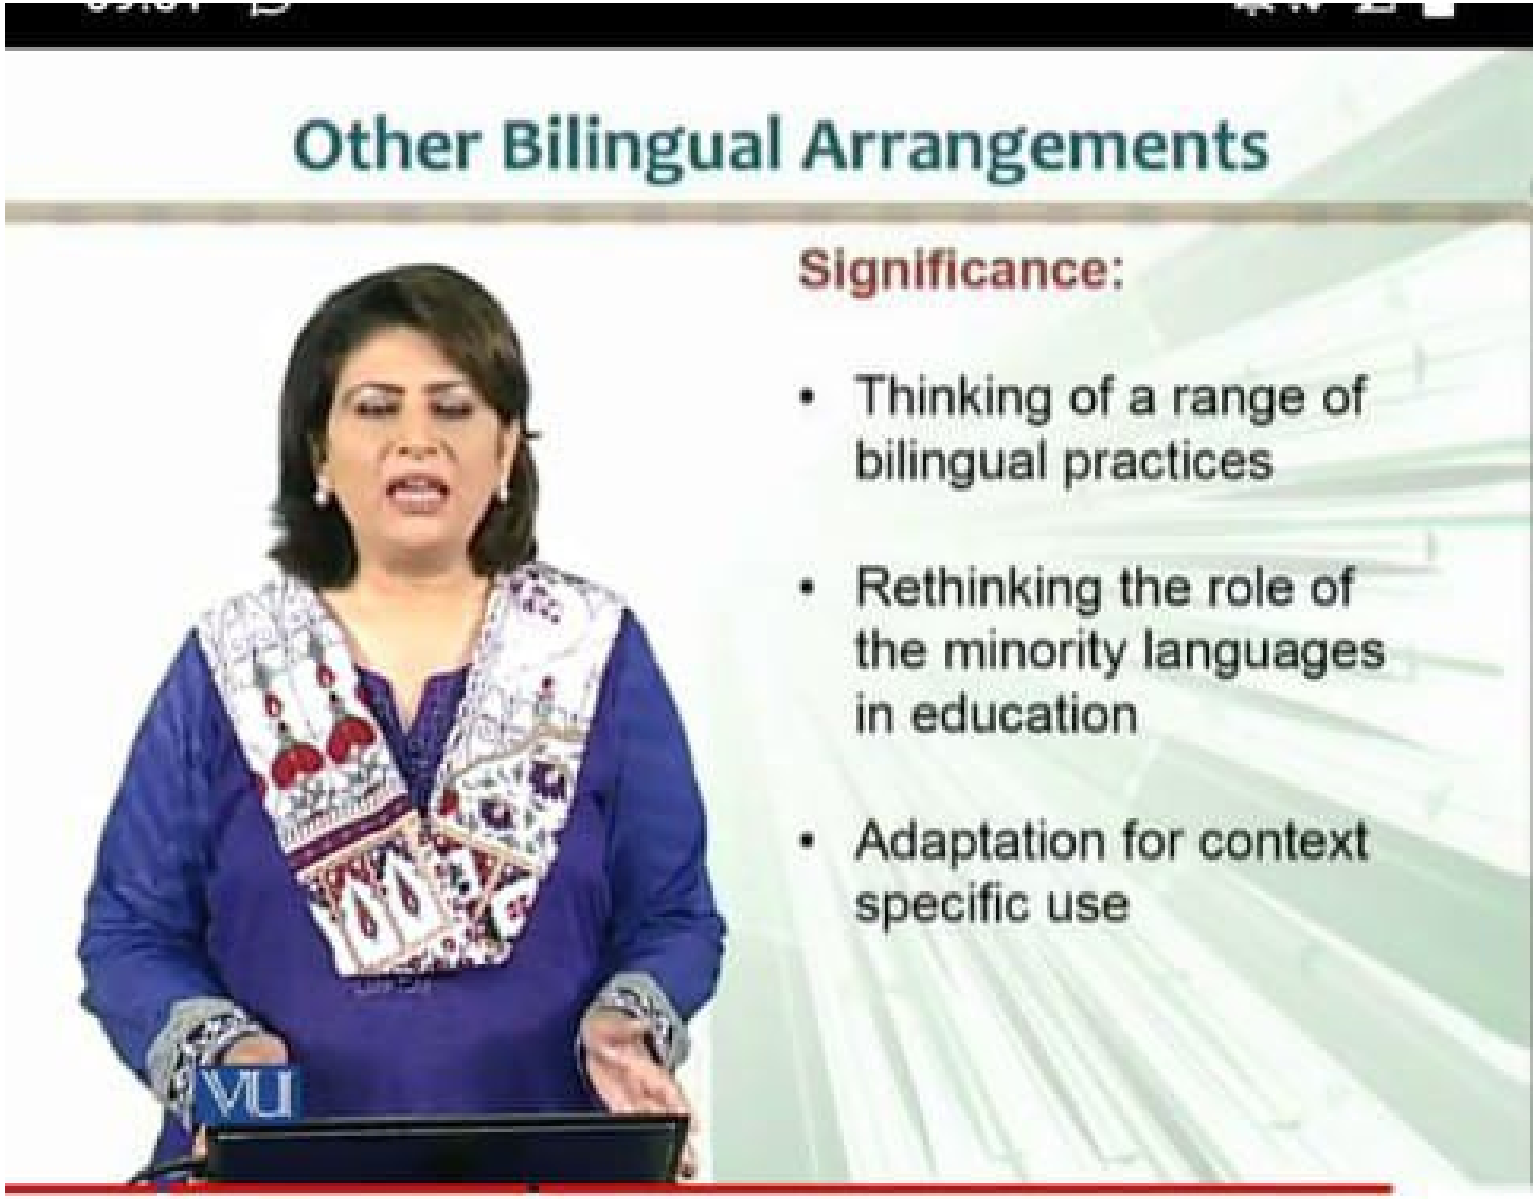

Dynamics of Unequal Power
