Decline of Muslims in Subcontinent & War of 1857 (Detailed Notes)

Part 1: Decline of Muslims in Subcontinent

Muslims ruled India for more than three centuries under strong empires like the Mughals. However, after the death of Aurangzeb Alamgir in 1707, the empire began to weaken due to internal and external pressures, leading to the eventual downfall of Muslim political power.

1. Weak Successors of Mughals

After Aurangzeb, rulers like Bahadur Shah I and others were not capable administrators.

They lacked military skills and political vision.

Royal court became a place of luxury and conspiracies rather than governance.

Nobles (Umra) started interfering in state matters.

Impact:

Central government became weak, and provinces started acting independently.

2. Political Instability

There was no proper system of succession, leading to frequent wars for the throne.

Brothers fought against each other for power.

Provincial governors (Nawabs) became independent rulers (e.g., Bengal, Awadh).

The empire lost control over distant regions.

Impact:

Disunity weakened the empire and made it easier for enemies to take control.

3. Rise of Regional Powers

As Mughal authority weakened, other groups became powerful:

Marathas in Deccan

Sikhs in Punjab

Maharaja Ranjit Singh established a strong Sikh kingdom in Punjab.

These powers challenged Mughal authority and took control of territories.

Impact:

Muslims lost political dominance in many regions.

4. British Expansion

British East India Company came as traders but gradually became rulers.

They used diplomacy, wars, and conspiracies to expand power.

“Divide and Rule” policy created divisions among locals.

Important victories:

Battle of Plassey (1757): Control over Bengal

Battle of Buxar (1764): Strengthened political authority

Impact:

British became the dominant power in India.

5. Economic Decline

Heavy land taxes were imposed on farmers.

Traditional industries like textiles declined due to British imports.

Wealth was drained to Britain (Drain of Wealth).

Many artisans became unemployed.

Impact:

Muslims, who were mostly involved in administration and crafts, became poor.

6. Educational Backwardness

Muslims focused only on religious education (Madrasah system).

They avoided English education introduced by the British.

Hindus adopted modern education and got government jobs.

Impact:

Muslims were left behind in administration, education, and economy.

7. Religious & Social Factors

Muslim society became divided into sects.

Lack of unity and cooperation.

Moral decline and luxury-loving lifestyle of rulers.

Decrease in spirit of Jihad and reform.

Impact:

Social weakness contributed to political downfall.

Overall Result of Decline

End of Muslim rule in India

British political control established

Muslims became a minority with weak economic and social position

Part 2: War of 1857 (First War of Independence)

The War of 1857 was the first large-scale rebellion against British rule. It involved soldiers, rulers, peasants, and common people.

Muslims call it War of Independence

British called it Sepoy Mutiny

1. Political Causes

British policy of annexation (Doctrine of Lapse) allowed them to capture states without heirs.

Many rulers lost their kingdoms unjustly.

Mughal emperor Bahadur Shah Zafar was reduced to a symbolic ruler.

Announcement to end Mughal rule created anger among Muslims.

Impact:

Rulers and elites became enemies of British rule.

2. Military Causes

Indian soldiers (sepoys) were treated unfairly:

Lower salaries than British soldiers

No promotions to high ranks

They were forced to serve far from home.

Immediate Cause:

Introduction of new rifle cartridges rumored to contain cow and pig fat.

This offended both Hindus (cow sacred) and Muslims (pig forbidden).

Impact:

Soldiers revolted against British officers.

3. Economic Causes

Heavy taxes ruined farmers.

Zamindars lost lands due to new policies.

Local industries collapsed due to British goods.

Unemployment increased.

Impact:

Common people joined the rebellion.

4. Religious Causes

British tried to spread Christianity.

Missionaries were active in India.

Laws were introduced that interfered with religious practices.

Impact:

People feared loss of religion and identity.

5. Social Causes

British introduced Western culture and laws.

Abolition of practices like Sati disturbed traditional society.

Indians felt their customs and traditions were under threat.

Impact:

General dissatisfaction among masses.

Main Events of War

Revolt began in Meerut (10 May 1857)

Soldiers killed British officers and moved to Delhi

Bahadur Shah Zafar was declared emperor

Major Centers:

Delhi (main center)

Kanpur (led by Nana Sahib)

Jhansi (led by Rani Lakshmibai)

Central India (led by Tantia Tope)

War spread across North India.

Reasons for Failure

1. Lack of Unity

No national unity among Indians

Different groups had different interests

2. Poor Leadership

No central leader to guide the movement

Lack of coordination among rebels

3. Weak Resources

Rebels had outdated weapons

British had modern army and technology

4. Limited Area

Revolt was mostly limited to Northern India

Southern India remained quiet

5. Support to British

Some rulers and groups supported British

British received help in controlling rebellion

Results of War

1. End of Mughal Empire

Bahadur Shah Zafar was exiled to Rangoon

2. End of Company Rule

British East India Company abolished in 1858

British Crown took direct control

3. Beginning of British Raj

India came under direct British government

4. Muslims Suffered the Most

Muslims were blamed for revolt

Lost jobs, lands, and influence

5. Rise of Political Awareness

People realized the need for unity

Later movements for independence started

Pak 522 Short Lecture 5

Muslims' Struggle in British India (1906–1929)

Introduction

At the beginning of the 20th century, Muslims in British India were politically weak and socially backward compared to other communities. Allama Iqbal Presidential Address 1930

Allama Muhammad Iqbal

Introduction

The Presidential Address delivered on 29 December 1930 at the session of the All-India Muslim League in Allahabad represents a paradigm shift in Muslim political thinking—from minority safeguards to the idea of a separate Muslim polity.

Iqbal did not merely present a political demand; he articulated a philosophical, ideological, and civilizational argument rooted in Islamic principles. This address later became the intellectual blueprint for the creation of Pakistan.

1. Need of the Address

Political Developments Leading to 1930

Aftermath of War of Independence 1857

Muslims lost political power

Became socially and economically backward

Rise of Hindu Political Dominance

Formation of Indian National Congress (1885)

Congress gradually became a Hindu-majority platform

Muslim Political Awakening

Formation of All-India Muslim League (1906)

Failure of Hindu-Muslim Cooperation

Lucknow Pact (1916) initially successful

Later collapsed due to conflicting interests

Critical Constitutional Developments

Montagu-Chelmsford Reforms → Limited representation

Khilafat Movement → Failed unity

Muslims feared permanent political subjugation

Nehru Report → Rejected separate electorates

Why the Address Became Necessary

Congress vision = unitary democracy (majority rule)

Muslims demanded:

Separate electorates

Constitutional safeguards

Iqbal realized:

Safeguards within a united India were insufficient → A separate solution was required.

2. Political Career of Iqbal

Educational & Intellectual Background

Studied in:

Government College Lahore

University of Cambridge (1905–1906)

University of Munich (PhD, 1908)

His exposure to Western philosophy (e.g., Friedrich Nietzsche and Henri Bergson) shaped his critique of Western nationalism.

Active Political Life

1926: Elected to Punjab Legislative Council

Participated in:

Muslim League sessions

Round Table Conference debates (indirect influence)

Political Ideology

Opposed:

Secular nationalism

Western democracy without safeguards

Supported:

Islamic political system

Collective Muslim identity

3. Iqbal's Advocacy for Hindu-Muslim Unity

Early Phase (Pre-1908)

Believed in Indian nationalism

Famous patriotic poetry:

“Tarana-e-Hindi” (1904)

Turning Points

Hindi-Urdu Controversy (1867 onward)

Rise of extremist Hindu politics

Economic competition and social separation

Final Position

Iqbal concluded:

Unity is only possible if:

Muslim identity is preserved

Otherwise:

Unity becomes domination

Hence, he shifted from territorial nationalism → ideological nationalism

4. Iqbal Allahabad Address

Key Facts

Date: 29 December 1930

President: Allama Iqbal

Event: Muslim League annual session

Main Proposal

Iqbal proposed:

A North-West Muslim State comprising:

Punjab

Sindh

North-West Frontier Province

Balochistan

He stated:

These regions share:

Religious unity

Cultural coherence

5. Crux of the Address

Fundamental Ideas

Islam is:

A complete code of life

Governs politics, law, society

Muslims are:

A distinct nation (Ummah)

Democracy:

Must be adapted to Indian realities

Federalism:

Necessary for peaceful coexistence

6. Detailed Analysis

Critique of Western Democracy

Iqbal argued:

Western democracy = numerical majority rule

In India:

Majority = Hindus

Minority = Muslims

Result:

Muslims would be politically marginalized

Islamic Political Philosophy

Sovereignty belongs to:

Allah (Divine Law)

Governance must ensure:

Social justice

Equality

Welfare

Concept of Identity

It has degrees based on:

Culture

Religion

History

Iqbal saw Muslims as a distinct “set” with strong membership values, not overlapping significantly with Hindus.

7. Iqbal and Two-Nation Theory

Explanation

Two-Nation Theory states:

Aspect

Muslims

Hindus

Religion

Islam

Hinduism

Law

Shariah

Hindu customs

Culture

Islamic

Hindu

History

Separate heroes

Separate heroes

Iqbal's Contribution

Gave philosophical justification

Transformed it from:

Political demand → Ideological doctrine

8. Reactions

Jawaharlal Nehru opposed it

Promoted:

United Indian nationalism

Saw it as:

A threat to unity

Muslim League Reaction

Mixed response:

Some leaders appreciated vision

Others considered it impractical

British Government Reaction

British Government ignored initially

Focus remained on:

Round Table Conferences

9. Iqbal–Jinnah Correspondence

Muhammad Ali Jinnah

Key Themes

Muslims are a nation, not a minority

Need for:

Separate federation

Muslim political unity

Important Insight

Iqbal emphasized:

“Islam is a social order, not just a belief”

Impact

Convinced Jinnah to:

Return from London (1934 earlier, but politically strengthened later)

Strengthened Pakistan demand

10. Evaluation of Iqbal’s Political Thought

Strengths

Visionary leadership

Ideological clarity

Anticipated:

Future Hindu-Muslim conflict

Limitations

No clear constitutional structure

Geographical ambiguity

Initially lacked mass political support

Historical Importance

Led to:

Lahore Resolution

Eventually:

The Government of India Act 1935 And Congress Ministries

This was the longest and most important constitutional reform introduced by the British government in India before independence. It aimed to reorganize the political structure of British India and provide limited self-government to Indians. The Act became the basis of provincial autonomy and led to the elections of 1937, after which Congress ministries were formed in several provinces. The experience of Congress rule from 1937 to 1939 greatly influenced Muslim politics and strengthened the demand for a separate Muslim homeland.

Important Features of Government of India Act 1935

1. All-India Federation

The Act proposed the establishment of an All-India Federation consisting of:

British Indian provinces

Princely states

However, the federation never came into existence because princely states refused to join.

2. Provincial Autonomy

One of the most important features was provincial autonomy.

Provinces were given self-government.

Dyarchy was abolished at the provincial level.

Elected ministers became responsible for administration.

Governors still had special powers and could interfere whenever they considered necessary.

This feature allowed Indian political parties to form ministries after the 1937 elections.

3. Dyarchy at the Centre

Although dyarchy ended in provinces, it was introduced at the central level.

Subjects were divided into:

Reserved subjects

Transferred subjects

The Governor General retained strong control over important matters such as:

Defense

Foreign affairs

Finance

4. Bicameral Legislature

A bicameral legislature was introduced at the center:

Upper House

Council of States

Lower House

Federal Assembly

5. Separate Electorates

Separate electorates for Muslims and other minorities were retained.

Muslims voted for Muslim candidates while Hindus voted for Hindu candidates.

This protected Muslim political identity.

6. Enlargement of Franchise

The number of voters increased significantly.

Millions of Indians got limited voting rights, although voting was still based on:

Property

Education

Tax qualifications

7. Establishment of Federal Court

A Federal Court was established in 1937 to settle constitutional disputes.

It later became the basis of the judicial system of independent India and Pakistan.

8. Special Powers of Governor General

The Governor General remained very powerful.

He could:

Dismiss ministries

Issue ordinances

Control defense and finance

Suspend constitutional reforms in emergencies

Thus, real power still remained with the British government.

Elections Of 1937

The Elections of 1937

The Government of India Act 1935 introduced provincial autonomy. This reform created elected provincial governments. The new system required provincial elections to form ministries. Therefore, the British government organized elections in 1937. These elections became the first test of the new constitutional system.

Table 7.2: 1937 Elections Results

The 1937 elections were held in eleven provinces of British India, including Punjab, Bengal, Bombay, Madras, the United Provinces, Bihar, Assam, Sindh, Orissa, and the North-West Frontier Province. Around 30 million people were eligible to vote, but participation remained limited due to property and education qualifications. A total of 1,585 legislative seats were contested, including 482 reserved for Muslims under the system of separate electorates to ensure minority representation.

Congress Performance

Congress won major victories in Hindu-majority provinces such as:

Madras

Bombay

United Provinces

Bihar

Central Provinces

Congress formed ministries in 7 provinces.

Muslim League Performance

The Muslim League performed poorly in many provinces.

Reasons included:

Weak organization

Regional Muslim parties

Lack of rural support

Influence of local landlords and provincial leaders

The League succeeded mainly in Muslim minority provinces rather than Muslim majority areas.

Significance of Elections

The elections revealed:

Congress was dominant among Hindus.

Muslim League had not yet become the sole representative of Muslims.

Muslims in different provinces were politically divided.

However, Congress rule later helped Muslim League gain mass Muslim support.

Congress and Muslim League Manifestos

Congress Manifesto

The Congress manifesto focused on:

National unity

Independence from British rule

Reduction of land revenue

Civil liberties

Educational reforms

Economic development

Congress claimed to represent all Indians regardless of religion.

Muslim League Manifesto

The Muslim League manifesto emphasized:

Protection of Muslim rights

Safeguarding Islamic culture

Separate electorates

Constitutional safeguards

Fair representation in government jobs and legislatures

The League warned Muslims about possible Hindu domination under Congress rule.

Formation of Congress Ministries

After winning elections, Congress formed ministries in the following provinces:

Madras

Bombay

United Provinces

Bihar

Central Provinces

Orissa

North-West Frontier Province (later)

Congress ministries remained in power from July 1937 until October 1939.

Congress Refusal to Share Power

Congress refused coalition governments with Muslim League in several provinces, especially in the United Provinces.

Congress demanded:

Muslim League members should join Congress individually.

League parliamentary boards should dissolve.

considered this attitude humiliating and anti-Muslim.

This strengthened Muslim distrust toward Congress.

Atrocities of Congress Against Muslims

Muslims strongly criticized Congress ministries for discriminatory policies.

The Muslim League highlighted several actions as anti-Muslim.

1. Wardha Education Scheme

Congress introduced the Wardha educational scheme.

Muslims believed:

It promoted Hindu ideology.

It ignored Islamic education.

Hindi was preferred over Urdu.

2. Promotion of Hindi

Congress governments promoted Hindi and attempted to replace Urdu in some areas.

Muslims considered Urdu an important symbol of Muslim identity.

3. Bande Mataram

The song “Bande Mataram” was sung in schools and official functions.

Muslims objected because:

The song contained Hindu religious themes.

It conflicted with Islamic beliefs.

4. Congress Flag

The Congress tricolor flag was promoted in schools and public institutions.

Muslims feared Congress wanted to impose Hindu political dominance.

5. Religious and Cultural Pressure

Muslims complained of:

Restrictions on religious freedom

Bias in government jobs

Favoritism toward Hindus

Neglect of Muslim culture

6. Pirpur Report (1938)

The Muslim League appointed a committee under Raja Syed Muhammad Mehdi of Pirpur. The report documented alleged injustices against Muslims under Congress rule. It became an important political weapon for the Muslim League.

7. Sharif Report

Another report from Bihar highlighted Muslim grievances against Congress ministries.

8. Muslim Mass Contact Campaign

Congress launched a campaign to attract Muslims directly.

Muslim League viewed it as an attempt to weaken Muslim political identity.

Recognition of Muslim League

The period of Congress ministries proved highly beneficial for Muslim League growth.

Many Muslims concluded:

Congress represented mainly Hindu interests.

Muslims needed separate political leadership.

Rise of Jinnah

emerged as the undisputed leader of Muslims.

He united different Muslim groups under the Muslim League banner.

Day of Deliverance (1939)

When Britain entered in 1939, Congress ministries resigned in protest without consulting Indians.

Jinnah declared 22 December 1939 as the “Day of Deliverance” from Congress rule.

This event further increased Muslim League popularity.

Muslim League as Sole Representative

By the end of Congress rule:

Muslim League had become much stronger.

Muslims increasingly supported the League.

The demand for constitutional safeguards evolved toward the demand for a separate homeland.

This eventually led to the in 1940.

Conclusion

The Government of India Act 1935 introduced major constitutional reforms and provincial autonomy in British India. The elections of 1937 brought Congress ministries into power in many provinces. Although Congress claimed nationalism and unity, many Muslims believed its policies favored Hindu culture and interests. The experience of Congress rule increased Muslim political awareness and strengthened the Muslim League under the leadership of . As a result, the Muslim League gained recognition as the representative organization of Indian Muslims and moved closer to the demand for Pakistan.

Lahore Resolution 1940 & Role of Jinnah

1. Introduction

The Lahore Resolution marks a decisive turning point in the political history of the Indian subcontinent. It was passed on 23 March 1940 during the annual session of the All India Muslim League at Lahore, held at Minto Park (now Iqbal Park).

Before this resolution, Muslims were demanding constitutional safeguards within a united India. However, this event transformed their demand into the creation of independent Muslim states.

This resolution is often called the Pakistan Resolution, although the term “Pakistan” was not used in the original document. It laid the ideological and political foundation for the eventual creation of Pakistan in 1947.

2. Need of Lahore Resolution

The Lahore Resolution was the result of accumulated political frustrations and ideological developments:

a. Failure of Hindu-Muslim Unity

Efforts like the Lucknow Pact (1916) initially promoted cooperation, but later developments created mistrust. Congress increasingly claimed to represent all Indians, ignoring Muslim concerns.

b. Congress Rule (1937–1939)

After provincial elections, Congress formed governments in several provinces. Muslims experienced:

Cultural domination (promotion of Hindi over Urdu)

Introduction of Bande Mataram in schools

Discrimination in jobs and administration

This created fear of “Hindu Raj”.

c. Nehru Report (1928)

Prepared under Jawaharlal Nehru, it rejected:

Separate electorates

Muslim political safeguards

This convinced Muslims that Congress would not protect their rights.

d. Failure of Constitutional Efforts

Various reforms like:

Simon Commission (1927)

Round Table Conferences (1930–32)

failed to address Muslim demands effectively.

e. Rise of Muslim Nationalism

Muslims increasingly viewed themselves as a distinct nation, based on:

Religion (Islam)

Culture

History

Social system

This led to acceptance of the Two-Nation Theory.

3. Session, Timeline & Participants

a. Timeline

1930: Allama Iqbal suggests idea of Muslim state

1933: Chaudhry Rehmat Ali coins the term “Pakistan”

1937–39: Congress rule increases Muslim concerns

22–24 March 1940: Lahore session held

23 March 1940: Resolution passed

b. Session Details

Venue: Minto Park, Lahore

Organized by: All India Muslim League

Attendance: Over 100,000 people (mass political gathering)

This showed that Muslim League had transformed into a mass political movement.

c. Key Participants

Muhammad Ali Jinnah – President, central leader

A. K. Fazlul Haq – Mover of resolution

Chaudhry Khaliquzzaman – Supporter

Liaquat Ali Khan – Close associate of Jinnah

Delegates from Punjab, Bengal, Sindh, NWFP, and other regions

4. Original Text

The resolution stated:

No constitutional plan would work unless acceptable to Muslims.

Muslim majority areas in:

North-West India (Punjab, Sindh, NWFP, Balochistan)

Eastern India (Bengal, Assam)

should be grouped into independent states.

Simplified Explanation

India is not one nation; it consists of multiple nations.

Muslims are a separate nation.

They need their own homeland to protect their identity.

Minorities in both regions should be protected.

Important ambiguity: It used the word “states” (plural), which was later interpreted as one country (Pakistan).

5. Objectives of Lahore Resolution

Establish political independence for Muslims

Protect Islamic culture, civilization, and identity

Ensure economic and social justice for Muslims

Provide constitutional safeguards for minorities

Reject centralized Hindu-dominated government

Strengthen Muslim unity under one leadership

6. Features of Lahore Resolution

a. Separate Nation Concept

Based on the Two-Nation Theory: Muslims ≠ Hindus in religion, culture, law, and lifestyle.

b. Geographical Basis

Only Muslim majority areas were included.

c. Independence

Demand was not for autonomy but complete independence.

d. Flexibility

No clear structure—allowed political negotiation later.

e. Minority Rights

Protection promised to minorities (important diplomatic feature).

f. Constitutional Approach

Resolution followed legal and political framework rather than rebellion.

7. Role of Muhammad Ali Jinnah

Muhammad Ali Jinnah was the driving force behind the resolution.

a. Transformation of Muslim Politics

Shifted Muslim demand from:

Safeguards → Separate homeland

Made Muslim League the sole voice of Muslims

b. Visionary Leadership

Jinnah foresaw that:

Democracy in united India = Hindu majority dominance

Muslims would become politically weak

c. Historic Presidential Address

He clearly stated:

Islam and Hinduism are not just religions but complete social systems

Muslims have their own laws, culture, heroes, and traditions

d. Political Strategy

Avoided emotional slogans

Used constitutional and logical arguments

United diverse Muslim regions under one demand

e. Diplomatic Skill

Presented resolution in moderate tone

Avoided direct confrontation with British

Kept options open for negotiations

f. Nation Builder

This resolution made Jinnah: Quaid-e-Azam (Great Leader) of Muslims

8. Reactions to the Resolution

a. Congress Reaction

Completely rejected it

Claimed it would divide India

Leaders like Mahatma Gandhi opposed partition

b. British Reaction

Neutral but cautious

Saw it as leverage in negotiations

Later considered it in constitutional plans

c. Muslim Reaction

Enthusiastic support

Increased popularity of Muslim League

Muslims united politically

d. Hindu Organizations

Strong opposition

Fear of losing political and economic control

9. Impact of Lahore Resolution

Short-Term Impact

Strengthened Muslim League

Unified Muslim political voice

Created clear political direction

Long-Term Impact

Led to demand for Pakistan

Influenced major events:

Cripps Mission (1942)

Gandhi-Jinnah Talks (1944)

Cabinet Mission Plan (1946)

Final Outcome

Creation of Pakistan on 14 August 1947

10: Conclusion

The Lahore Resolution was not just a political statement but a revolutionary shift in ideology. It transformed Muslims from a minority seeking rights into a nation demanding independence.

The leadership of Muhammad Ali Jinnah turned this vision into reality through determination, strategy, and political wisdom.

Without this resolution, the creation of Pakistan would not have been possible.
