Lesson-11

Kachru's Three Circle Model of World English

Topic-061: The Inner Circle

What is Kachru's Three Circle Model of World English?

It is a classification based on the three-way categorization of ENL, ESL, and EFL.

Name the countries included in the Inner Circle.

USA, UK, Canada, Australia, New Zealand.

How did English reach the Inner Circle countries?

English reached these countries as a result of its first diaspora.

Define diaspora in the context of the Inner Circle.

Diaspora refers to the movement or migration of English speakers from Britain, carrying the language to Australia, New Zealand, and North America.

What are the features of the Inner Circle?

Traditional monolingual native speakers, English as the first or only language, dominant culture based around English.

Topic-062: The Outer Circle

Name some countries included in the Outer Circle.

India, Pakistan, Philippines, Singapore, Nigeria, Gambia.

How did English spread in the Outer Circle?

Through the second diaspora, which involved colonization in Asia and Africa.

What are the features of the Outer Circle?

English as one of two or more languages, official or major government language, and it serves various functions in social, educational, administrative, and literary domains.

Topic-063: The Expanding Circle

Name some countries in the Expanding Circle.

China, Indonesia, Russia, Saudi Arabia, Japan, Korea.

How is the third diaspora different in the Expanding Circle?

It has a more recent history and involves the dispersal of English through political and economic influence.

What are the features of the Expanding Circle?

Limited roles in public life, restricted functions in the personal domain, but the situation is likely to change with increasing English introduction in early education.

Topic-064: Status and Functions of English in Outer and Expanding Circles Range

What are some formal functions of English in the Outer and Expanding Circles?

Education at all levels, business, legal systems, and administration.

What is the range of varieties in English use?

A range of varieties is used, and the choice is linked with identity.

What is the depth of English proficiency in these circles?

Varies among people with different educational, socioeconomic levels, jobs, and professions.

Topic-065: Norm Providing, Norm Developing, and Norm Dependent

What role does the Inner Circle play in terms of norms?

It is norm-providing, offering teaching models, methods, and textbooks.

How is the Outer Circle norm-dependent?

It includes performance varieties and depends on native speaker standards, with British and American varieties as prestige models.

Describe the Expanding Circle in terms of norms.

It is norm-developing, with varied attitudes, ambivalence towards English, and concerns about political and cultural identities.

Lesson-12

Kachru's Three Circle-Model of World English

Topic-066: Institutionalization of English

What is institutionalization in the context of English?

It refers to the official recognition and acceptance of English, with its status explicitly recognized.

Provide examples of countries where English is institutionalized in Africa.

In Kenya, English is the second national language after Swahili. In Nigeria and Zambia, it is one of the state languages.

What is the official status of English in the Caribbean?

English is the official language by law, used in addition to English-based creole and immigrant languages.

In which European countries does English have a very high profile?

Belgium, Germany, the Netherlands, and the Scandinavian countries.

Topic-067: Limitations of Kachru's Three Circle Model-I

What are some limitations of Kachru's model based on geography?

It overlooks the actual use of English by speakers in specific regions.

How is Kachru's model criticized for its treatment of native speakers?

It considers native speakers superior, regardless of the quality of their language, and doesn't account for pidgins and creoles.

What are some changing uses of English discussed in this topic?

Use as a first language in the outer circle and increased uses in the expanding circle for social purposes and as a medium of instruction.

Topic-068: Limitations of Kachru's Three Circle Model-II

What is a limitation regarding the definition of users' proficiency in Kachru's model?

It does not define users' proficiency, and native speakers may show poor proficiency, while EFL or ESL users may be more competent in grammar and vocabulary.

Why is Kachru's model criticized for ignoring variations within a circle?

It doesn't account for varying degrees of linguistic diversity, sociolinguistic variations, and the use by different L1 groups within a country.

What does the term 'inner circle' in Kachru's model imply?

There can be misinterpretation, with native speakers appearing more important.

Topic-069: The Nativeness Paradigm

What was the dominant paradigm in second language teaching before the 1960s?

The nativeness paradigm, which classified speakers as native or non-native.

How does the nativeness paradigm impact society?

Native speakers are considered 'the best' teachers of English and serve as models for language learning.

What criticisms are raised against the nativeness paradigm?

Determination of identity depends on social factors, proficiency is determined by language acquisition order, and it promotes the English of the ethnic Anglo speaker.

Topic-070: The Nativeness Paradigm II

What problems are associated with defining native speakers?

Issues such as which accent, social group, and age group should be considered.

What alternatives are suggested to the native/non-native distinction?

The use of the term 'expert' to describe accomplished users of English.

What are the advantages of using the term 'expert'?

Expertise is learned, not innate; it is relative, partial, and goes through testing and evaluation.

Topic-071: Redrawing the Three Circle Model-I

Who proposed modifications to Kachru's model in 1997?

David Graddol.

How did David Graddol change the terminology of the circles?

Inner Circle became L1 speakers, Outer Circle became L2 speakers, and Expanding Circle became L3 speakers.

What does language shift refer to in Graddol's modifications?

A shift from L2 to L1 in some countries where English is used for intranational communication.

Topic-072: Redrawing the Three Circle Model-II

Who proposed modifications to Kachru's model in 2001?

Yanu Yasukata.

How did Yanu Yasukata redefine the circles?

Inner circle as genetic ENL, Outer circle as functional ENL.

What problems are associated with Yanu Yasukata's modifications?

The term 'genetic' may be misunderstood, and there is a wide gap in proficiency levels in outer circle countries.

Lesson-13

Variations Across Cultures

Topic-073: 'New' Englishes and 'New' Englishes: Definitions and Differences

What are 'new' Englishes?

Resulting from the first diaspora.

Comprising North America (USA and Canada), Australia, New Zealand, South Africa.

Developing independently of British English.

List the regions included in 'new' Englishes.

North America (USA and Canada), Australia, New Zealand, South Africa.

How do 'New' Englishes differ from 'new' Englishes?

Resulting from the second diaspora.

Used as second languages by bilingual or multilingual people.

Comprising Pakistani English, Indian English, Nigerian English, Singapore English.

What is the independent status of 'new' and 'New' Englishes?

Should be considered in their own right.

Should not be compared with other varieties of Englishes.

What factors influence the acceptance of 'new' and 'New' Englishes?

Acceptance of American English.

Reluctance to accept other varieties.

Topic-074: “new’ Englishes and ‘New’ Englishes

What does 'New' Englishes include?

A large number of varieties.

Dissimilar in characteristics and use.

What are the characteristics of 'New' Englishes in terms of learning?

Learned in schools.

Used as a medium of instruction.

Additional to some other first language.

Describe the characteristics related to contact with native variety in 'New' Englishes.

Developed in regions where a native variety was not the main language of the population.

What is nativization/localization in 'New' Englishes?

Adoption of some language features (sounds, intonation patterns, sentence structures, words, and expressions).

Factors determining the status of an innovation.

Topic-075: Nativization-I

Define nativization.

A process in which a language gains native speakers.

Occurs when a second language used by adult parents becomes the native language of their children.

List the factors prompting nativization.

English assuming functions in the outer circle.

English needs to adapt to its new environment to express local concepts.

Absence of native speakers, inadequate teaching, acquisitional limitations.

Topic-076: Nativization-II

What is functional nativization?

Determined by the range and depth of a language in a society.

Range: domains of function.

Depth: the degree of social penetration of the language.

Provide examples of functional nativization in South Asia.

Indian English and Pakistani English.

Range of functional domains: corporate trade, media, development, government, higher education, science and technology, creative writing.

Topic-077: Nativization-III

How are nativized varieties recognized?

Acquire new identities in socio-cultural contexts.

Autonomous local varieties with their own rules.

What is the prevailing perception in the inner circle regarding nativized varieties?

Not recognized as standard English language varieties.

What characterizes the nativization of English in the outer circle?

Evolution of characteristic features at the phonological, lexical, syntactic, and discourse levels.

Initially rejected by purists but increasingly accepted.

Topic-078: Nativization of English in Pakistan

Provide examples of native lexicalization in Pakistan.

PPP had informed him that Election Commission's affairs were handed over to a Secretary.

Pakistanis waited on a cold December night for 1991 to be firecrackered.

What are examples of Urdu-English hybrid derivations?

Goondaism, Dacoit, Dacoitee.

Give examples of semantic shift in Pakistan's English.

A monthly: a bribe paid every month.

A gunman: a bank guard.

Identify instances of grammar variation in Pakistan's English.

Pluralization of uncountables (Equipments, Informations).

Lack of subject-verb inversion in questions (Why you are laughing?, What you are looking at?).

Lesson-14

Variations Across Cultures

Topic-079: Contact Literature-I

What is Contact Literature?

Answer: Contact Literature refers to literature written in distinctive varieties of English produced through contact with non-Western cultures and languages.

How does contact with non-Western cultures impact English?

Answer: Nativized varieties of English emerge, broadening the language as it becomes institutionalized in nations outside Western cultural traditions.

What are the beliefs of contact literature writers?

Answer: They believe that some aspects of non-English culture are inexpressible in English, and contact literature stretches or reshapes the expressive qualities of English.

Topic-080: Contact Literature-II

What influences the choice of English variety in contact literature?

Answer: The spread and institutionalization of English lead to pluricentricity, with users consciously choosing which model of English to follow.

Why do many creative writers from Africa and Asia prefer local varieties of English?

Answer: To present the true spirit, traditions, and values of their own cultures, believing that English should be decolonized.

According to Rushdie, what does decolonizing English involve?

Answer: As per Rushdie, cited in Kachru & Nelson, 2006, it involves making English in other images.

Topic-081: Concerns about Contact Literature

What are the two dimensions of literature in any language?

Answer: Linguistic (language conventions) and Cultural (personal or cultural content, including philosophies and attitudes).

What challenges do contact literature writers face in terms of credibility?

Answer: Depicting life, culture, and values through language conventions alien to that culture, making the inexpressibility of non-English culture in English a potential issue.

What doubts exist about varieties of English in contact literature?

Answer: Mistrust toward language variation, the changing standard dialect, and variations among native "inner circle" speakers of English.

Topic-082: Features of Contact Literature

How do contact literatures exhibit national identity and linguistic distinctiveness?

Answer: They blend two linguistic features, literary traditions, and extend linguistic categories, showcasing national identity and linguistic distinctiveness.

Give examples illustrating the impact of new social and cultural contexts on language.

Answer: Examples such as "It doesn't worth the price" show inevitable changes when a language enters new social and cultural contexts.

Topic-083: Language Use by Multilinguals

What does a multilingual's repertoire consist of?

Answer: A range of languages with distinct grammars and functions, allowing them to choose resources to represent local situational contexts.

How does nativization of texts affect readers from different cultural contexts?

Answer: It requires active participation for understanding, and if not achieved, the text becomes limiting.

Topic-084: Strategies for Text Nativization

Define transcreation in the context of language use by multilinguals.

Answer: Transcreation is the process of adapting a message from one language to another while maintaining its intent, style, tone, and context.

Give examples of discourse markers from different English varieties.

Answer: Examples include the "eh" particle in Australian and New Zealand English, "la(h)" particle in Malaysian-Singapore English, and "ji" particle in Pakistani English.

Lesson-15

Variations in World Englishes: Linguistic Features

Topic-085: Phonology-I

What is an accent?

Answer: The way one sounds when speaking, influenced by how, where, and when a person learned the language and determined by their location and social groups.

How do people in close contact groups differ in accent?

Answer: They share a way of speaking (accent) with differences in stress, rhythm, and segmental features.

Give examples of stress and rhythm differences.

Answer: Examples include 'success' pronounced as 'suc'cess' and 'recognize' as 'recog'nize'.

How is stress assignment different in nativized varieties?

Answer: It does not follow the same rules as inner circle varieties, and it may seem peculiar to native speakers.

Topic-086: Phonology-II

How do nativized varieties follow conventions of L1 in stress assignment?

Answer: Nativized varieties of English follow conventions of their first languages in stress assignment, as illustrated in examples like 'biology' pronounced as 'ba-yo-lo-ji'.

What is a consequence of no distinction between noun and verb stress?

Answer: There is no use of stress to distinguish between nouns and verbs, as seen in examples like 'import' (verb) and 'import' (noun).

Topic-087: Phonology-III

How does simplification of final consonant clusters affect pronunciation?

Answer: It may lead to the loss of past tense endings and plural markers on nouns, as in 'lef' for 'left' and 'Pick' for 'picked'.

Explain the distinction between clear and dark l sounds.

Answer: The light l comes at the beginning or near the beginning, while the dark l comes at the end of the word or before a vowel sound.

What is the consequence of no distinction between r and l sounds?

Answer: There is no distinction between 'rate' and 'late', 'feeling' and 'fearing', or 'cutter' and 'cuddle'.

How is vowel insertion used in s clusters?

Answer: Vowel insertion is simplified by inserting a neutral vowel between two consonants, pronouncing it with an initial vowel.

Topic-088: Lexis-I

What are locally coined words and expressions in New English?

Answer: They involve coinage, addition of prefixes or suffixes, and compounding local concepts with English items, as seen in examples like 'stingko' and 'spacy'.

Provide examples of compounding in Pakistani English.

Answer: Examples include 'gunman' (an armed guard), 'flying coach' (a fast bus), and 'mouse-hearted' (coward).

Topic-089: Lexis-II

Give examples of borrowing from indigenous languages.

Answer: Examples include 'chai' for tea and 'crore' for ten million.

Explain unsuccessful attempts to use idioms in New English.

Answer: There are variations caused by pronunciation differences, as seen in 'gift of the gap' instead of 'gift of the gab'.

Provide examples of direct translations from indigenous idioms.

Answer: Examples include 'to shake legs' for being idle and 'to eat someone's salt' for being loyal to someone.

Topic-090: Lexis-III

What is lexical repetition and redundancy?

Answer: It involves an extra element in a sentence or phrase and is considered a universal feature of spoken varieties.

Explain the concept of reduplication.

Answer: Reduplication is the use of double words or two words expressing one idea, as seen in 'flower bouquet' and 'cost price'.
