Subjectives

Q. Define idiom

Any expression that means something other than its words seem to suggest can be called an idiom. The study of language constantly requires in interpretation of socially determined meaning. Proverbs and idioms are also determined by a socio-geographical experience.

Q. Define the term media (imp)

Media are the communication outlets or tools used to store and deliver information or data. The term refers to components of the mass media communications industry, such as print media, publishing, the news media, photography, cinema, broadcasting (radio and television), and advertising.

The development of early writing and paper enabled longer-distance communication systems such as mail, including in the Persian Empire (Chapar Khaneh and Angarium) and Roman Empire, which can be interpreted as early forms of media. Writers such as Howard Rheingold have framed early forms of human communication as early forms of media, such as the Lascaux cave paintings and early writing. Another framing of the history of media starts with the Chauvet Cavepaintings and continues with other ways to carry human communication beyond the short range of voice: smoke signals, trail markers, and sculpture.

The term media in its modern application relating to communication channels was first used by Canadian communications theorist Marshall McLuhan, who stated in Counterblast (1954): "The media are not toys; they should not be in the hands of Mother Goose and Peter Pan executives. They can be entrusted only to new artists, because they are art forms." By the mid-1960s, the term had spread to general use in North America and the United Kingdom. The phrase "mass media" was, according to H.L. Mencken, used as early as 1923 in the United States.

The term "medium" (the singular form of "media") is defined as "one of the means or channels of general communication, information, or entertainment in society, as newspapers, radio, or television."

Q. What language issues are faced in primary education in Pakistan?

The standard national system of education is mainly inspired from the British system. In order to understand the issues of national identity, language policy and education at primary level we need to think about language policy at primary level, and status of regional and national languages in education system. As of 2009, Pakistan faces a net primary school attendance rate for both sexes of 66 percent: a figure below estimated world average of 90 percent (According to UNESCO Institute for Statistics - Adjusted net enrolment ratio in primary education).

Issues related to primary education in Pakistan include low level of public investment as public expenditure on education has been 2.2 percent of GNP in recent years. There has been more focus of funds on higher education. Another issue is of lower income class and particularly it is related to the issues of private education where there is always a compromise on quality

Q. linguistic imperialism 5

According to Phillipson (1992, p. 52), imperialism is a type of relationship whereby “one society or collective in more general terms can dominate another” and which manifests itself in a variety of ways: economically, politically, militarily, culturally and socially. For Galtung, the world can be divided into two domains:

1. the Center (the powerful Western countries)
2. the Periphery (the developing ones)

Language is the medium through which the elite of the Center regulate the Periphery; and plays a crucial function by providing the link between the dominant and the dominated groups; and is representative of the basis upon which the notion of linguistic imperialism is built. Phillipson (1992, p. 47) asserts that the legitimization of English linguistic expansion has been based on two notions:

1. Ethnocentricity
2. Educational policy

Q. technological variations and situational variations of Susan Herring 5

Susan Herring (2004) characterizes her own work as computer-mediated discourse analysis, which she organizes around a series of analytic priorities that continue to direct a lot of research in the field. These include:

1. Technological variables such as synchronicity, size of message buffer, anonymous messaging, persistence of transcript, channels of communication e.g., text, audio, video, automatic filtering.
2. Situational variables such as participation structure e.g., public/private, number of participants, demographics, setting, purpose, topic, tone, norms of participation, linguistic code.

Q. national language of Pakistan

The linguistic situation of Pakistan is a highly complex arena with several regional languages, a national language (Urdu) and English as an international language/ as a foreign/as second language. There is immense regional and linguistic diversity in Pakistan. We have Pakhtuns, Balochis, Punjabis, and Sindhis. Diverse cultural traditions exist and people speak different languages. There are also more than 7 million Muhajirs. From a linguistic standpoint this is an amalgam of heterogeneous groups with widely different linguistic characteristics.

Urdu is the official language. But it is not the first language of the majority. Urdu is written in a modified version of the Persian script, from right to left. It is not indigenous to Pakistan and in its literary form it emphasizes words of Persian and Arabic origin. It enjoys great prestige as a symbol of the Pakistan movement and as the national language of Pakistan. The greatest concentration of speakers of Urdu is in Punjab and Karachi. If within the hierarchy of languages English comes on the top, second position goes to Urdu. Urdu is preferred against all the regional and local languages for use in all the formal situations, though with the passage of time English is taking its place in the formal sphere of life. In spite of its status as the national language, however, only a few percent of Pakistanis speak Urdu as their first language.

Since independence it has the status as a national language, but there has always been a demand for cultural autonomy in other provinces, and resentment against discriminating govt. policies. There is a tension between Urdu and local languages on one level, and Urdu and English on the other level. But, Urdu has always been favoured in all the language policies.

Q. Precisely describe native speaker of a language

Common- sense view is that one who is born in a community of other speakers of English, and acquires his language from parents. Others may turn to them for guidance.

The question is what is acceptable or not; and whether a particular grammatical construction is better or worse than another. The 'arbitration' role of the native speaker is problematized when one considers communities. For example: In India non- native speakers use English for such a wide variety of purposes that the views of the native speaker become less and less relevant; and more local norms of usage emerge. Being a native speaker gives a sense of community, and with that, a sense of identity. Being a native speaker of English gives you a different identity from the group of individuals who are native speakers of French. An interesting issue in this regard is of bilinguals: For example, individuals from Montreal in Canada who are bilingual speakers of French and English. The question arises whether they are members of both groups simultaneously, or form instead a group of their own? Some speakers align themselves with what they perceive as a particular local variety. Within England, for example, this might be as a 'northerner', or more locally as a 'north- westerner. So, there are issues of identity.

Q. 3types of code switching

Code Switching is the switch or shift from one language to the other which involves longer stretches or units of language at the clause or sentence boundary. Mainly it has three types:

- tag switching
- intra sentential
- inter-sentential

Q. Extended diglossia

Joshua Fishman presented a modification of Ferguson's (1959) original concept and rather strict definition of diglossia in (1967). He proposed an expansion of Ferguson's definition of diglossia in two respects.

1. A diglossic speech community is not characterized by the use of two language varieties only. There may be more than two language varieties used within a diglossic community.
2. Diglossia refers to all kinds of language varieties which show functional distribution in a speech community. Diglossia, as a consequence, describes a number of sociolinguistic situations, from stylistic differences within one language or the use of separate dialects to separate languages.

Q. language contact in Pakistan

ENG510 Spring 2019 (Finals) solved by Maha Malik

To understand language contact in Pakistan and its related issues we need to first of all understand certain questions: What is language contact? Why language contact occurs? What does it imply? Pakistan has multiple languages and dialects as well as multiple identities. We have an official language, a national language and a huge variety of regional languages. Language/s of an average Pakistani need to be considered from various aspects which include language/s in the school, market and for business, on street, at home and with friends. Also certain other factors such as multilingualism that is a social norm play a vital role. In the context of multilingualism issues of linguistic identity and relevant social issues emerge; and language contact in the social network of multilingual society makes it a very complicated situation. In other words there are various social and cultural push and pull forces that operate on various contact languages. As far as the impact of language contact is concerned, it becomes evident in various forms such as code switching, code mixing, language-shift and language desertion

Q. language and power

When we think of language and power we need to think how they both inter-relate. Language use does not take place in vacuum. In the same way power exertion also does not happen in vacuum. Regarding the Pakistani social context we also need to keep in mind the changing social scenario and political aspect of this social context. In fact language is as a determiner of power. It is a dividing and a unifying force. Ideological power, linguistic power, economic power and power of media all interrelate.

Q. dominating feature of eng # research in sociolinguistics

The question of concern is why to do research in sociolinguistics and what the scope of this research is. The scope of research in sociolinguistics relates to most up-to-date and the most rapidly advancing areas of research including language and identity and language and gender. This has resulted in macro-sociolinguistic work in the consequences for language of globalization and the multinational economy: politics, ideology and education policy have become key areas for sociolinguists.

Q. ethnography of communication

Hymes is one of the founding sociolinguists like Erving Goffman, John Gumperz and Susan Ervin-Tripp, who grounded their work in the Sapirian tradition, but expanded their concerns with language beyond description. The generational shift from descriptive linguistics into sociolinguistics was contemporaneous with the Chomskyan shift to Transformational-generative Grammar. The sociolinguistics movement expressed continuity with prior generations of scholars, in contrast to the acrimony surrounding transformational grammarians' split with structural linguistics. Hymes was particularly critical of Chomsky's idea of linguistic competence and his failure to account for linguistic variation. According to Hymes (1972), we do more than construct grammatically possible linguistic utterances, and, ungrammatical utterances may be socially appropriate, just as grammatical utterances can be socially inappropriate.

Q. Input Hypothesis

The input hypothesis developed by linguist Stephen Krashen makes a distinction between language acquisition and language learning (acquisition-learning distinction), claiming that acquisition is a subconscious process, whereas learning is a conscious one. According to this hypothesis, the acquisition process in L2 (Language 2) is the same as L1 (Language 1) acquisition. The learning process is consciously learning and inputting the language being learned. However, this goes as far as to state that input is all that is required for acquisition. Sociocultural approaches reject the notion that SLA is a purely psychological phenomenon, and attempt to explain it in a social context. Some key social factors that influence SLA are the level of immersion, connection to the L2 community, and gender.

Q. Linguistic relativity

ENG510 Spring 2019 (Finals) solved by Maha Malik

Defining linguistic relativism we can say that the structure of a language affects its speakers' world view or cognition. To them the human languages hide a common universal structure of thought or universal grammar. According to Pinker, to speak a natural language is a question of translating universal "mentalese" into whatever particular language one is brought up speaking. On the other hand, Pinker thinks grammar conservatism, the urge to differentiate between correct and incorrect usage of a language, is mere snobbery. And this would be the case even if one accepted, that in the long run one's own language is doomed to the same inexorable fate that all languages succumb to: evolution, transformation, or even eventual extinction. Yet the same linguistic communities have institutions dedicated to the impossible task of freezing language long enough to establish standards and defend them, futilely, against their inevitable demise.

Q.Status of oral literature in Pakistan. (imp)

There are various famous forms of oral literature in Pakistan which include folklore, tappa, lori, qisa, geet etc. As far as folklore in Pakistan is concerned, there is a lot of oral literature available in the regional languages of Pakistan. Here are some details:

Pakhtun folklore: Songs sung with Khattak dance

Sindh folklore:

Manifestations of traditional Watayo Faqir tales

Punjabi folklore: Heer and Ranjha from Jhang is very famous

In the same way, we have Saraiki and Kashmiri folklore. It is of significance to talk about "tappay" as they are very popular. They are an oral tradition, sung by women on weddings for celebration. Tappay represent folk wisdom, cultural values, traditional rivalries, gender roles, customs and traditions. Another important oral tradition is of "lori". It is a celebration of motherhood, female gender sensibilities and culture.

Q.name kinship terms

Kinship terminology is the system used in languages to refer to the persons to whom an individual is related through kinship. Kinship terms are the terms used to name relationships in a particular society. Each society has its own kinship terms, which reflect the culture of that society. The meanings of kinship terms reflect the relationships among kith and kin in each particular society. They invoke social meanings associated with them. Various kinship terms are used in the various social environments.

Kinship terms may be differentiated by various features like: sex (father, mother or son, daughter) generation (mother and daughter) collateral kinship distance (uncle and aunt)

Q.define functions of proverbs (imp)

Proverbs play very important roles in different types of literary works. The most important function of proverbs is to teach and educate the audience. They often contain expert advice, with a role for educating the readers on what they may face if they do something.

Q.issue of data collection.

Data collection in sociolinguistics is of crucial significance and due to its significance the issues attached to it also become significant. Various data collection techniques are employed in analyzing social variation and language use. There are various options available such as: 1. Working with the existing data 2. Generating new data 3. The sociolinguistic interview 4. Free conversation 5. Issues

Q. Repetition Note

Societies where speakers have more than one language available, speakers use different conversational strategies to serve specific linguistic functions. Repetitions in the process of code mixing are one of the strategies used by speakers to achieve certain linguistic goals. Functions of repetition include to reemphasize their idea, to ensure that they have conveyed to the listener exactly what they wanted to convey, to facilitate understanding on listener's part, to convey certain socio-cultural connotations attached to the linguistic choice of the repeated item etc. A variety of ways are used by Pakistani speakers to create repetitions in the process of code mixing of Urdu/ English. For example, a word used in one language is immediately repeated for instance: nisbatan comparatively, or north shūmāl.

2: English and Education in Pakistan Note

To understand the status of English in relation to education in Pakistan, we need to think of the historical background of English in the sub-continent. The Report of the Education Sector Reforms (2001) and the Task Force on Higher Education (2002) set up by General Musharraf have also not addressed the issue of language policy in higher education. Learners' language difficulties in the English medium and provision of quality materials in Urdu for higher education have not been given adequate attention so far. As far as English Language Teaching (ELT) is concerned, Abbas (1998) asserts that despite the massive inputs into the teaching of English, the national results are abysmally poor. English is a compulsory language from class VI to BA in all schools, the exception being Sindh and Punjab, where English is compulsory from class 1.

Q. para-linguistic Communication

Paralinguistic communication is the study of voice and how words are said. Paralinguistic signals and cues refer to every element and nuance of your speech. It is the study of vocal and sometimes non-vocal signals beyond the basic verbal message or speech. It is also known as vocalics. Paralinguistics sets great store on how something is said, not on what is said. It includes speech characteristics falling outside of the spoken word. It can modify the meaning behind words. It includes:

• accent • pitch • volume • speech rate, • modulation • fluency

Q. Electronic Media

The media that use electronics or electromechanical audience to access the content is known as electronic media. This is in contrast to static media mainly print media. There are various electronic media types:

1. Television
2. Radio
3. Internet
4. Smart phones
5. Electronic display advertising

Q. What are linguistic rights?

Linguistic rights are the human and civil rights concerning the individual and collective right to choose the language or languages for communication in a private or public atmosphere. Linguistic rights were first included as an international human right in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948. Across the globe, there is a perceptible shift in the analysis of the form and use of the English language. Against the notion of the ‘linguistic imperialism’ of British and American English (Phillipson, 1992) the development of bilingualism and English as an International Language (EIL), which allows the inclusion of varieties of English and recognizes the contribution of non-native speaker teachers, is beginning to form a counter-offensive.

Q. What is social media?

websites and applications that enable users to create and share content or to participate in social networking.

Q. Define English speech community.

Let us take the example of a ‘farming community’ that is a group of people who have farming in common. To define them we are not interested in other features such as interest in rock music or the colour of their eyes. Now to understand a speech community we may draw an analogy of English speech community. So, they all share some sort of common linguistic knowledge. However, the problem is that it is hard to agree on what such ‘knowledge of English’ might actually be. In fact trying to define what ‘English’ is on purely linguistic grounds can be problematic

Q. Write three factors that cause code mixing.

- Motivation
- Discourse functions
- Social standing of the group
- Speaker
- Setting

Q. Write two forms of Sindhi folklore.

Sindh folklore

1. Manifestations of traditional Watayo Faqir tales
2. Legend of Moriro
3. Epic tale of Dodo Chanesar
4. The love story of Sassui and Punhu, is known and sung in every Sindhi settlement.
5. Stories of Umar Marui and Suhuni Mehar

Q. Major drawbacks in Pakistani education system.

1. Little understanding of curricular objectives
2. Inexperienced teachers
3. Defective methods

Q. Explain expanded diglossia with reference to Fishman.(5)

Diglossia has often been noted as a factor in language shift, especially in speech communities where a minority language is in a diglossic relationship with a majority language. Fishman (1967, p. 36) noted that “Bilingualism without diglossia tends to be transitional both in terms of the linguistic repertoires of speech communities as well as in terms of the speech varieties involved per se”. In this regard Fishman (1967, p.36) noted that without separate though complementary norms and values to establish and maintain functional separatism of the speech varieties, that language or variety which is fortunate enough to be associated with the predominant drift of social forces tends to displace the other(s)." In some regions or societies in the world people need and/or use more than one language to communicate for various purposes (Sankoff, 2002).

Q. What is the status of Provincial and Local languages in Pakistan ? (5)

The linguistic situation of Pakistan is very complex. There are various regional languages. We have Pakhtuns, Balochis, Punjabis, and Sindhis plus more than 7 million Muhajirs living in Pakistan. We need to understand the status of Urdu and English as well in the midst of no less than 24 languages and a considerably great number of dialects, that is not less than 70, are spoken (Mansoor, 1993). According to Rafique (1993-94, p. 6): "A number of languages are spoken in Pakistan, all belonging to Aryan age except Brahui which is spoken by a small number of people in the Kalat region. These languages heavily lean upon Persian and Arabic. Balochi, due to the area's geographical affinity to Iran, is more akin to the Persian than any other language". Speakers of Punjabi make up 56.1 % of the population and about 48% of Pakistan's population speaks Punjabi as a first language (Mansoor, 1993).

Q. What is the relationship b/w blessings, curses and sociolinguistics? (5) (imp)

Blessings and curses are common in all languages. They are social and culture specific expressions which play an important role in communication. Blessing and cursing are very diverse in nature and serve several functions in social interactions. They reflect the speaker's emotional attitude to the topic of conversation. Blessings are expressions of gratitude or wishes for others. Generally elders use blessing expressions. On the contrary, cursing is considered as verbal act of threatening through which the speaker wishes evil or misfortune to befall on others. They are used to blame others.

Q. Define the term ethnography of communication. (imp)

The ethnography of communication (EOC), originally called the ethnography of speaking, is the analysis of communication within the wider context of the social and cultural practices and beliefs of the members of a particular culture or speech community. It is a method of discourse analysis in linguistics that draws on the anthropological field of ethnography. Unlike ethnography proper, though, EOC takes into account both the communicative form, which may include but is not limited to spoken language, and its function within the given culture.

General aims of this qualitative research method include being able to discern which communication acts and/or codes are important to different groups, what types of meanings groups apply to different communication events, and how group members learn these codes, in order to provide insight into particular communities. This additional insight may be used to enhance communication with group members, make sense of group members' decisions, and distinguish groups from one another, among other things.

Q. what is ethnocentricity and educational policy.

'Ethnocentricity' is the "practice of judging other cultures by standards of its own." These two practices are used to impose a distinction between languages+ to promote the notion of the assumed inferiority of secondary languages with respect to the norms determined by the dominant culture. Burns and Coffin et al. 2001, p.78-87) claim that the extent to which English is involved in the political, educational, social and economic life of a country is clearly a result of both the historical legacy of colonialism and of the varying success of countries since independence in warding off the threats of neocolonialism. In the same way Theo van Leeuwen (in Coulthard et al 1996, p. 55) are of the view, "The English language allows us to make a choice between functionalism and identification, and that the use of this choice in discourse is of critical importance". Graddol (in Burns and Coffin et al. 2001, p.27-8) adds that English has two main functions in the world: it provides a vehicular language for international communication and it forms the basis for constructing cultural identities. The issue of linguistic imperialism as being need based is controversial. The question arises regarding differentiating between 'need' and 'creating a need'. It is claimed that the imposition is based on colonialism

Q. what is meant by the term media linguistics.

Significance of media in today's world is unprecedented. One of the consequences of this spread of media is the emergence of 'Media Linguistics'. There is a lot of cutting-edge research from variationist and interactional sociolinguistics; Media linguistics, and language ideology research as well as minority language studies. Media linguistics has evolved in various ways with the emergence of digital media. "Media linguistics" studies how language is used in the media" (Schmitz, 2015). Its focal point is similar to sociolinguistics that the use of language in actual communicative situations. Specific focus of media linguistics is medium-specific processing of signs and their semiotic materialities.

Q. Elucidate the future of sociolinguistics as a discipline.

Modern sociolinguistics originated in the 1960s as an interdisciplinary subfield intersecting sociology, anthropology, and linguistics. The scope for future developments is very vast because the inter-disciplinary research partnerships suit the nature of the discipline. Sociolinguists can build interdisciplinarity both pedagogically as well as professionally. Sociolinguistics has the potential to bridge gaps in theory and methods. The possibilities of future interdisciplinary scholarship between sociolinguists and sociologists depend on how the gap can be bridged. Half a century after the Social Science Research Council set up a committee on sociolinguistics, the amount of interaction between linguists and sociologists remains minimal. Despite important work on discourse and conversational analysis, very few sociologists have acquired the basic tools of linguistic analysis, and very few linguists have contributed to the thinking of sociologists. As far as future hopes are concerned, in the face of increasingly complex and diverse global realities, sociolinguists can gain greater insight into micro- and macro-level processes of social interaction, social stratification, and social change by jointly investigating. Some key avenues to explore in future include literacy acquisition and educational achievement; the relevance of conversation in bringing about social cohesion and social exclusion; and the significance of conversation styles in processes of prejudice and discrimination.

Q. three major steps included in second language teaching.

The process of any second or foreign language teaching includes

1. 'selection,'
2. 'grading,' and
3. 'presentation'

as the major steps.

Q. language competence.

Linguistic competence is the system of linguistic knowledge possessed by native speakers of a language. It is distinguished from linguistic performance, which is the way a language system is used in communication. Noam Chomsky introduced this concept in his elaboration of generative grammar,^[1] where it has been widely adopted and competence is the only level of language that is studied.

According to Chomsky, competence is the ideal language system that enables speakers to produce and understand an infinite number^[nb 1] of sentences in their language, and to distinguish grammatical sentences from ungrammatical sentences. This is unaffected by "grammatically irrelevant conditions" such as speech errors.^[1] In Chomsky's view, competence can be studied independently of language use, which falls under "performance", for example through introspection and grammaticality judgments by native speakers.

Q. What is slang

Slang may be characterized as a very informal language variety that includes new and sometimes not polite words and meanings. It is often used among particular groups of people, for example, groups of teen-agers or professional groups, and is usually not used in serious speech or writing.

The dictionary presents under the letter K:

- Kisser Noun. Mouth. Origins in boxing
- Knocking shop Noun. A brothel
- Kooky Adj. Crazy, eccentric

Some of the expressions contain ordinary words in the language, only with a special meaning attached to it, like kisser and knocking. These words have acquired new meanings in their polysemy networks. In other cases the expressions contain special words that do not have any non-slang meanings, like kooky. We define a variety as a set of linguistic items with similar social distribution. For dialects and sociolects. This set of linguistic items includes features of vocabulary, grammar, as well as phonology; but slangs is the set that includes only a relatively small set of vocabulary items.

Q. Term trending

A word, phrase or topic that is popular on Twitter at a given moment.

Q. Define gesture

A gesture is a form of non-verbal communication or non-vocal communication in which visible bodily actions communicate particular messages, either in place of, or in conjunction with, speech. Gestures include movement of the hands, face, or other parts of the body.

Gestures are not universal and are unique to a given language group. For example, sticking out tongue stands for teasing by Europeans, a threat among the Chinese, anger in India and wisdom in Ancient Maya. Nonlinguistic means of communication may accompany ordinary speech.

Q. Linguistic unity issue

Pakistan is multi-cultural and multilingual. To understand these dimensions we need to think of “unity in diversity” and “diversity in unity”. Language is a dividing power and simultaneously language is a unifying force. There are various issues and aspects of identity such as:

- Cultural
- Political
- Linguistic
- Ethnic/ Racial

Q. Proverb and saying note (imp)

ENG510 Spring 2019 (Finals) solved by Maha Malik

A saying is a short, pithy, commonly known expression which generally offers advice or wisdom. Synonyms of the term 'saying' include proverb, maxim, aphorism, axiom, epigram, and epigraph. A proverb is a short, well-known pithy saying, stating a general truth or piece of advice. Here are a few examples of proverbs:

- If you want to go fast go alone, if you want to go far go together. (African)
- Fall seven times, stand eight. (Japanese)
- Do good and throw it in the sea. (Arab)
- Measure a thousand times and cut once. (Turkish)
- It takes a whole village to raise a child. (African)
- A fault confessed is half redressed. (Zulu) The sociolinguistic study of the sayings and proverbs terms is required to understand the social meanings associated to them.

Q. Proverb

Online Oxford Dictionaries define a proverb as “A short, well-known pithy saying, stating a general truth or piece of advice”. Another definition is “A short, memorable, and often highly condensed saying embodying, esp. with bold imagery, some commonplace fact or experience”. Proverbs are very closely associated with cultures. The New Dictionary of Cultural Literacy (2002) defines it as “short, pithy sayings that reflect the accumulated wisdom, prejudices, and superstitions of the human race”.

Q. Standard language and vernacular difference

Vernacular describes everyday language, including slang, that's used by the people, the vernacular is different from literary or official language; it's way people really talk with each other, like how families talk at home. Meanwhile, Standard language; the variety of a language that is considered as a better one for its phonological, lexical, and grammatical correctness.

Q. Social media impact on English

We need to think about the status of English especially in the global context and its role as a lingua franca. We also need to take into consideration the role and usage of English language as language of technology, the status of English language as language of (Social) Media; and also the question why and how English language is to be influenced by social media?

Dimensions of impact of English language are multiple such as:

Time, Space, Speed & Placement

Levels of impact of English language are also multiple such as:

Grammar, Syntax, Vocabulary, Morphology & Phonology

There is also a considerable significance of appropriating existing vocabulary. One of the most notable ways that social media has influenced the English language, is through the appropriation of existing vocabulary. Words that had existing meanings, have now been given other meanings in an online context.

Q. code mixing global phenomenon.

ENG510 Spring 2019 (Finals) solved by Maha Malik

Code mixing is a global phenomenon. It is found in many countries of the world where more than one language is used. In Pakistan we have: English, Urdu and various regional languages. Apart from mixing of English and Urdu:

- Regional languages and English are mixed.
- Sometimes three languages are mixed.
- Local and regional identities and code mixing
- National Identity
- Identity as educated
- Identity as well-off
- Identity as fashionable

Q. summarized politeness types three

OR

Politeness strategies are used to formulate messages in order to save the hearer's positive face when face-threatening acts are inevitable or desired. (imp)

Types of politeness strategies: bald on-record, negative politeness, positive politeness, and off-record (indirect) as well as simply not using the face-threatening act. Politeness strategies help in effective social interaction.

1. Bald on-record

Does nothing to reduce the threat to the hearer's face and is therefore used in close relationships or when information needs to be shared quickly.

Situation of use:

- Urgency or desperation • When efficiency is necessary

Use examples

- Watch out! • Don't forget to clean the blinds!

2. Positive politeness

To make the hearer feel a sense of closeness and belonging

Situation of use

Offer or promise • Avoid Disagreement • Joke

Use examples

- You look sad. Can I do anything? • Heh, mate, can you lend me a dollar?

3. Off-record (indirect)

Situation of use • Relies on implication

Q. name three types of nonlinguistic communication.

- Gaze
- Non-sign gestures
- Facial expressions

Q. Define the linguistic right.

Linguistic rights are the human and civil rights concerning the individual and collective right to choose the language or languages for communication in a private or public atmosphere. Linguistic rights were first included as an international human right in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948. Across the globe, there is a perceptible shift in the analysis of the form and use of the English language.

Q. Explain high variety of language.

The high variety may be an older stage of the same language as in medieval Europe, where Latin remained in formal use even as colloquial speech diverged. The high variety may be an unrelated language, or a distinct yet closely related present day dialect.

- Example: Standard German alongside Low German.

Another example is of Chinese where with Mandarin as the official, literary standard and local varieties of Chinese used in everyday communication. Other examples may include Literary Katharevousa versus spoken Demotic Greek; Literary Tamil versus spoken Tamil; Indonesian, with its Baku and Gaul forms; Literary versus spoken Welsh.

Q. Define reduplication and examples.

Reduplication in linguistics is a morphological process in which the root or stem of a word (or part of it) or even the whole word is repeated exactly or with a slight change.

Reduplication is quite common in Urdu and the local languages of Pakistan.

Here are some examples in Urdu:

- pāni- shāni
- chāy- shay
- kām- shām

Q. Pakistani education system.

The two streams of educations, namely, Urdu- and Englishmedium, in the Pakistan's education system have been highlighted by Blundell.

ENG510 Spring 2019 (Finals) solved by Maha Malik

Pakistani educators' general concern is that the English language is taught under conditions which are far from being satisfactory. English has the status of a lingua franca and is a common means of communication - besides Urdu. It is an easy medium for science and technology. However, despite studying English in schools and colleges for about 6-8 years, students, especially those from rural backgrounds, are not able to communicate in English with relative ease and success. Even in some areas where students use a regional language as a first language (L1) besides Urdu - and in such areas English becomes a third language (L3) - they lack all the four major linguistic skills - reading, writing, listening, and speaking.

Q. Three major drawbacks in Pakistan.

1. Little understanding of curricular objectives
2. Inexperienced teachers
3. Defective methods

Q. three types of social network.

Khana bohat acha hai but I don't feel like eating;

woh bohat zaheen hai and I like intelligent people.

Q. Significance and scope of teaching of sociolinguistic. (imp)

Significance and scope is evident from the fact that it helps to understand the following the patterns of multilingualism in the global context. It also helps to identify the shape of new language varieties, helping to define ethnicity and identity in various contexts. And, finer gradations can be made between core sociolinguistics and social linguistics and the sociology of language from the point of view of teaching.

Its scope includes the international and interdisciplinary diversity of the field in representing the broad view of sociolinguistics. Together with second language research and teaching (which itself owes much to sociolinguistic work), sociolinguistics is the central discipline of applied linguistics. It has practical outcomes for education policy, government spending, social affairs, constitutional arrangements, international relations, debates on ethnicity, nationalism, multiculturalism and cultural values. Significance and scope of teaching sociolinguistics in relation to other disciplines can be understood by relating it to the following disciplines:

- Discourse Analysis • Pragmatics • Ethnography

Q. Sapir Whorf hypothesis.

A hypothesis first advanced by Edward Sapir in 1929 and subsequently developed by Benjamin Whorf. Edward Sapir (1884-1939) was an American anthropologist-linguist. He was a leader in structural linguistics. He was the author of 'Language: An Introduction to the Study of Speech'. He was born in Lauenberg, Germany. Also it is important that he was a pupil of Franz Boas, and teacher of Benjamin Whorf. Benjamin Whorf's life span was from 1897 to 1941. He graduated from the MIT in Chemical Engineering and began work as a fire prevention engineer.

Although he met, and later studied with Edward Sapir, he never took up linguistics as a profession. Whorf's primary area of interest in linguistics was the study of native American languages. He is well known for his work on the Hopi language. He was a captivating speaker; and popularized his linguistic ideas through popular lectures and articles. He presented the hypothesis that the structure of a language determines a native speaker's perception and categorization of experience. There are certain thoughts of an individual in one language that cannot be understood by those who live in another language. The hypothesis states that the way people think is strongly affected by their native languages. However, it was a controversial theory. The principle of linguistic relativity holds that the structure of a language affects its speakers' world view or cognition. It is popularly known as the Sapir-Whorf hypothesis, or Whorfianism

Q. explain emotic with examples.

In web forums, instant messengers and online games, text emoticons are often automatically replaced with small corresponding images, which came to be called "emoticons" as well. An emoticon is a written symbol, often two or three punctuation, numbers and letters. It shows writer's mood or facial expressions; and is also a time-saving shorthand.

Common Western examples are as follows:

:(equals sad

:((equals very sad

Weeping can be written as :'(

A blush can be expressed as :">

Q. Domain religions language in Pakistan.

As far as the domain of religion is concerned, in Pakistan Arabic is the main language. However, for everyday less formal usage, Urdu is used. English, as it has emerged as a more common medium of code mixing, it has also found its way into modern religious discourse. In this regard, we need to think about the 'religion and media' relationship, and the contribution of media. Language choices on media have a strong influence on the society

Q. according English speech community

let us take the example of a 'farming community' that is a group of people who have farming in common. To define them we are not interested in other features such as interest in rock music or the colour of their eyes. Now to understand a speech community we may draw an analogy of English speech community. So, they all share some sort of common linguistic knowledge. However, the problem is that it is hard to agree on what such 'knowledge of English' might actually be. In fact trying to define what 'English' is on purely linguistic grounds can be problematic.

Q. what is language desertion

Language desertion is the act of deserting, or willful abandonment. Language desertion or code desertion is a term that refers to the phenomenon of abandoning the use of one language in favour of another which may ultimately result in the death of the deserted language. This process of language desertion is very much evident in South Asian countries.

Q. Two types of code switching with examples.

- tag switching

- intra sentential

- inter-sentential

Examples for tag switching: woh bohat achi hai. Isn't she?; She is very nice. Hai na?

Examples for Intra sentential switching: woh bohat intelligent hai; Khana bohat tasty hai.

Examples of Inter-sentential switching: Khana bohat acha hai but I don't feel like eating; woh bohat zaheen hai and I like intelligent people.

Q. Language Ideology:

Language Ideology: According to BBC radio and television presenter John Humphry (2004): I don't like glottal stops (especially when they are adopted by public school-educated politicians because they think it makes them sound cool) and I don't like people saying 'fink' unless they have a speech impediment. The justification for the writer's dislike of the glottal stop has less to do with the sound itself than with a particular set of speakers who use it for a particular function. I dislike London accent because they are stuck up snobs. Asserts Cheshire and Edwards (1993, p. 42). Whereas Edwards (1982) writes: "people's reactions to language varieties reveal much of their perception of the speakers of these varieties".

Q. Native Speaker of a language.

The 'arbitration' role of the native speaker is problematized when one considers communities. For example: In India non- native speakers use English for such a wide variety of purposes that the views of the native speaker become less and less relevant; and more local norms of usage emerge. Being a native speaker gives a sense of community, and with that, a sense of identity. Being a native speaker of English gives you a different identity from the group of individuals who are native speakers of French. An interesting issue in this regard is of bilinguals: For example, individuals from Montreal in Canada who are bilingual speakers of French and English. The question arises whether they are members of both groups simultaneously, or form instead a group of their own? Some speakers align themselves with what they perceive as a particular local variety. Within England, for example, this might be as a 'northerner', or more locally as a 'north- westerner. So, there are issues of identity.

Q. Write any three basic pattern of Kinship

Morgan identified six basic patterns of kinship terminologies:

1. Hawaiian kinship Only distinguishes between sex and generation. Thus, siblings and cousins are not distinguished the same terms are used for both types of relatives.
2. Sudanese kinship No two types of relatives share the same term. Siblings are distinguished from cousins, and different terms are used for each type of cousin i.e. father's brother's children, father's sister's children, etc.
3. Eskimo kinship In addition to sex and generation, it also distinguishes between lineal relatives those related directly by a line of descent and collateral relatives those related by blood, but not directly in the line of descent.

Q. Good and bad forms of English

Associated with this notion of good and bad forms of English is the doctrine of correctness; as some speakers will often report that a particular way of saying something is just plain wrong. Such 'errors' have included grammatical features like multiple negation (for example, I ain't never been there), and the use of 'redundant' words for example, added in added bonus. In many cases, the features that are reported as wrong either used to be fairly common in the earlier history of the language but failed to make it into the 'standard language' when it was codified, or are currently undergoing change. This change may be incipient only in a very specific domain, and even in a restricted set of constructions such as:

- The thieves broke into our kitchen but they only took the toaster.
- The thieves broke into our kitchen but they took only the toaster.

Q. human communication

We need to understand means of human communication. These means involve movement of the hands, body, and facial muscles. Ways of communicating include but are not limited to: talking, signing, writing, gesturing, using facial expressions, drawing pictures, proximity, wearing perfume, assuming certain postures, and many other ways.

Nonlinguistic communication may be conventional or spontaneous. Conventional nonlinguistic means = Gestures incomprehensible to the unlimited, usually stipulated beforehand and sometimes codified into rules of usage.

Q. diversity and pk context:

The linguistic situation of Pakistan is very complex. There are various regional languages but Urdu has a unique status. It is the language of majority province and dominant ethnic group so it enjoys supremacy. But, at the same time Punjabis are dominated linguistically and culturally by Urdu and English speaking communities. We also need to take into consideration the accommodating and eclectic nature of Punjabi, the 'soft' boundaries of Punjabi and Urdu, and the element of mutual intelligibility is instrumental in the spread of Urdu. During the recent years children of Punjabis do not have Punjabi as their first language. And, Urdu has taken its place. As far as Sindhi, Baluchi, Pashto are concerned according to Saigol (1993):

- Sindhis makeup 26.6%,
- Baluchis 5.1%
- Pathans 13.1% of the population
