Claim and Adjustment Requests

Ideally, everything runs smoothly in the operation of an organization; no mistake, no problems, no defects, and no misunderstandings. However, even in the best-managed organizations, dissatisfactions are bound to occur. In recent years both buyers and sellers are more aware of problems caused by business errors. When a product or service does not meet customers' expectations, the customers are disappointed and usually file a complaint.

Their complaints should not be called complaint letters, because complaint connotes irritation, unpleasantness, negativism, and even anger. Using a word with such negative connotations could lead to a bad attitude towards customers. Letters about such complaints should be called claim letters.

Countless aspects of business dealings can break down, but the most common causes for claims are:

1. An incorrect bill, invoice, or statement
2. A bill for merchandise ordered but never received
3. Delivery of unordered merchandise
4. Delivery of incorrect merchandise
5. Delivery of damaged or defective merchandise

Two other more specialized types of claims are:

1. A request for an adjustment under a guarantee or warranty
2. A request for restitution under an insurance policy.

A claim is written to inform the company of the problem and suggest a fair compensation. No matter how annoying the nature of the problem, how great the inconvenience, the purpose of a claim is NOT to express anger, but to get results.

Therefore, it is important to avoid a hostile or demanding tone. A claim must be calm and polite though, of course, also firm.

A claim should begin with the facts, first explaining the problem such as the condition of the merchandise or the specifications of the error made. Then all the necessary details should be described in a logical order. These details may include the order and delivery dates, the order or invoice number, the account number, the method of shipment, etc. A copy of proof of purchase, such as a sales slip or an invoice, should be included whenever possible. (Always, of course, keep the original.)

In most cases, and especially in your first letter, assume that a fair adjustment will be made, and follow the plan for direct requests. Begin with a straightforward statement of the problem, and give a complete, specific explanation of the details.

Politely request for the specific action in your closing, and suggest that the business relationship will continue if the problem is solved satisfactorily.

The following direct organizational plan is used for writing claims:

A. Direct Statement of the Request

1. Write a claim letter as soon as possible after the problem has been identified.
2. State the need for replacement, refund or correction of the problem.
3. Maintain a confident, factual, fair, unemotional tone.

B. Justification, Explanation, and Details

To gain the reader's understanding praise some aspect of the goods or service or at least explain why the product was originally purchased. Consider the following:

1. Present facts honestly, clearly, and politely.
2. Eliminate threats, sarcasm, exaggeration, and hostility.
3. Specify the problem: product failed to live up to advertised standards; product failed to live up to sales representative's claims; product fell short of company's policy; product was defective; customer service was not up to the mark.
4. Make no accusation against any person or company, unless you can back it up with facts.
5. Use a non-argumentative tone to show your confidence in the reader's fairness.
6. If necessary, refer to documentation (an invoice, cancelled cheque, confirmation letters, etc., but mail only photocopies.
7. Ask the reader to propose fair adjustment, if appropriate.
8. If appropriate, clearly state what you expect as a fair settlement, such as credit against the next order you place, full or partial refund of the purchase price of the product, replacement or repair of the defective merchandise, or performance of services as originally contracted.
9. Do not return the defective merchandise until you have been asked to do so.
10. Avoid uncertainty or vagueness that might permit the adjusters to prolong the issue by additional correspondence or to propose a less-than-fair settlement.

C. Courteous Close with Request for Specific Action

Summarize desired action briefly. Consider the following points:

- Simplify compliance with your request by including your name, address, phone number and hours of availability.
- Note how complying with your request will benefit the reader.
- Consider another example that how the writer conveys his message of inconvenience in calm manner.

Study this letter which has all qualities of a claim letter;

Dear Sir,

On March 1, we ordered and subsequently received one case of handsaws, model 88b. We paid for the order with our cheque no. 7293, a photocopy of which is enclosed.

When we decided to order these saws instead of model 78b, it was at the urging of your sales representative, Mr. Ali Naeem. He assured us that the new saws were more durable and efficient than the older model.

However, we have now had the saws on our selling floor for three weeks, and already six have been returned with broken teeth by extremely dissatisfied customers.

We are therefore returning the entire order of 88b saws and would like to be refunded for their full purchase price plus shipping expenses.

Yours truly,

Here is a well-written letter requesting an adjustment. Notice that this writer reverses the order of the three steps, but the letter gets the job done just as well:

Gentlemen,

Please repair or replace my calculator watch, Model C863, and send it to me at the address above.

After six months of use, the musical alarm has quit working.

Enclosed is my watch, a copy of the sales receipt showing the date of purchase, and your warranty, which guarantees material and workmanship for one year.

Yours sincerely,

Adjustment letter

An adjustment letter is the reply to a complaint (called a claim letter). In general, the best attitude is to give the customer the benefit of the doubt. Most persons are honest in their claims, and it is usually better to make the desired adjustment than to risk losing a customer.

Even though your firm's adjustment policy may be generous, the ultimate success of your good-news adjustment letters depends not only on what you say but also on how you say it. Always choose neutral or positive language in referring to a complaint.

Whether or not your company is at fault, even the most annoying or demanding claim should be answered politely. An adjustment letter should NOT be negative or suspicious; it must NEVER accuse the customer or grant any adjustment grudgingly. Remember, your company's image and goodwill is at stake when you respond even to unjustified claims.

There can be three types of adjustment letters:

1. When the seller is at fault
2. When the buyer is at fault
3. When the third party is at fault

The following organizational plan is suggested for answering claim letters:

A- Writing Letters Granting Adjustments

When granting a request for an adjustment, follow these four steps:

1. Tell the Reader that Full Adjustment is Gladly Granted
Give the good news in the first sentence. Don't let the reader feel you are doing him or her favor, even if you feel that you are making a special concession. Instead, convince the reader that goodwill and friendship are more important to you than the money involved and that your organization always wants to take good care of its customers.

2. Express Sincere Appreciation for the Reader's Adjustment Request
Acknowledge your reader's inconvenience in writing the letter and waiting for the adjustment. Emphasize that you welcome this opportunity to set things right. Let the customer know how his or her letter has helped the organization to improve its products or services.

3. Stress Your Organization's Effort to Prevent Further Customer Dissatisfaction
Accept the blame and apologize if your organization is at fault. If appropriate, explain what caused the problem, but don't blame the computer. Most people know that computers don't make errors, only the operators do. Don't make the mistake of telling your reader "This will never happen again." No one can promise that. If appropriate, explain what your organization is doing to prevent a repetition of the problem.

4. End the Letter Positively
Don't end with a negative phrase, such as "We hope you do not have any more trouble with your washing machine." The best ending for a letter granting an adjustment makes no reference to the original problem. End on a note that implies future dealings, and don't overlook the possibility of doing some effective sales promotion for related products or at least some reselling of your organization.

Consider the following example:

Dear Mr. Ali,

Your new lawn umbrella is being shipped prepaid today. It should arrive in a few days. Thank you for returning the torn one. Because a mended umbrella might not be water-resistant, we are sending you a new one, so that you can keep your new lawn table protected. You will notice that the new umbrella is made of vinyl-coated nylon, which has proved superior to the polyester and cotton one you bought last year.

When you need lawn furniture and accessories, you will find everything from small tables to foundations in our latest catalog. You can rely on our guarantee of high quality and satisfaction.

Yours sincerely,

Note the organization of the letter to Mr. Ali. First is the news he wants to hear that is 'a new lawn umbrella is on its way'. Next is the writer's appreciation for the customer's calling attention to the defect. Then the writer explains the change in materials, an explanation owed to the reader, and one that in this case can make the organization look progressive and concerned. The final appeal for another sale is appropriate because the adjustment has been granted and the reader will be satisfied.

Writing Letters Refusing Adjustments

When the Buyer Is at Fault

1. Support the Reader's Point of View in Your Buffer Paragraph

Since the customer probably thinks he or she is right, try to make him or her accept the logical solution. Be sure the customer realizes that you understand the problem and that you will be fair.

2. Assure the Customer that the Request is Appreciated and has Received Individual Consideration.

The requested adjustment is important to the reader in your letter; show that the reader's point of view is also important to your organization.

3. Present the Explanation before the Decision

Stress what can be done and emphasize your purpose to be fair to all customers. Don't blame and don't argue. Avoid unfriendly, negative expressions, such as your complaint, your error, you misinterpreted, you neglected, your claim, you are mistaken, our records show, and your ignorance. With a truthful and tactful presentation, lead the customer to accept your solution as the only reasonable one.

4. Be Courteous Even When Answering an Angry or a Distorted Claim

If you answer sarcastically, you may lose both your self-respect and your customer. Completely ignore any insults in the letter you have received; concentrate on writing an answer that is friendly, rational and professional. Usually it costs less to keep the customer you have than to find a new one.

5. Try to Leave the Reader in a Pleasant Frame of Mind

A friendly but concise closing is even more important when the adjustment is not granted.

Use the effective buffer paragraph technique when writing bad-news letters:

Step 1: Buffer
Step 2: Explanation
Step 3: Your no (stated or implied)
Step 4: a friendly close.

You may review the summary of the indirect approach to help you write effective bad-news messages. The writer of the following letter realizes that Mr. Hassan must be convinced of the organization's position and be kept as a customer (after all, he did buy an expensive item). Here's the answer to a request for repair or replacement for his automatic garage door opener:

Dear Mr. Hassan,

You are right to expect high-quality merchandise from 'The Automatic Door Company'. We try to give you the best for your money and to stand behind our products when they fail as a result of defects in material and workmanship, as our warranty states.

We appreciate your sending the door opener to us for analysis. It appears that the opener has got wet. Excess of moisture over a period of time causes this defect.

Our service manager estimates that cleaning and repairing your door opener would cost Rs. 2500. Since your door opener is several years old, you may want to consider buying a new one. We have made many improvements to our door openers since yours was manufactured, including a sealed circuit board that would prevent the possibility of damage from moisture. A new door opener, which costs Rs. 3500.00 postpaid, should give you even longer service than your old one did.

Please let us know whether you want us to repair or replace your door opener..

Yours sincerely,

Look at the following example:

Dear Mr. Shibly,

We are sorry that you are not completely satisfied with your Atlas Vacuum Cleaner. You are entirely justified in expecting more than four years of reliable use from an Atlas Appliance, and we are always eager to service any product that does not for some reason live up to the standard.

We appreciate your giving us the opportunity to examine the damaged vacuum cleaner. According to our service department, the filter had never been replaced although the owner's manual advises replacement every few months. As a result, the motor itself gradually became clogged with dust and dirt.

The cost of repairing and cleaning the vacuum is estimated as Rs. 500. If you would like to have it repaired, please let us know. With regular cleaning and replacement of the filter and exhaust bag, you should receive several more years of service from your Atlas appliances

Yours truly,

When the third Party is at Fault

You have three options:

(1) Honor the customer's claim with the standard good-news letter and no additional explanation.
(2) Honor the claim but explain that you were not really at fault.
(3) Take no action on the claim and suggest that your customer file against the firm that caused the defect or damage. Common business sense tells you, however, that the third option is almost always a bad choice. (The exception is when you're trying to dissociate yourself from any legal responsibility for the damaged merchandise, especially if it has caused a personal injury, in which case you would send a bad-news message.)

This letter will be written when neither the company nor the customer is entirely at fault. It must express an attitude of pleasant co-operation. It should be based on facts and state a reason for refusing the requested adjustment. It should immediately make a counteroffer that meets the customer halfway. Of course, it should leave the decision to accept the adjustment to the customer and suggest a course of action.

Of the other two options, the first is more attractive. By honoring the claim without explanation, you are maintaining your reputation for fair dealing at no cost to yourself; the carrier or manufacturer that caused the damage in the first place will refund you. Remember that businessman wants to correct problems to keep the customer's goodwill.

Follow these steps when writing a letter compromising on an adjustment:

Step 1: Buffer
Step 2: Explanation
Step 3: No (stated of implied)
Step 4: Counterproposal or compromise
Step 5: Friendly close.

Credit Letters

Writing Credit Letters

A Promise of future payment in cash OR KIND GIVEN IN EXCHANGE for goods or service is called credit. It is the instrument which enables manufacturers, producers, retailers and consumers to obtain goods at a time when they can be used or sold even if ready cash is not available.
The major reason customers wish to establish credit is convenience. Customers can:

- Buy now and pay later
- Avoid carrying cash with them or writing cheques.
- Exchange and buy goods on approval more easily.

While writing credit letters:

- Be careful as they are permanent record and protect in case of legal difficulties.
- Credit letter must be courteous, tactful and dignified.

Letters concerning credit fall into these basic categories:

- Letters requesting credit.
- Letters extending credit.
- Letters refusing credit.

Direct Statement of the Request

1. Phrase the opening to reflect the assumption that the reader will respond favorably to your request.
2. Phrase the opening so clearly and simply that the main idea cannot be misunderstood.
3. Write in a polite, undemanding, personal tone.
4. Preface the request with a sentence or two of explanation, possibly a statement of the problem that the response will solve.

Justification, Explanation And Details

1. Itemize parts of a compels request in a numbered series
2. List specific questions.

   a. Don't ask questions that you could answer through your own effects.
   b. Arrange questions logically
   c. Number questions.
   e. Word questions to avoid clues about the answer you prefer and not to bias the reader's answers.

3. Courteous close with request for a specific action

Letter Requesting Credit

Dear Mr. Ahmad,

We are a newly established appliance repair business interested in acquiring a business credit card. Small shop owners in the area have informed us that business credit cards are a convenient, organized, and efficient way of handling small day-to-day expenses, such as office supplies or lunches.

Please send us more information concerning the terms of your business credit cards. Particularly, we are interested in interest rates, annual fees, the process of obtaining a card, remittance requirements, and security measures available. Any additional information would also be appreciated.

Thank you for your time. We look forward to hearing from you.

Yours truly,

Study these examples too:

Dear Sir,

We are a newly established appliance repair business and desire to open a credit account with your company.

For reference as to our ability to meet our financial obligations, we refer you to our banker whose address is given on the back of this letter.

If there is any other information, you require in order extending us the privilege of a credit account with you, we shall be glad to have so inform us.

Yours Truly,

Letters Asking for Credit Information

Credit Information is obtained from different sources; banks, commercial agencies, Financial statements, etc.

Study the following letter written on direct plan for seeking credit information:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Subject: Credit Inquiry

The following applicant has given your name as a credit reference:

Mr. Ahmad
Lahore Towers,
Lahore.

We would appreciate your giving us the confidential information requested below:

1. Date the account was opened.
2. Terms of the account
3. Credit limit

4. Current balance
5. Past due amount
6. Date of last activity
7. Payment history
8. Remarks

A postpaid return envelope is enclosed for your convenience. Your help will certainly be appreciated, and all information will be kept confidential.

Sincerely,

Evaluating the Credit Information

Traditionally, the following three Cs of credit form the basis for extending credit privileges:

1. Character: It refers to a sense for honesty and ethical dealings with others. It means meeting obligations and is demonstrated by willingness to pay.
2. Capacity: It is the ability to pay. It is evidenced by income or potential income.
3. Capital: It refers to tangible assets in relation to debts. Capital also determines the ability to pay if the debtor does not pay willingly.

Extending Credit

While extending the credits, follow the guidelines:

1. Welcome the new charge customer, and express the wish for a pleasant association.
2. Outline special privileges that are available.
3. Explain the terms of payment.
4. Encourage the customer to use the new charge, account, and enclose promotional material.
5. Build goodwill by indicating your eagerness to serve the new customer well.

Letter Extending Credit

Dear Mr. Hassan,

We take pleasure in opening a charge account at Bright's, with your name. I feel sure that this will be the start of a long and mutually pleasant association.

As a customer you will enjoy many privileges at Bright's. For an instance, our customers receive advance notices of special sales. They may also use their cards at our terrace restaurants and books rental department.

By the first of each month you will receive an itemized statement of your purchases made through the 25th day of preceding month. Purchases made after the 20th, appear on the following month bill. Payments are due by the 10th, and a monthly charge of 1.5% will be made on the balance remaining at that time.

We hope you will make regular use of charge accounts.

Sincerely yours,

Gentlemen,

We are glad to have your order of December 20th and of the opportunity to add your name to our list of satisfied customers. We find, however, that we are without sufficient information to permit consigning these goods to you on credit. This does not mean that we question your ability to meet your obligation, but of course we must have assurance that our terms will be met. If you wish, we can send your order on C.O.D. basis or, if you will send us the names of those with whom you have done business in the past, and fill out the enclosed statement, we can in all probability, ship your order at once on credit.

Yours very truly,

Refusing Credit
Every credit-refusal letter has two objectives:
1. To say no tactfully
2. To keep the goodwill of the customer

There are various reasons for refusing credit. The main ones are:
1. Lack of established credit.
2. Overextension of credit, which may result in an inability to pay bills on time.
3. Unwillingness to pay that which is owed according to credit reporting agencies.

BUFFER

- Eliminate apologies and negative-sounding words.
- Phrase the buffer to avoid misleading the reader.
- Limit the length of the buffer.
- Express appreciation for the credit request.
- Introduce resale information.
- Make a transition from the favorable to the unfavorable message.
- Make transition from the general to the specific.
- Avoid a condescending lecture about how credit is earned.
- Avoid negative words, such as must decline.
- Suggest positive alternatives, such as cash and layaway purchases.

Dear Mr. Hasan,

We should very much like to send you the goods on your order No. 543 of August 27, but to certain unavoidable reasons we are not in a position to a credit account at this time of the year.

But you really must have your goods. They are on the top of our packing list. May we consign them to you on cash or COD basis?

We look forward to hearing from you.

Yours very truly,

Here the writer explains the cause for not extending credit:

Dear Mr. Ahsan,

Thank you very much for your order of April 7. We are glad to know that you are interested in our products because you will find them a source of profit building.

Just now however, we are without sufficient information to permit us to ship this order on credit term. We feel sure that we can make shipment in this way after you have become more firmly established in business.

As in the case of all those who apply for credit, we have made a careful investigation of your resources and credit obligations. Since you have a number of Loan commitments, may we suggest that you continue to allow us to send you on a cash basis until such time as you are able to reduce your personal obligations?

You may be sure that we will welcome the opportunity of considering your application again when circumstances are more favorable towards your receiving additional credit. Please do let us know if we can be of help in any other way..

Yours truly,

LESSON 25
COLLECTION LETTERS

Outline:

- Collection Letters
- Collection Letter Series
  - Statement of Account / Reminder
  - Second Reminder
  - Appeal(s) for Payment
  - Demand of Payment

Collection Letters

No matter how carefully a company chooses its credit customers, there will be times when a bill goes unpaid and steps to collect must be taken. The problem when writing a collection letter is how to get payment and at the same time keep a customer. The writer of a collection letter wants to get the money owed and maintain goodwill.

Collection letters, therefore, should be persuasive rather than forceful, firm rather than demanding. A fair and tactful letter gets better results than a sarcastic or abusive one. In fact, collection letters should be "you-oriented"; courteous, considerate, and concerned about the customer's best interest.

The purposes of collection letters are:

1. To get the money
2. To keep the customer and future business
3. To build goodwill

Collection is a sensitive issue so the following practices may be avoided:

- Falsely implying that a lawsuit has been filed
- Contact the debtor's employer or relatives about the debt
- Communication to the other persons that the person is in debt
- Harassing the debtor
- Using abusive or observe language
- Using defamatory language
- Intentionally causing mental stress
- Threatening violence
- Communicating by postcard (not confidential enough)
- Misrepresenting the legal status of the debt
- Communicating in such a way as to make the receiver physically ill
- Misrepresenting the message as a government or court document
- Communicating by postcard (not confidential enough)
- Misrepresenting the legal status of the debt
- Communicating in such a way as to make the receiver physically ill
- Misrepresenting the message as a government or court document
- Any emotional reaction on the part of the debtor may reduce the chances of recovery.

Successful collection depends to on the following factors:

- Understanding of human nature
- Knowledge of collection policies and laws
- Using persuasive / positive appeals effectively

The following appeals are generally used:

- Appeal to fairness & justice
- Appeal to pride
- Appeal to goodwill
- Appeal to sympathy

Right attitude for successful collection:

- Begin with assumption that most people will pay
- Give no impression that you doubt the honesty of the debtor
- Use a courteous, reasonable tone but become firmer
- Be more demanding during the later stages of the series
- Remain with the law, don't harass
- Show understanding and flexibility while writing delinquent accounts
- Send collection notices quickly and regularly
- Never imply in you messages that payment can be avoid or postponed.
- Retain goodwill throughout the series
- Present your evidence and stick to the facts
- Persuade the debtors of the benefit he will receive by paying
- State clearly the specific action the debtor must take

Collection Letter Series

Collection letters are usually sent in a series. The first is mildest and most understanding, with the letters getting gradually more insistent. The final letter in this series, when all efforts have failed, threatens to turn the matter over to a lawyer or collection agency or court of law. Of course, the tone of any of these letters in the series will vary, from positive and mild to negative and strong, depending upon the past payment record of the particular customer. The intervals between the letters may also vary, from ten days to a month at the start, from one to two weeks later on.

Every letter in a collection series should contain certain information:

1. The amount owed
2. How long the bill is overdue
3. A specific action the customer may take

Some companies also like to include a SALES APPEAL, even late in the series, as an extra incentive for payment.

The majority of bills are paid within ten days of receipt, with nearly all the rest being paid within the month. Therefore, when a bill is a month overdue, action is called for. Still, the collection process must begin gently.

Stage I:

Statement of Account / Reminder

The monthly statement reminds the customer of outstanding bills. If it is ignored, it should be followed (about a week or ten days later) by a second statement. The second statement should contain a notice (in the form of a rubber stamp or sticker) stating "Past Due" or "Please Remit". An alternative is to include a card or slip with the statement, alerting the customer to the overdue bill. The notice could be phrased in formal, possibly even simple language; it is an objective reminder that does not embarrass the customer with an early personal appeal:

Dear Sir,
Our records indicate that the balance of Rs. 4000/- on your account is now past due. Payment is requested.
Yours truly,

(OR)

Dear Sir,

Our records show that your September payment is more than a week over-due. If you have recently mailed your cheque for Rs.1548700/- we thank you. If not, please send it quickly.

Yours truly,

Stage II:

If the objective statement and reminder fail to get results, the collection process must gradually become more emotional and personal. The second collection message, however, should still be friendly. It should seek to excuse the unpaid bill as an oversight; the tone should convey the assumption that the customer intends to pay. At this stage, too, stress on future sales, rather than on payment.

Consider the following letter:

Dear Mr. Bilal,

Enclosed is a duplicate list of your credit charges from December – 200--. It is sent to you as a friendly reminder that the balance on your account with us is past due. Please take a few minutes today to send us your cheque for Rs. 224760. Use the postpaid addressed envelope provided for your use.

Yours truly,

When a credit customer does not respond to personal reminder messages, you can assume that something is preventing the customer from paying. It may be that the customer is unhappy with the purchased merchandise or is facing financial difficulty. Whatever the reason may be for holding up payment, you want the customer to;

(1) Explain why the payment hasn't been made or

(2) Settle the account.

The following letter illustrates the approach generally used in requesting an explanation:

Dear Mr. Javed,

We are concerned about your overdue account. Several reminder notices have been mailed to you, and we expected to receive your Rs. 38400/- cheque in the mail. But so far we haven't.

There may be a circumstance beyond your control that prevents you from settling this account. If so, please write it to me. I'm certain we can work out a payment arrangement after we know what your situation is.

Just think how good you will feel, Mr. Javed, when your account with us has been paid in full.

Yours truly,

Appeal(s) for Payment

Stage III:

The next collection message is an appeal to the credit customer to pay. This is a stern letter, but calmly written. Typical appeals are to the customer's pride or sense of fair play.

Your appeal for payment should not threaten to take the debtor to court unless you actually plan to. Give the person another chance to save a good credit standing by sending payment before the deadline – usually 10 to 12 days from the date of the letter. The following letter is an example of a courteous request for payment which appeals to both the customer's pride and his sense of fair play.

This letter should stress the customer's self-interest by pointing out the importance of prompt payment and the dangers of losing credit standing. The letter should convey the urgency and seriousness of the situation. Consider the following:

Dear Mr. Naeem,

Your good credit reputation enabled you to purchase a Rs. 15000.00 suit from us over three months ago. We were glad to place your name on our credit list at that time, and we made it clear that accounts are due on the 15th of the month following the purchase. When you bought the suit, you accepted those terms.

Your credit reputation is a valuable asset. We want you to keep it that way because of the advantages it gives you. You have enjoyed a liberal extension of time, but to be fair to our other customers; you must pay the amount that is past due by March 2.

Won't you please send us your check for the said amount today?

Sincerely,

Here is another letter with appeal:

Dear Mr. Naeem,

We are truly at a loss. We cannot understand why you still have not cleared your balance of Rs. 5000/-, which is now three months overdue.

Although you have been a reliable customer for 5 years, we are afraid you are placing your credit standing in jeopardy. Only you, by sending us a check today, can ensure your reputation and secure the continued convenience of buying on credit.

We would not like to lose a valued friend, Mr. Naeem. Please allow us to keep serving you.

Sincerely,

Stage 4:
Finally, payment must be demanded. The threat of legal action or the intervention of a collection agency is sometimes all that will induce a customer to pay. In some companies, however, an executive other than the credit manager, signs this last letter as a means of impressing the customer with the finality of the situation. Still, the fourth collection letter should allow the customer one last chance to pay before steps are taken.

Final Collection Letter

Dear Mr. Naeem,

Our Collection Department has informed me of their intention to file suit as you have failed to answer any of our requests for payment of Rs.5000/-, which is now 4 months overdue.

Before taking this action, however, I would like to make a personal appeal to your sound business judgment. I feel certain that, if you telephone me, we can devise some means to settle this matter out of court.

Therefore, I ask that you get in touch with me by the 25th of the month so that I may avoid taking steps which neither of us would

Truly yours,

A customer may, for example, offer an excuse or promise payment; he may make a partial payment or request special arrangements. At this point, the series would be inappropriate.

For instance, if your customer has owed Rs. 6000/- on account for two months and sends you a cheque for Rs. 1500/-, you may send a letter such as the following:

Dear Mr. Naeem,

Thank you for your cheque for Rs. 1500/-. The balance remaining on your account is now Rs. 4500/-.

Since you have requested an extension, we offer you the following payment plan: Rs. 1500/- by the 15th of the month for the next three months.

If you have another plan in mind, please telephone my office so that we may discuss it. Otherwise, we will expect your next cheque for Rs. 1500/- on September.

Sincerely Yours,

Sales Letters

To some extent, every letter is a sales letter. You are selling your organization's image and goodwill. These letters are an easy and effective way of securing business. No other type of letter influences so many people or brings as big a return in terms of money as this letter.

More so than other letters, the sales letter is highly specialized, and its writing require exceptional ability and experience.

There are two kinds of sales letters:

(i) Solicited letter (the organization is invited to respond to sales messages.)

(ii) Unsolicited letter (the organization sends out uninvited messages to sell a product or service)

Writing whatever type of sales letter, follow these principles:

1. Know your Buyer

First, identify the characteristics that describe the most likely buyer for your products or services. From research or experience, build a "composite" buyer. The sex, age, occupation, geographic location, financial situation and other characteristics of the "average" buyer should be be made known. Determine what appeals will be used in letter. Defining your targeted buyer's characteristics helps you discover the needs and desires of these prospective buyers.

For example, you wouldn't try to sell a "Sixty-Five Plus" insurance plan to college students. The writer of sales letters has a choice of many different appeals. Those used depend upon the aim of the letter, the nature of the product, and the market – the people who will receive the letter. Buyers usually spend their money for these reasons:

- For comfort (air conditioners)
- To make money (stock)
- To escape physical pain
- To save money (storm windows)
- To save time (microwave oven)
- To protect family (smoke detector)
- To imitate others (sunglasses)

- To be in style (new coat)
- To be different (exclusive hat)
- To avoid trouble (casualty insurance)
- For health (toothpaste)
- To take advantage of opportunities (investment property)
- For enjoyment (television set)
- To enhance reputation (charitable contribution)
- For cleanliness (soap)
- To satisfy appetite (candy)
- To avoid effort (power lawn mower)
- For beautiful possessions (new cell phone)
- To be popular (dancing lessons)
- To safeguard possessions (fire insurance)
- To be attractive (jewelry, garments)
- To be adventurous (travel)

2. Prepare a List of Buyers

Next, you need a good mailing list. The obvious place to start is your organization's own list of buyers. You can also buy lists from organizations that specialize in compiling and selling them. For sales effectiveness, a good mailing list must contain the correct names and addresses of people or organizations that have in common characteristics that make them likely buyers for your products or services.

3. Analyze the Product

What specific feature of the product or service makes it attractive or useful or appealing? What features should be emphasized? What features should be played down? (These analyses are usually made along with Step 1.) Letters that present a product in terms of what prospective buyers think of it and how they can use it do more than make sales--they win satisfied customers.

4. Decide on the Central Selling Point

The central selling point (CSP) should be the item of information most likely to persuade the buyer to buy a product or service. After analyzing the buyer and the product, build your letter around this central selling point. The CSP might be appearance, durability, comfort, convenience, price, or any other positive feature that is likely to have the greatest influence on your reader's purchasing decision.

Writing Solicited Sales Letters

Solicited sales are the letters that you write in response to an inquiry. With these letters, the organization has one central goal: to get responses quickly to someone's request for information, use the direct plan for the solicited letter.

Organizational Plan Responding to Solicited Letters

1. Opening paragraph use the good-news approach.
   a. Answer the inquirer's questions favorably.
   b. Indicate that the requested material will be sent.

2. Body
   a. Answer additional questions.
   b. Provide educational, resale, or sales promotion information.
   c. Be truthful about negative information.
   d. Arrange your answers so your positive responses are at the beginning and the end; embed (put in the middle) your weaker or negative comments.

3. Action ending
   a. Make the action easy.
   b. Suggest benefits to reader.
   c. Focus on the positive aspects.

Just Look at the Following Positive Opening
With pleasure we received your letter and it is with further pleasure that we are able to open a credit account with our store. All the necessary forms to initiate that account are included with this letter.

Writing Unsolicited Sales Letters
Unsolicited sales letter are those letters which you write to people who can be persuaded through these letters to buy your product or service. These letters demand superior writing skills. Often you will work with a marketing department or even an ad agency; they will make recommendations about the mailing lists, the timing, the core theme, and the visual presentation of brochures and accompanying material.

Once you know what you need to say and whom do you want to say it to, decide how you're going to say it. Will you send just a letter, or will you include brochures, samples, response cads, and the like? Will the letter be printed with an additional colour or special symbols or logos? How many pages will it run?
You'll also need to decide whether to conduct a multistage campaign, with several mailings and some sort of telephone or in-person follow-up, or to rely on a single mailing.

All these decisions depend on the audience you're trying to reach; their characteristics, their likely acceptance of or resistance to your message and what you're trying to get them to do. In general, expensive items and hard-to-accept propositions call for a more elaborate campaign than low-cost products and simple actions.

Unsolicited letters are written on ADIA plan which is a four step approach.
a. Attracting the Attention
1. Design a positive opening that awakens a favorable association with the product, need, or cause.
2. Write the opening so that it's appropriate, fresh, honest, interesting, specific, and relevant.
3. Promise a benefit to the reader.
4. Keep the first paragraph short, preferably two to five lines, and sometimes only one.
5. For sales, letters, get attention with a provocative question, a significant/startling fact, a solution to a problem, a special offer/gift, a testimonial, a current event, an illustration, a comparison, an event in the reader's life, a problem the reader may face, or a quotation.

Sales letters start with an attention-getting device. Professionals use some common techniques to attract audience's attention. Look at the following beginnings:

- A piece of genuine news. "In the past 60 days, the commercial electricity billings have shrunk by 12 percent."
- The most attractive feature plus the associated benefit. "New control device ends problems with every type of pilferage!"
- An intriguing number. "Here are three great secrets of the world's most loved entertainers."

- A sample of the product. "Here's your free sample of the new medicated tooth brush."
- A specific trait shared by the audience. Busy executives need another 'timesaving' device"
- A provocative question. "Are you tired of watching inflation eating away at your hard-earned profits?"
- A challenge. "Don't waste another day wondering how you're going to become the success you've always wanted to be!"

- A solution to a problem. "Tired of chilly air rushing through the cracks around your windows? Stay warm and save energy with Storm Seal Weather stripping."
- Stressing benefit of previous students.
- In the last university examination of the university, one of our students topped, securing record marks. In addition, seven out of top ten positions were bagged by our students you too can be a top notcher!
- For the ninth cricket world cup our juices were announced the official drinks of the world cup. Besides, the world cup management committee declared our juices the best soft drinks.
- Convincing readers through free trial
- You can keep the monthly Asia for two weeks. Read the articles and even if you feel that it is not worth your amount just give us a call, our representative will bring back your amount next day.

b. Creating Interest

1. State information clearly, vividly, and persuasively, relating it to the reader's concerns.
2. Develop the central selling point.
3. Feature the product in two ways: physical description and reader benefits.
4. Place benefits first, or interweaves them with a physical description.
5. Describe objective details of the need or product (size, shape, color, scent, sound texture, etc.)
6. Use psychological appeals to present the sensation, satisfaction, or pleasure readers will gain.
7. Blend cold facts with warm feelings.

c. Arousing Your Desire

1. Enlist one or more appeals to support the central idea (selling point).
2. If the product is valued mainly because of its appearance, describe its physical details.
3. If the product is machinery or technical equipment, describe its sturdy construction, fine crafting, and other technical details in terms that help readers visualize themselves using it.
4. Include technical sketches and meaningful pictures, charts, and graphs, if necessary.
5. For sales letters, provide test results from recognized experts, laboratories, or authoritative agencies.

Objectives	Suggested Descriptions
To sell porcelain bathroom fixtures	"The porcelain finish is glass-smooth."
To sell small cars	"To a driver who is fed up with bigger, thirstier cars switches to ____."
To sell air travel	"For travel elegance, fly with _____."
To sell soft drinks in cans	"And cans chill so fast, keeping the flavor fresh and full of zip."

To sell a soft drink	"You'll really welcome the cold, crisp taste that so deeply satisfies ….. the cheerful lift that's bright and lively."

Objectives	Suggested Descriptions
To sell an air deodorant	"Make air smell flower-fresh."
To sell shampoo	"Hair so satin-bright – airy-light!"

d. Stimulate the Reader to Action

1. Clearly state the action you desire.
2. Provide specific details on how to order the product, donate money, or reach your organizations.
3. Ease action with reply cards, preaddressed envelopes, phone numbers, and follow-up phone calls.
4. Offer a special inducement to act now: time limit or situation urgency, special price for a limited time, premium for acting before a certain date, gift for acting, free trial, no obligation to buy with more information or demonstration, easy payments with no money down, credit-card payments.

To motivate the reader to act within a certain time, you can use one or more of the following methods:

- You don't have to send any money right now. Take a moment to fill in the postpaid order card and drop it into mail. Your Asia Today will be shipped the day after we receive your order.
- Offering a special discount

An Offer of a Free Gift

Our gift is already enclosed: a sun catcher to attach to your window. Send your order in and we'll send you another one Free.

Please place your order by filling in the enclosed postpaid card and save 25% off the market price before September 30.

Here are some other ways to motivate the reader to action:

- Free trial of the product.
- No obligation to buy.
- Higher earnings.
- Special price for a limited time.
- Join with others who already are satisfied.
- No salesperson will call.
- Name will not be sold to other firms.

In short, writing successful sales letters is difficult. Some letters may take weeks to be perfect. But financial returns can be great. Good selling presents the proposition in such a way that the readers become convinced. Achieving your goal requires careful editing and rewriting.

This effective sales letter offers the reader a special discount just for bringing the letter to the store.

Attention	Dear Sir, Make The Photo Shop Your First Stop…. …Whenever you need camera or photographic equipment.

MEMORANDUM & CIRCULAR

- Flow of Memo
- Format
- Parts of Memorandum
  - The Heading
  - The Subject and Date
  - The Message
- Organizational Plans
- Why Are Memorandum Written?

Purpose of Memo

When you wish to write to someone within your own company, you will send a memorandum. Memos are used to communicate with other employees, may be located – whether in the same office, in the same building, or in a branch office many miles away.

Because the interoffice memorandum form was developed to save time, the formalities of an inside address, salutation, and complimentary closing is omitted. Otherwise, however, office memos and letters have a great deal in common.

The memorandum or 'memo' is a very flexible form used within an organization for communication at all levels and for many different reasons. It performs internally the same function as a letter does in external communication by an organization. It is used for reports, briefings or instructions, 'notes' and any kind of internal communication that is more easily or clearly conveyed in writing (rather than face-to-face or on the telephone).

Tone of Memorandum

In most companies and organizations, memorandums are written in the first person, just as business letters are. Informal writing style characterizes the memos. The tone of the memo is influenced by the position held by the writer in relation to that held by the receiver. Also, the topic under consideration plays an important part in determining tone. Obviously a person writing to a company official to report the results of a financial audit will be more formal than a person writing a co-worker about some routine matter.

An important factor is the personality of the individual receiving the memorandum. The president, for example, may insist on formality/ informality, whereas a peer might like an informal, impersonal tone. Therefore, the effective business writer must evaluate the position of the reader, the topic under consideration, and the personality of the reader when setting the tone of the memo.

Flow of Memo

A memorandum may be sent upwards, downwards or sideways in the organization. It may be sent from one individual to another, from one department to another or from one individual to a department or a larger body of staff. The channel will be the internal mail system of the organization, which may range from a bank of 'pigeon holes' for delivery and collection in person, to a desk-to-desk delivery system. Special 'internal mail envelopes', designed for re-use (allowing each recipient's name to be simply crossed out and replaced with the next), are commonly used.

Format
Memorandum format will vary slightly according to the degree of formality required and the organization's policy on matters like filing and authorization of memoranda by their writer. Follow the conventions of 'house style' in your own organization. A typical format, including all the required elements, is illustrated below.

Writing Memorandum
There are usually three main parts to a memorandum:
1. The heading
2. The subject and date
3. The message

Occasionally, when official approval or authority is required, the memorandum may conclude with a line for the signature of the person originating the correspondence.

The Heading: the heading of a memorandum is usually printed.

In the To and From sections, the business title of each person is often included, particularly when the memorandum is being sent to a person whose office is in another city. In the To section, a courtesy title – Miss, Mrs., Ms., Mr., Dr. – is sometimes included. However, in the From section, the writer does not use a courtesy title.

To:
From Date:

Subject

Main idea

Opening paragraph or sentence,
The reason for writing and context of the message,
Including appropriate details

Explanation

There should be necessary details to support the opening statements. Here the substance of message is set out logically and clearly. This may be less formal than a letter, so you can use numbered points.

Closing

Closing paragraph or sentence states clearly what is required of the recipient in response. Remember who your recipient is, what is his status, his background, education, practical experience etc. Generally every memo concludes with suggestions for future action or request on future action.

Organizational Plans

- You may find it necessary to write a persuasive or bad-news memo rather than take a direct approach

- You may like a step-by-step method to your request or bad news plan.
- Allow reader to complete reading the memo and come to the conclusion with you.
- Allow reader to see the reasoning that leads or supports to the idea you are conveying.
- Maintain goodwill.

Structure & Style (A5 memo)

- A memorandum, as the name suggests is an aid to memory of the reader.
- It is used for brief messages.

- These provide confirmation and record of the various plans, decisions & activities of the organization.

A4 Memo

It may be used for

- Making informal reports
- Outlining new policies
- Giving briefings & instructions etc.

Why Are Memorandums Written?

They are written to help:
- determine responsibility
- clear up inconsistencies
- record needed information

Sample Memo

To: Naeem Ahmad	From: Hassan
Subject: Quarterly	Date: May 3, 2006

The Quarterly Report that you asked to see is attached.

I would appreciate it if you would return it to me within ten days. The General Manager has requested that the report should not be circulated outside the company until its reliability is checked.

Circular
Introduction

Circular letters are:
- Used to send the same information to a number of people
- Extensively used in sales campaigns and for announcing important developments in business, such as extension, re-organizations, changes of address, etc.

A circular letter is prepared once and it may then be duplicated for distribution to the various recipients. Names, addresses and individual salutations may be inserted after duplication in order to personalize the letter.

Writing Plan

Although circulars are being sent to many people, it is important to suggest an interest in the recipient by giving them a personal touch. Remember the following rules:

- Be brief – people will not read a long circular
- Make the letter as personal as possible by addressing each letter to a particular person, by name if you know it. Use Dear Mr. Atif Faheem instead of Dear Reader, Dear Subscriber or Dear Customer instead of Dear Sir or Madam. Never use the plural form for the salutation – remember, one recipient will read each individual letter.
- Create the impression of personal interest by using you, never our customers, all customers, our clients, everyone.
- Explain why you are writing with more care than you would if you and your topic were already known to the recipient through previous specific contact. Given some suspicion of circulars, these days, you will have to establish your own credibility – or another motive for reading on – fairly quickly.
- Express yourself in a way that is understandable and congenial to everyone in a wide audience with varying backgrounds and abilities.
- Don't include detailed information or complex ideas.
- Make your letter more persuasive – not just to achieve its purposes, but to motivate the recipient to start reading it.
- Use word processing technology to personalize the circular to a very large extent.

Here is an example of circular:

Dear Mr. Ali

We are pleased to announce the opening of our new Higher Secondary Branch at the above address from the coming session starting from September 2.

Mr. Hassan has been appointed Principal, and with his 20 years experience in education we are sure that quality education will be provided.

Full admission fee is being wavered to students getting admission by August 25. A special 25% discount in monthly fee will be given to students getting admission on kinship basis. We hope our students will enjoy the same standard of education which is the hallmark of our education system.

Yours sincerely,

Study this example too:

Dear Mr. Ali,

To meet the growing demands for cosmetic products in this area we have decided to extend our business by opening a new department.
Our new department will carry an extensive range of cosmetic at prices, which compare very favorably with those, charged by other suppliers.
We would like the opportunity to demonstrate our new merchandise to you, and are therefore arranging a special window display during the week beginning from 2 June. The official opening of our new department will take place on Friday, 3 July.

We hope you will visit our new department during opening week and give us the opportunity to show you that it maintains the reputation enjoyed by our other departments for giving sound value for money.

Ours faithfully,

- Minutes of Informal Meetings
- Producing the Minutes
  - Resolution minutes
  - Narrative Minutes
  - Action Minutes
- Rules of Indirect Speech

Preparing Minutes of Meeting

In a typical business, many committees and task forces operate within the company. The purpose of committees is to discuss various problems and to make recommendations to management. A standing committee is one that operates permanently year after year, although its members may change. A task force is a group of people who are appointed to solve a specific problem; when they make their recommendation on the 'task' assigned to them, the task force is disbanded. Each department may have several committees that meet periodically – usually once a week, every two weeks, or monthly. For example, if you are working in a sales department, there may be committees on advertising, sales conferences, commissions, product development, public relations, and so on.

A meeting has been called….

Statutory	….. because the law demands it	… shareholders', creditors', directors', councilors' meetings
Managerial	…. To progress company affairs	to inform of policy, to brief, to delegate tasks, to discuss problems, to reach group decisions, etc
Creative	…. to generate ideas, to open up new possibilities or avenues of action	to 'brainstorm' around the idea of what the firm could design, manufacture; to produce an advertising slogan, poster, etc.
Negotiating	…. to reach a solution to a problem acceptable to two sides with different interests	management and trade union to agree upon pay increase/rise

General/ public	…. to report back to a group membership, or to air matters of public interest (members & roles)	Annual General Meeting of shareholders or club membership meeting; public enquiries into planning proposals

Members of Meetings & their Role

Committee Members' Roles

- The Chairman's Role: to coordinate the work of the committee…leader, guide, umpire
- The Secretary's Role: to carry out the administrative work of the committee… organizer, chairman's right hand
- The Treasurer's Role: to monitor the committee's financial activities
- The Committee Member's Role: to participate at meetings and do work delegated to him or her

Special terms for meetings:

- Ad hoc: for the particular purpose of
- Advisory: submitting suggestions or advice to a person or body entitled to carry out decisions and actions
- Agenda: a 'timetable' listing items for discussion at a meeting
- AGM: Annual General Meeting
- Apologies: for absence written or orally delivered excuse for not being able to attend a meeting
- Chairman: coordinator of a committee, working party, etc.
- Chairman's agenda: like ordinary agenda but containing additional information for guidance
- Executive: having power to act upon and carry out decisions
- Ex officio: by reason of an existing office or post
- Honorary: performing a duty without payment
- Minutes: written summary of a meeting's business
- Motion: a topic formally introduced for discussion
- Nem con: no one disagreeing
- Opposer: one who speaks against
- Other business: items discussed outside main business of meeting
- Proposer: one who speaks in favor of a motion
- Resolution: a decision reached after a vote at formal meetings – a motion successfully introduced
- Secretary: committee administrator
- Sine die: indefinitely
- Standing committee: one which has an indefinite term of office
- Treasurer: financial guardian
- Unanimous: all of like mind

Minutes of Informal Meeting

The written record of the proceedings of a meeting is called the minutes of the meeting. Since most meetings in business are informal (that is, do not follow the rules of parliamentary procedure), the minutes are also informal. The minutes usually include the date, time, and place of the meeting; the name of the presiding officer; a list of those present (and frequently those absent); and the time of adjournment. Discussions are usually summarized.

Usually the minutes are signed by the person who took them and sometimes by the presiding officer as well. Minutes are usually duplicated, and copies are sent to each person present at the meeting and to other designated officials. Let's look at the minutes of a meeting:

Presiding: Naeem Ahmad, President

Present: Ahmad Ali, Muhammad Aleem, Sara Zaman, Yousif Habib

Absent: Munir Ahmad, Muhammad Asif, Tariq Nazir

After calling the meeting to order at 3:15 pm, the president asked the treasurer for a brief report....

The president asked Sara Zaman, chairperson of the investment committee, for the committee recommendation….
The president asked Ahmad Ali of Lauder, Bennet, and Laser, the club's broker, to comment….
Mr Habib announced that the club's annual picnic is scheduled for Saturday, Sept 14, at Al-Hamra Hall in Lahore……
The meeting was adjourned at 5:30 pm

Respectfully submitted

Hassan
Secretary

Minutes of Formal Meetings

Minutes of meetings that follow parliamentary procedure are somewhat different in form from the informal minutes illustrated here. Formal minutes do not include discussions. Only motions, resolutions, committee assignments and reports, and other specific accomplishments are included. Topical headings are used for easy reference and how the recorder has briefly summarized a speaker's remarks. Also note that motions should be worded specifically followed by the name of the person who made the motion and the name of the one who seconded.
Resolutions to express sympathy, appreciation, congratulations, and the like are often passed at formal meetings.

The paragraphs giving the reasons for the resolution are introduced by the word WHEREAS (followed by a comma) and the paragraphs stating the action to be taken are introduced by the word RESOLVED (also followed by a comma).
Time & Place: The regular monthly meeting of the Historical-Commercial Club of Lahore was called by the president, Naeem Ahmad, on Friday, February 8, 2006, at 2 pm in the Jinnah room of the Plaza Hotel.

Minutes	The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.
Treasurer's report	The following report was given by Fatima Hanif, the treasurer:
Balance on hand, Jan 1, 2006	Rs. 23720.90 18160.50

Total	41881.40
Paid out in January	8500.00

Balance	33381.4

The treasurer's report was accepted.

Old Business	It was moved, seconded, and voted that a booklet describing local commercial site of historic interest be written and published by the club and distributed to local schools.
New Business	After a discussion about improving the club's ability to advise the local media about its activities, a committee consisting of Fatima Hanif, chairperson; Sara Ahmad, Iqbal was appointed to report the next meeting.
Program	Naeem Ahmad introduced Ms Munir, an archaeologist at City University……

The meeting was adjourned at 4:15 pm
Respectfully submitted

Secretary(producing minutes)

Producing the Minutes

Resolution minutes

Some types of meeting – for example those of boards of directors – record only the decision reached, usually after a vote. The arguments, initial disagreements or conflicting views remain unwritten or unrecorded. Thus a lengthy discussion on the pros and cons of keeping a barely profitable branch store open may be summarized as:

5 Liberty Branch

It was resolved that the company's liberty branch be closed with effect from 31 May 2006 and the premises, fixtures and fittings offered for sale

Such minutes usually include the word 'resolved' and may indicate the pattern of voting. Otherwise, the items, 'Apologies for Absence', 'Minutes of the Last Meeting', 'Matters Arising' and 'Date of Next Meeting' follow the pattern of narrative minutes. Note that in some formal meetings, the 'Matters Arising' and 'Any Other Business' items are not included, as a tighter rein is kept on what may be discussed.

Narrative Minutes (Fuller Picture & View)

Sometimes referred to as minutes of narration, narrative minutes tell more of the 'story' of what happened and who said what at a meeting. The main points of the background and discussion leading to a decision are recorded, and so anyone reading such minutes will gain a much fuller picture of a committee's work and views.

Narrative minutes are recorded in reported speech and instead of giving direct speech we use indirect speech. This simply involves referring to committee members in the third person – either by their office – 'The chairman said....' or by name, 'Mr. Naeem asked whether ….' When decisions are reached by a vote, expressions such as, 'it was generally agreed that….' 'It was therefore decided that….' are used to introduce the details of the decision. Further, to keep the record objective and neutral, the passive is often used: 'The secretary was asked to write to the Council to…..'

Care Regarding Narration
Care must be taken when recording narrative minutes that verb tenses are appropriate and that the time interval between the actual discussion at the meeting and the later recording of the minutes does not lead to confusion:

He said he would contact the suppliers next week.

At the time this statement was made, 'next week' was true, but if the minutes were distributed and read a fortnight after the meeting took place, it would no longer be true; this expression like 'the following week' is more accurate.

Action Minutes
Busy committees sometimes like to introduce a right hand blank column beside the minutes in order to put a designated committee member's name against a particular task to be carried out:

6 Annual games
The secretary was asked to seek approval to use the company sports ground again.
Action by: Secretary

Some Rules of Indirect Speech
'I'm sorry I'm late. I missed the bus.' DIRECT SPEECH

He said that he was sorry he was late. He had missed the bus.
REPORTED SPEECH VERSION
He apologized for being late. He had missed the bus.

Some Rules

Rule One: Persons/Pronouns

I

He, she

You

We

They

You (pl)

Rule Two: the Tenses of Verbs

Rule Three: the Distancing Effect
Today-that day, now-then, here-there, this-that, these-those, tomorrow-the next/ following day, yesterday-the previous day

Rule Four: Conveying the Tone of the Direct Speech
If the reported speech writer is not very careful, the reporting may easily slip into a dull 'he said, she said, he said, she said', so it is important to vary the words that introduce the reported speech:

Asked that, wondered whether, strongly denied that, confirmed that, suggested that, suggested that, etc.

Model Business Reports
A Model Report

October 10, 2003

The General Manager,
Fit Garment Industries,
Multan Road, Lahore.

Dear Sir,

Subject: Report on the strike of the workers in the factory.

Following your instructions, I have probed into the matter regarding the strike of all the workers in the factory. Here are my findings:

On Monday morning, in the production unit 2, two workers started a fight on a money matter. Ahmad had lent some money to Kareem, who made several promises but did not return a single penny.

On Monday morning, Ahmad demanded an immediate return of his amount but instead of an apologetic behavior Kareem abused Ahmad. Hot remarks were exchanged. Kareem picked up a hammer and hit it hard on Ahmad's head. It started bleeding.

He was rushed to the hospital by the workers. Members of the labour union reached and all the workers took out a procession. The President of the union gave a call for strike. They raised slogans against the culprit. While addressing the mob, union leaders demanded a prompt termination of the culprit. They wanted to continue the strike till the acceptance of their demand.

However, on the assurance of the Production Manager, they agreed to call off their strike. Everything was done amicably.

Sir,

You have asked for my suggestions, so I recommend Mr. Kareem's termination. I do feel that a case of fraud and assault should be registered in the police station. Mr. Ahmad should be treated at the expenses of the company and should be granted paid leave for one month.

Yours truly,

A. Sheikh

Definition

A business report is an impartial, objective, planned presentation of facts to one or more persons for a specific business purpose or an orderly, objective message used to convey information from one organizational area to another or from one institution to another to assist in decision making or problem solving."

Reports have been classified in numerous ways by management and by report-preparation authorities. We classify reports on the bases of their forms, uses, contents, etc.

Purpose of Report

Purpose of Report	Common Examples	Distribution
To monitor and control operations	Plans, operating reports, personal activity reports	Internal reports move upwards on recurring basis; external reports go to selected audience.
To implement policies and procedures	Lasting guideline, position papers	Internal reports move downwards or on a non-recurring basis
To comply with regulatory requirements	Reports, IRS, SEC, EEOC, Human Rights Commission	External reports are sent on a recurring basis
To obtain new business or findings	Sales proposals	External reports are sent on non-recurring basis
To document client work	Interim progress reports, final reports	External reports are sent on non-recurring basis
To guide decisions	Research reports, justification reports, trouble shooting reports (Classifications)	Internal reports move upwards on a non-recurring basis

Classification of Report

Formal or Informal

Formal reports are carefully structured; they stress objectivity and organization, contain much detail, and are written in a style that tends to eliminate such elements as personal pronouns.

Informal reports are usually short messages with natural, casual use of language. The internal memorandum generally can be described as an informal report.

Short or Long Reports

'Short-or-long' can be a confusing classification for reports. A one-page memorandum is obviously short, and a term paper of twenty pages is obviously long. What about in-between lengths? One important distinction generally holds true: as a report becomes longer, it takes on more characteristics of formal report. Thus, the formal-informal and short-long classifications are closely related.

What Makes a Good Business Report?

Business reports are like bridges spanning time and space. Organizations use them to provide a formal, verifiable link among people, places, and time. Some reports are needed for internal communication; others are vehicles for corresponding with outsiders. Some are required as a permanent record; others are needed to solve an immediate problem or to answer a passing question. Many move upward through the chain of command to help managers monitor the various units in the organization; some move downward to explain management decisions to lower-level employees responsible for day-to-day operations.

The purpose of a business report is to convey essential information in an organized, useful format. Despite technological advances, the ability to accumulate data, organize facts, and compose a readable text remains a highly marketable skill.

A well-prepared business report will provide COMPLETE, ACCURATE information about an aspect of a company's operations. The subject of a report may vary from expenses to profits, production to sales, marketing trends to customer relations. The information provided by a report is often meant to influence decisions, to determine changes, improvements, or solutions to problems. Therefore, the report must also be CLEAR, CONCISE, and READABLE.

The format of a business report may vary from a brief informal report intended for in-house use to a voluminous formal report intended for a national public distribution. Some reports consist entirely of prose while others consist of statistics; and still other reports may employ a combination of prose, tables, charts, and graphs.

The style of a report depends upon the audience. An informal report meant to be read only by close associates may be worded personally. In such reports personal pronouns 'I' or 'We' are acceptable. A formal report, on the other hand, must be impersonal and expressed entirely in the third person. Note the difference

Style

Informal:

I recommend that the spring campaign concentrate on newspaper and television advertising.

Formal:

It is recommended that the spring campaign concentrate on newspaper and television advertising.

Informal:

After discussing the matter with our department managers, we came up with the following information.

Formal:

The following report is based upon information provided by the managers of the Accounting, Marketing, Personnel, and Advertising Departments.

Deciding on Format and Length

Pre-printed form: It is basically for "fill in the blanks" reports. Most are relatively short (five or fewer pages) and deal with routine information, often mainly in numerical form. Use this format when it's requested by the person authorizing the report.

Letter Reports
Common for reports, of five or fewer pages, those are directed to outsiders. These reports include all the normal parts of a letter, but they may also have headings, footnotes, tables, and figures.
Memo Reports
Common for short (fewer than ten pages) informal reports distributed within an organization. Memos have headings at the top: To, From, Date, and Subject. In addition, like longer reports, they often have internal headings and sometimes have visuals. (Organizational plan)

Deciding on Approach
Audience attitude is the basis for decisions about an organization. If the audience is considered, either receptive or open minded, use the direct approach.

Lead off with a summary of your key findings, conclusions, and recommendations. This 'up-front' approach is by far the most popular and convenient order for business reports because it saves time and makes the best of the report which is easy to follow. For those who have questions or want more information, later parts of the report provide complete findings and supporting details. In addition to being more convenient for readers, the direct approach also produces a more forceful report. You are sure of yourself when you state your conclusions confidently at the outset.

Types of Reports
A memo report is a cross between interoffice memo and a formal report

Memo reports can be used to:

- Answer a request for information
- Report progress
- Make recommendations
- State facts
- Communicate ideas
- Send statistical data
- Explain trend within an organization

Two types of Memo Reports

1. Informational memorandum reports
2. Analytical memo reports

(1) Informational Memorandum Reports
The central purpose of informational reports is to inform and summarize information. It is similar to speech. Obviously, these reports vary widely in content, depending on type of business, purpose, topics discussed, and readers' needs.

An information memo report will:

- Inform
- Summarize some information requested
- Organize information objectively
- Make recommendation

Conference Reports
Topics for conference reports range from summaries of personal sales called conferences to write-ups of meetings attended by hundreds of persons. For example, a credit or collection manager or account executive may make similar reports after conferences with clients. The text of such reports is usually organized by topics discussed or presented simply in a chronological order. Some firms have standardized headings for the often-written reports to ensure that the same information or main topics are recorded in all of them.

Progress Reports
Progress reports show, progress, accomplishments, or activity over time or at a given stage of a major assignment. The organizational plan is usually inductive, including topics similar to these.

1. Introduction (purpose, nature of project)
2. Description of accomplishments during the reporting period.
3. Unanticipated problems (if any)
4. Plans for the next reporting period.
5. Summary (overall appraisal of progress to date)

Periodic Reports
They are routine reports prepared at regular time interval-daily, weekly, monthly quarterly or annually.

Examples of such reports are:

1. Sales Reports
2. Financial Reports

These reports are prepared on pre-printed form.

(2) Analytical Memorandum Reports
This analytical memorandum report seeks to analyze a situation or problem; it may end with or without a specific recommendation.
Such reports have the following subjects.

- On the causes of decline in sales volume
- On the evaluation of a person before recruitment
- On individual being considered for promotion
- On the analysis of a particular book

Recommendation-Justification Reports
Many analytical reports will have a special purpose: to recommend a change or remain with the status quo (policy), support the idea that something is desirable or undesirable (value), or defend the accuracy of information (fact). Your report may be in response to a specific request, or it may be voluntary.

While Organizing Memo Reports Take Care of the Following

- Itemize the information
- Present the fact with absolute fairness and accuracy

- Be careful not to mix your opinion with the facts you report
- Reserve your comments for your conclusions and recommendations

Letters Reports

Letter reports are of two types:

1. Informational letter reports
2. Analytical letter reports

1. Informational letter reports include

- A staff report to financial officer regarding issues concerning personnel turnover in the sales department
- A report in reply to inquiry about product and services provided by your Company

2. Analytical Letter Reports

These include investigation of an issue or problem

- Calculation of financial ratios of a company in order to control its financial condition.

Format

A letter report is simply a report in letter form; it is often used when sending information to a reader outside your organization. It includes:

1. Date
2. Inside address
3. Salutation
4. Body (the heart of the report)
5. Complimentary close
6. Signature
7. Reference section

Often the letter report has a subject line, usually placed a line or two below the salutation. Its length may range from two to five (seldom more) pages. And it may have two purposes: informational or analytical. For your report to be effective, it must be logical. If you learn how to think logically, you'll also write more logically. Here are some common errors to avoid.

1. Lack of Objectivity
Seeing only the facts that support your views and ignoring any contradictory information.

For example," Although half the survey population expressed dissatisfaction with our current product, a sizable portion finds it satisfactory." (You may be tempted to ignore the dissatisfied half instead of investigating the reasons for their dissatisfaction.)

2. Hasty Generalization
Forming judgments on the basis of insufficient evidence or special cases, for example:

"Marketing strategy Z increased sales 15 percent in Lahore supermarkets. Let's try it in Karachi." (Lahore and Karachi are probably vastly different markets).

3. Hidden Assumptions
Hiding a questionable major premise: for example,
"We are marketing product X in Print media because we marketed product Y in Print media." (Who says product X and product Y should be marketed the same way?)

4. Either or Scenarios
Setting up two alternatives and not allowing for others: for example,
"We must open a new plant by spring, or we will go bankrupt." (Surely there are other ways to avoid bankruptcy).

5. False Causal Relationships.
Assuming that event A caused event B merely because A preceded B: for example,

"Sales increased 20 percent as soon as we hired the new sales director." (Something besides the new sales director might have been responsible for increased sales).

6. Begged Questions.
Assuming as proven what you are seeking to prove: for example,

"We need a standard procedure so that we will have standard results.' (But why is standardization important?)

7. Personal Attacks or Appeals to Popular Prejudice.
Thinking people or ideas you don't like by chaining them to irrelevant but unpopular actions or ideas: for example,

"Mr. Naeem mishandled the budget last years, so he can't be expected to motivate his staff." (Mr. Naeem's accounting ability may have nothing to do with his ability to motivate staff members).

Main Features of the Report

Following are main features of the report.

The Opening
As the name suggests, the opening is the first section in any report. A good opening accomplishes at least the following three things:

i) Introduces the subject of the report
ii) Indicates why the subject is important
iii) Previews the main ideas and the order in which they will be covered.

If you fail to provide readers with these clues to the structure of your report, they'll read aimlessly and miss important points; much like drivers trying to find their way through a strange city without a map.

Headings and Lists

A heading is a brief title at the start of a subdivision within a report that cues readers about the content of the section that follows. Headings are useful markers for clarifying the framework of a report. They visually indicate shifts from one idea to the next and when subheadings (lower level headings) and headings are both used, they help readers see the relationship between subordinate and main ideas. In addition, busy readers can quickly understand the gist of a document simply by scanning the headings.

Headings within a given section that are of the same level of importance should be phrased in parallel form. In other words, if one heading begins with a verb, all same-level headings in that section should begin with verbs. If one is a noun phrase, all should be noun phrases. Putting comparable ideas in similar terms tell readers that the ideas are related. The only exception might be such descriptive headings as "Introduction" at the beginning of a report and "Conclusions" and "Recommendations" at the end. Many companies specify a format for headings.

A list is a series of words, names, or items arranged in a specific order. Setting off important ideas in a list provides an additional structural clue. Lists can show the sequence of ideas or visually heighten their impact. In addition, they facilitate the skimming process for busy readers. Like headings, list items should be phrased in parallel form. You might also consider multilevel lists, with subentries below each major item (much like an outline).

Previews and Reviews

You may have heard the old saying "tell'em what you're going to tell'em; then tell 'em what you just told'em." The more formal way of giving this advice is to tell you to use preview sections before and review sections after important material in your report. Using preview section to introduce a topic helps readers get ready for new information. Previews are particularly helpful when the information is complex or unexpected. You don't want the reader to get halfway into a section before figuring out what it's all about.

Review sections, obviously enough, come after a body of material and summarize the information for your readers. Summaries that come at the end of chapters in some textbooks are review sections. Long reports and reports dealing with complex subjects can often benefit from multiple review sections, and not just a single review at the very end.

The Ending

Research shows that the ending, the final section of a report, leaves strong and lasting impression. That's why it's important to use the ending to emphasize the main points of your message. In a report written in direct order you may want to remind readers of your key points or your conclusions and recommendations. If your report is written in direct order, end with conclusions and recommendations. If your report is written in indirect order, end with a summary of key points (except in short memos). In analytical reports, end with conclusions and recommendations as well as key points. Be sure to summarize the benefits to the reader in any report that suggests a change of course or some other action. In general, the ending ties up all the pieces and reminds readers how those pieces fit together. It provides a final opportunity to emphasize the wholeness of your message. Furthermore, it gives you one last chance to check what you really wanted to say.

Organizational Plan for Short Informal Reports

A. Format

1. For brief external reports, use letter format including a title or a subject line after the reader's address that clearly states the subject of the document.
2. For brief internal reports, use memo or manuscript format.
3. Present all short informal reports properly.
    a. Single-space the text.
    b. Double-space between paragraphs.
    c. Use headings where helpful, but try not to use more than three levels of headings.
    d. Call attention to significant information by setting it off visually with lists or indention.
    e. Include visual aids to emphasize and clarify the text.

Organizational Plan for Short Informal Reports

B. Opening

1. For short, routine memos use the subject line of the memo form and the first sentence or two of the text as the introduction.
2. For all other short reports, cover these topics in the introduction: purpose, scope, background, restrictions (in conducting the study), sources of information and methods of research, and organization of the report.
3. If using direct order, place conclusions and recommendations in the opening.

C. Body (Findings and Supporting Details)

1. Use direct order for informational reports to receptive readers, developing idea around subtopics (chronologically, geographically and categorically).
2. Use direct order for analytical reports to receptive readers, developing points around conclusions or recommendations.
3. Use indirect order for analytical reports to skeptical or hostile readers, developing points around logical arguments.
4. Use an appropriate writing style.
    a. Use an informal style (I and you) for letter and memo reports, unless company custom calls for the impersonal third person.
    b. Use an impersonal style for more formal short reports.
5. Maintain a consistent time frame by writing in either the present or the past tense, using other tenses only to indicate prior or future events.
6. Give each paragraph a topic sentence.
7. Link paragraphs by using transitional words and phrases.
8. Strive for readability by using short sentences, concrete words, and terminology that is appropriate for your readers.
9. Be accurate, though, and impartial in presenting the material.
10. Avoid including irrelevant and unnecessary details.
11. Include documentation for all material quoted or paraphrased from secondary sources, using a consistent format for all quoted and paraphrased documents.

D. Ending

1. In informational reports summarize major findings at the end, if you wish.
2. Summarize points in the same order in which they appear in the text.

3. In analytical reports using indirect order, list conclusions and recommendations at the end.
4. Be certain that conclusions and recommendations follow logically from facts presented in the text.
5. Consider using a list format for emphasis.
6. Avoid introducing new material in the summary, conclusions, or recommendations.

Model Business Reports
Report on the Low Admission Rate in a Newly Opened Branch of a School

October 10, 2006
The Principal,
The School, Main Branch,
Lahore.

Dear Madam,

Subject: Causes of Low Admission Rate
This report is in response to your directive No. 123 September 20 which demands certain reasons of very poor admission rate in this branch. My findings are given below:

I. The location of our school building is not ideal.
II. The building itself is very old.
III. It does not appeal the visitors.
IV. We had been facing the problem of permanent faculty because direct conveyance is yet not available.
V. Parents lodged several complaints against the management, but we could not help it.

Considering these problems, I propose that:

1. The building of the school should be shifted to a main road.
2. Permanent faculty should be appointed.

Yours sincerely,

A Report on Slow Sales and Rising Complaints

TO: Rana Abid, Vice President of Marketing
FROM: Bashir Ahmad, National Sales Manager
DATE: September 12, 2006
SUBJECT: Major accounts sales problems

INTRODUCTION

This report outlines the results of my investigation into the recent slowdown in sales and the accompanying rise in sales-and service-related complaints from some of our largest customers.

As we discussed at last quarter's management meeting, major account sales dropped 12 percent over the last four quarters, whereas overall sales went up 7 percent. During the same time, we have noticed an increase in both formal and informal complaints from larger customers regarding how confusing and complicated it has become to do business with us.

My investigation started with in-depth discussions with the four regional sales managers, first as a group and then individually. The tension felt in the initial meeting eventually bubbled to the surface during my meetings with each manager. Staff members in each region are convinced that other regions are booking orders they don't deserve, with one region doing all the legal work only to see another region get credited with the sale and, naturally, the commission and quota credit.

I followed up the sales manager's discussions with informal talks and e-mail exchanges with several sales reps from each region. Virtually everyone who is involved with our major national accounts has a story to share. No one is happy with the situation and I sense that some reps are walking away from major customers because the process is so frustrating.

Organizational Issues

When we divided the national sales force into four geographical regions last year, the idea was to focus our sales efforts and clarify responsibilities for each prospective and current customer. The regional managers have got to know their market territories very well, and sales have increased beyond even our most optimistic projections.

Unfortunately, while solving one problem, we seem to have created another. In the past 12 to 18 months, several regional customers have grown to national statuses. In addition, a few national retailers have taken on (or expressed interest in) our products. As a result, a significant portion of both our current sales and our future opportunities lie with these large national accounts.

I uncovered more than a dozen cases in which sales reps from two or more regions found themselves competing with each other by pursuing the same customer from different locations.

Moreover, the complaints from our major accounts about overlapping or nonexistent account coverage are a direct result of the regional organization.

Recommendations

In the light of the above findings I recommend:

(i) Areas may be reallocated.

(ii) A coordination cell may be set up in the head office to monitor the working of these regional offices.

(iii) A bulletin giving area wise sales achievements of every region may be circulated.

If there is anything else you would like to know, please call me.

Yours truly,

LESSON 31

BUSINESS REPORTS

Outline:

- Formal Report and its parts

Formal Report

Parts of a Formal Report

A formal report's format and impersonal tone convey an impression of professionalism. A formal report can be either short (fewer than 10 pages) or long (10 pages or more). It is informational or analytical, direct or indirect. It may be targeted to readers inside or outside the organization.
There are three basic divisions of a formal report:

1. Prefatory Parts
2. Text Parts
3. Supplementary Parts

1. Prefatory Parts are:
   a) Cover
   b) Title fly
   c) Letter of authorization
   d) Letter of acceptance
   e) Letter of transmittal
   f) Table of contents
   g) List of illustrations
   h) Synopsis or executive summary
2. Text Parts:
   a) Introduction
   b) Body
   c) Summary
   d) Conclusions
   e) Recommendations
   f) Notes
3. Supplementary Parts:
   a) Appendixes
   b) Bibliography
   c) Index

Prefatory Parts

Cover
Use a cover only for long reports. Use a sturdy, plain, light cardboard with good page fasteners. With the cover on, the open pages should remain flat. Center the report title and your name three to four inches from the upper edge.

Title Fly

It is a plain sheet of paper with the title of the report on it.

Title Page

1. The title of the report
2. The name, title and address of the person group etc. that authorized the report prepared for submitted to
3. The name, title and address of the person, group etc. that prepared the report, prepared by, submitted by
4. The date on which the report was submitted.

The title page signals the readers by giving the report title, author's name, name of person or organization to which the report is addressed, and date of submission. Choose title information but not long, A Report of, A Study of, or A Survey of etc.

Your title promises what your report will deliver by stating the report's purpose and content. A title in order to be effective must be clear, accurate, comprehensive, specific, concise and appropriately.

Place of Title Page Items

Do not number your title page, but count it as page (I) of your prefatory pages. Centre the title horizontally on the page, three to four inches below the upper edge, using all capital letters. If the title is longer than six or eight words, centre it on two or more lines.

Letter of Authorization and Letter of Acceptance

If you receive written authorization (a letter or memo) you may want to include. It usually has direct request plan. Letter of Acceptance (or memo of acceptance) acknowledges the assignment. It follows good- news plan confirming time and money restriction and other pertinent detail. This letter is rarely included in report.

Letter of Transmittal (or Memo of Transmittal)

It conveys your report to the audience. It says what you'd say if you were handing the report to the person who authorized you. It has less formal tone.

Depending on the situation, your letter might:

- Acknowledge those who helped with the report
- Refer readers to sections of special interest
- Discuss the need and approaches for follow-up investigations
- Suggest some special uses of the information
- Urge the reader to take immediate action
- Use good news plan

Table of Contents

This table outlines the text and list Prefatory Parts

1. List preliminary items (transmittal letter, abstract) in your table of contents, numbering the pages with small roman numerals. Make a list of items that appear at the end of the report; glossary, appendix, notes and bibliography section. Number these pages with Arabic numerals, continuing the page sequence of the report. List the first page of your report text.

2. Include no heading in the table of contents not listed as headings or subheadings in the report. Your report text may, however, contain certain sub-headings.
3. Use different types of styles and indentations to show the various levels of heads.

List of Illustrations
For simplicity sake, some reports prefer to include all visual aids as illustration or exhibits.
Put the list of figures and table on separate page if they won't fit on one page with the table of content.

Synopsis or Executive Summary
A synopsis is a brief overview (one page or less) of report's most important point. It is also called abstract. Executive summary is a fully developed mini version of the report and is comprehensive.
1. Make your summary able to stand alone in meaning – a mini-report
2. Make it intelligible to the general reader. Readers of summaries will vary widely in expertise, perhaps much more than those who read the report itself. So translate all technical data into plain English.
3. Add no new information. Simply summarize the report.
4. Stick to the order of your report.
5. Emphasize only major points.

Text of the Report

Introduction
It has a number of functions, covers a wide variety of topics and helps the reader to follow and understand information.

Body
The section contains information that supports conclusion and recommendation as well as analysis, logic, interpretation of the information.

Closing
You summarize the main idea of your report highlighting your conclusion or recommendation and list any course of action. In long report, this section may be labeled Summary, Conclusion & Recommendation.
Supplementary Parts

Appendix/Appendixes
They contain materials related to the report but not included in the text because they were lengthy or not directly relevant. They include:
1. Statistics or measurements
2. Maps
3. Complex formulas
4. Long quotations
5. Photographs
6. Related correspondence (letters of inquiry etc.)
7. Texts of laws, regulations etc.

Bibliography
A bibliography is a list of source materials on a particular subject. In a formal report it shows what books and other library materials were consulted and it includes all the works mentioned in the footnotes. As part of the reference matter, it follows the appendix or appendices.

Index
An index is an alphabetical list of names, places and subjects mentioned in the report, along with the page on which they occur. They are rarely included in unpublished reports.

Dear Sir,

Subject: Report on Restlessness among Workers

This is in reference to your letter no. 11 of September 3 in which I was asked to compile a report on the restlessness now prevalent among our workers. I have completed my investigations, and my findings with recommendations are given in a detailed report which is enclosed.
I would be obliged if I could have your comments after you have gone through the report. If, in the course of your reading, you would like to discuss some points with me, I shall be happy to do so at any time convenient to you.

Respectfully submitted

LESSON 32

MARKET REPORTS

Outline:

- Definition
- Qualities of a Good Market Report
- Proposal, its Purpose and Kinds
- Parts of the Proposal

The place where we go to buy or sell commodities is commonly known as market. Technically speaking, market is not a place or bazaar where we go to buy or sell, but it is indeed a contact of buyer and seller. The world has become a global village making buying and selling possible without going anywhere. Information Technology has mainly played its part in doing so.

Prof. Chapman says while defining the market that it refers not a place but to a commodity or commodities, buyers and sellers of the same who are in direct competition with one another. We can name these as Rice Market, Wheat Market, Yarn Market, Fruit Market, etc.

Definition

A market report describes the condition of a commodity in the market on a certain date for a specific period. It points out the business conditions in a market at a given time. Market Report may be of a day, a week, a month, a year or even a number of years. Daily Market Report shows the price of goods on a mentioned date. It also describes the closing rates of the previous day, the opening rates of that day, the highest and the lowest rates and the demand and supply of the commodities on that particular day.
Daily newspapers, television, radio and internet give this information. Consumers take more interest in daily market report than in traders.

Weekly Market Report gives the condition of the commodities for the past six days. It contains closing rates of the last week, the opening rates of that week, the highest and lowest rates and the closing rates of that week. This report also determines the causes of variation in price and the expected price movement in the coming week. Business communities show a keen interest in such reports.

Monthly Market Report is an analysis of business done during the whole month. These reports are prepared for comparatively stable market and a permanent demand. This report describes the closing rate of the commodities in the previous month, the opening rate of the month, highest, lowest and closing rate of the month. Newspapers, trade journals and monthly bulletins publish these reports.

Value of Reading a Market Report

The Market Report makes us aware of the volume and nature of business in the market. Traders become aware of different conditions of the market. They can know something about the demand and supply of a commodity.

Market Reports help people guess the future movements of price. The market condition is exposed to everybody as a result of which prices become stable. These prices can be compared at different markets.

Qualities of a Good Market Report

A person writing a Market Report should have a comprehensive knowledge of the matter that has to be reported. He must always keep in mind the following points.

1. Normally a Market Report is not personal. It should be written using third person and the past tense.

2. General readers should be able to understand the technical terms used in the report.

3. Words should be used economically. Unnecessary details must be avoided. It should not be so short that misses the essential information.

4. There should be a good analysis of changes of prices and demand and supply relationship.

5. Market Report should be based upon the facts. Events should be written in the minute details. Any writer of Market Report should be unbiased while concluding his report.

How to Read a Market Report

To comprehend a Market Report fully, it is necessary to read it carefully. Sometimes even an educated person faces difficulties to understand it. More practice is required to understand a market report. One should specially note the nature of report (daily, weekly, monthly or annual) the nature of commodity, volume of business and the trend of the market.

How to Explain a Market Report

Sometimes a market report is reproduced and sometimes it is explained. While reproducing a Market Report technical terms should concentrate on the given matter. Do not try to add or omit something.

While explaining a Market Report, try to extract the hidden meaning. First of all explain all the technical terms separately, and then mention the price clearly.

After following the above instructions explain the subject matter (of the report) clearly.

Model Market Reports

A Report on Lahore Cotton Market

Cotton Easy Amid Thin Trading

Lahore: The cotton market failed to maintain a firm posture on Monday as spinners showed reluctance to chase the rising prices. However, needy spinners continued to pick up quality lots at Rs. 2000 level. The official spot rate was marked up by Rs. 20 at Rs. 2000.

Cotton prices moved up to Rs. 2050 level on Saturday owing to spinners' fear that lint supply would be interrupted during elections and ginners/ growers' strong resistance to decline in lint prices. There seemed to be an unwritten agreement between ginners and growers to make joint efforts to stave off the threat of price decline. Hence, despite the spinners' reluctance to pay higher asking prices, the ginners maintained a firm posture. As a result the needy spinners picked up stray lots of quality lint at Rs. 2000. Some low quality stuff, however, changed hands at Rs. 1925.

Most of the spinners remained glued to the side lines as they did not consider it feasible to lift the prevailing prices in view of uncertain outlook of the international yarn market. The current prices are understood to be well above world parity. It remains to be seen whether ginners are able to hold the price line when odds are in favour of buyers.

Proposal
Certain analytical reports are called proposals which include bids to perform work under a contract and plea for financial support from outsiders. Such bids and pleas are almost always formal. It matters a little whether your proposal is a memo or a full document. What does matter is the structure you apply to write good proposals.

i. Professors submit proposal to companies stating that they can help solve problems within a company.
ii. Advertising agencies bid on being the agency of record in publicizing a product or idea for a client.
iii. Companies submit proposal to foreign government to do project.

Purposes of Proposals
Numerous groups solicit proposals. Governments are the foremost requesters. These requests appear in newspapers trade publications. Request for Proposal (RFP) is directed towards a company with specific expertise. Proposal topics are varied such as:

- To sell property, machines, etc.
- To construct building bridges, highways
- To survey water area for possible oil fields

Smaller Projects are also made known to individual and corporation such as the following.

1. Improving engineering and just-in-time (JIT) performance within a company

2. Preparing managerial staff for work within or outside the country

3. Planning and basic research before developing any new project

Thus the proposal is similar to that of a recommendation justification report. Both aim to solve problem, alter a procedure, and find answer to question, offer advice and training.

Kinds of Proposal
- Research Proposal
- Business Proposal

i) Research Proposal
A research proposal is usually academic in nature. Professors at schools desire to obtain grant in response to a request or an announcement from the government or other agency. Academic institutions submit most research reports.

ii) Business Proposal
In length, proposal may be similar to other reports like short, long or formal. Like reports, a proposal may be solicited or unsolicited while writing a solicited business proposal, remember, you most likely to have many competitors also bidding for that contract.

While writing an unsolicited proposal, you need to convince the reader or review committee that you understand the organization's problem and that your firm or you are qualified to solve it successfully.

Parts of the Proposal

i) Prefatory Part
- Title fly
- Title page
- Request for proposal
- Letter of transmittal
- Table of content
- List of illustration
- Synopsis or Executive summary
- (Draft Contract)

ii) Text parts
- Introduction
- Body
- Summary

iii) Supplementary parts
- Appendixes

The cover, title fly, title page, table of contents and list of illustration are handled the same way as in a formal report.

Parts of Proposal

Copy of REP
Instead of a letter of authorization, a formal proposal may have a copy of the request for proposal in a letter form or memo soliciting a proposal or a bid for a particular project.

Draft Contract
In long proposals a draft contract may be inserted after an executive summary. A draft contract allows receiver to offer a counter offer and it also gives an immediate overview, including financial information.

Table of Content
Brief proposals usually don't request a table of contents. Long proposals do require as well as other prefatory parts.

ii) Text parts

Introduction
This section presents and summarizes the problem you intend to solve and your solution to that problem, including any benefits the reader will receive from your solution. Write introduction as if you were approaching a non-specialist. Your first reader may be other than the person who sent you a request for the proposal. Some staff members often give the proposal an initial reading. Often the purpose is stated in infinitive form, as for example, to construct 1 meter carpeted road from machine shop.

Scope
Define the boundaries of your project. What boundaries are you setting to accomplish your projects? (Study an area of community)

Project Team
Some proposals even short ones include a list of individuals who will work on the project, including project director.

Background
The long proposal, you may include the projects the company has completed.

Previous work
Possibly literature review on the project

Procedures
Here you briefly explain how you will meet the requirement of your reader.

Equipment and Facilities
Tell the reader that you have thought well to realize what facilities will be needed. State what equipment and facilities you already have.

Closing
This section emphasizes the benefits the readers will realize from you solution, and it urges reader to act.

iii) Supplementary Parts

Appendix
It contains materials related to the report but not included in the text because they've too lengthy or bulky.

Memo

To: General Manager
From: Project Manager

SUBJECT: Activity Plan, 2006

Our primary objective for 2006 is to introduce computers to the three branches, Sialkot, Gujranwala and Jhung. Trips are planned to all these locations within the next month so we may see what each has accomplished toward this objective. In addition, I have planned to meet with Hassan Ahmed, who has written three computer books and he will, I'm sure, have valuable ideas for us.

Specifically, I've outlined six objectives in order of priority:

- Introduce computers to three of our branches
- Complete the programming here in our corporate office
- Reduce property taxes by Rs. 160, 000
- Employ a national management-consulting firm by September
- Establish controls on report reproduction and reduce costs by Rs. 5,000

Improve the format and detail of financial analysis provided to corporate each month

I look forward to the upcoming year and progress toward these goals.

SUBJECT: Supervisory Skills Training Program Proposal

Employee Development has been conducting an in-house supervisory course that focuses primarily on theory and information about management concepts and company policies. We would like to propose additional training for first- and second-line supervisors, focusing on skills only–specific behavioral guidance in supervising and motivating employees to increase productivity.

The program would be administered with the help of ABC Consulting Agency. The total cost of Rs 52,000 will cover customized behavior models, CD-ROM introductory and practice sessions, six line managers and/or staff certified by ABC as qualified trainers, two classes (20 participants each) of trained supervisors, and trainer manual and participant workbook for reproduction.

If you have anything in this regard please do let me know.

LESSON 33

JOB SEARCH AND EMPLOYMENT

Outline:

- The Job Search Communication
- Hiring Practices
- Human Relations / Personnel Communication
- Writing Resumes & Application Letters

For most business students, one of the most important communication tasks is preparing your resume. This document will represent you in offices you have never seen. The resume is just one aspect of a complete communication package that everyone must put together before he or she enters the business world. This package should also include a healthy amount of career planning and self-assessment before you even start thinking about a resume. In addition, after you have written a resume you need to think about writing cover letters, preparing yourself for interviews, and planning strategies for follow up interview with letters and telephone calls. This job-search communication package ends up looking very much like the following figure.

The Job Search Communication

Plan Your Career

Before you can sell a product, you need to know what the product is all about. Similarly, before selling your expertise you need to know the following:

Understanding today's Changing Workplace
Today, work place is influenced by numerous forces such as globalization, advancing technology, information overload, grown diversity, and team based organizations. Certain other issue such as corporate downsizing, cost-cutting initiatives growing dependency on flexible employment techniques such as outsourcing and increasing entrepreneur are fast influencing the workplace.

How Changing Workplace Affects Job
Employment is more flexible. Today, lifelong employees are less in number, only, temporary workers & consultants are working project by project basis.

Hiring Practices

What today's Employers Seek in job Applicants

Today Employers are looking for people who are:

- Able and willing to adapt to diverse situation
- Are unafraid to change
- Ready to learn on the job
- Are sensitive to cultural differences

In fact, your chances of being hired are better if you've studied abroad or learned another language.

Setting Realistic Objectives
How then do you begin assessing what you have to offer and then putting together a convincing sales pitch?
You cannot expect to be managing a major corporation or earning 100,000/- Rs. Similarly, you cannot expect to do some petty job. This is a phase of self-assessment process. Before selling a product know what that product is all about. So most of the experts will tell you that the first thing you need to do is to set realistic objective for yourself.

Know your Major Strengths and Weaknesses
To begin setting objectives, you may want to ask yourself a series of questions to clarify your thinking. These may be questions about your own strengths and weaknesses, questions about you goals, or a realistic appraisal of your abilities. Let's look at some issues you will always want to consider during this phase of self-assessment process.

- What have you done at school?
- Were you good with number?
- Can you get along with people?
- Are there any Gaps in your work history?
- Are you inexperience?
- Are you over-qualified?
- Do you have long term employment with one company or job termination in your career?

Establish Some Goals

- What are your long & short term goals?

- How do you picture yourself as a successful person?

Envision the Ideal Day at Work

- Talk to people about your envisioned profession
- Read out various occupations
- Determine the specific compensation you expect. What do you hope to earn in your first year? What kind of pay increase do you expect each year? Are you willing to settle for less money in order to do something you really love?

Envision Size of Company & Location

Do you like the idea of working for a small organization? How can you make yourself more valuable to employers?

- Keep an employment portfolio
- Collect anything that shows your ability to perform
- Take interim assignment
- Do temporary or freelance work
- Work on polishing and upgrading your skill
- Join networks of professional colleagues & friends who can keep you up to date with occupation and industry

Narrow Down the Field

Let's look at the functional areas of business and their activities as first step in narrowing the field.

Finances

Investment bank, commercial banks savings and loans corporation and brokerage houses

Accounting

Public account firms work as controllers or financial planners. Activities in these jobs range from reviewing financial records or balance sheets to monitoring business plans.

Marketing & Sales

In marketing you want to go to a company that sells consumer products, industrial products, high-technologies.

Human Relations / Personnel Communication

Management Information Systems

Organizing your Approach

Organize your approach to the Employment Process and don't worry if you don't have personal contact in an organization. Find out where the job opportunities are. Which industries are strong? Which part of the country is booming?

Stay Abreast of Business and Financial News through

- Major newspaper
- Trade magazine (print or line edition)
- Scan business page/watch television

Research Specific Companies

Make a list of desirable employers. Identify a promising industry.

Learn about Organization
Find out if a company maintains website. You'll find information about organization's mission, products, annual report employee benefits etc.

Respond to Job Opening
Send resumes quickly and cheaply through e-mail and send focused cover letters directly to executives doing the hiring.

Find Career Counseling
College placement centers offer individual counseling on campus. Seek help from them.

Analyze your Purpose & Audience

- Study your purpose and your audience to tailor your message for maximum effect.
- Gather relevant information about you and the employer you are targeting.
- Establish a good relationship by highlighting those skills and qualifications that match each employer.

Writing Resumes & Application Letters

Preparing Resumes
By sending out such employment messages, you have an opportunity to showcase your communication skills –the skills valued highly by the majority of employers. In fact, your success in finding a job will depend on how carefully you plan, write, and complete your resume.

Analyze your Purpose and Audience
A resume is a structured, written summary of a person's education, employment background, and job qualifications. Resume is a form of advertising. It is intended to stimulate an employer's interest in you. A successful resume inspires a prospective employer to invite you to interview with the company. Thus, your purpose is to create interest. Don't tell readers everything about you. In fact, it may be best to only hint at some things. Consider the following.

Fallacy	Fact
Don't think of a resume as a list all your skills and abilities	A resume will kindle employer interest and generate an interview
Get you the job you want	Get you in the door
Will be read carefully and thoroughly by an interested employer	In fact your resume probably has less than 45 seconds to make an impression.

Investigate Pertinent Information

Include pertinent personal history. The specific dates, duties, and accomplishments of any previous jobs you've held. Collect every piece of relevant educational experience that adds to your qualifications, such as formal degrees, skills, certificates, academic awards, or scholarships.

Information about Personal Endeavors: Give dates of your membership in an association. Offices you may have held in a club or professional organization? Presentations you might have given to a community group etc.

Adapt your Resume to your Audience

Because your resume will have little time to make an impression, make sure to adopt a "you" attitude and think about your resume from the employer's perspective. Ask yourself: What key qualifications will this employer be looking for? Which of these qualifications are your greatest strengths? What quality would set you apart from other candidates in the eyes of a potential employer? What are three or four of your greatest accomplishments, and what resulted from these accomplishments?

A Good Resume

A good resume is a flexible and can be customized for various situations and employers.

To write good resume, you need to show that you (1) think in term of result(2) know how to get things done(3) are well rounded,(4) show signs of progress(5) have personal standards of excellence(6) are flexible and willing to try new things(7) possess strong communication skills.

Appropriate Organizational Approach

To focus attention on your strongest points, adopt the appropriate organizational approach – make your resume chronological, functional, or a combination of the two. The "right" choice depends on your background and your goals.

The Chronological Resume

In a chronological resume, the work-experience section dominates, immediately after the name and address and the objective. You develop this section by listing your jobs sequentially in reverse order, beginning with the most recent position and working backward towards earlier jobs. Under each listing, describe your responsibilities and accomplishments, giving the most space to the most recent positions. If you're just graduating from college, you can vary this chronological approach by putting your educational qualifications before your experience, thereby focusing attention on your academic credentials.

The chorological approach is the most common way to organize a resume, and many employers prefer it. This approach has three key advantages:

(1) employers are familiar with it & can easily find information
(2) it highlights growth and career progression
(3) it highlights employment continuity and stability

The chronological approach is especially appropriate if you have a strong employment history and are aiming for a job that builds on your current career path.

LESSON 34

RESUME WRITING

Outline:

- The Functional Resume
- The Combination Resume
- Approach for Writing Resume
- Proofreading of Resume

Example of a chronological resume

June 2006 to present
Chief Accountant / Financial Analyst
AZ Corporation

- Prepare accounting reports for wholesale gift ware importer (Rs75 million annual sales)
- Audit financial transactions with suppliers in 12 Latin American countries
- Created a computerized model to adjust account for fluctuations in currency exchange rates.
- Negotiated joint-venture agreements with major suppliers in Mexico and Colombia
- Implemented electronic funds transfer for vendor disbursements, improving cash flow and eliminating payables clerk position.

The Functional Resume

A functional resume emphasizes a list of skills and accomplishments, identifying employers and academic experience in subordinate sections. This pattern stresses individual areas of competence, so it's useful for people who are just entering the job market, want to redirect their careers, or have little continuous career-related experience.

Advantages

(1) Without having to read through job descriptions, employers can see what you can do for them,

(2) You can emphasize earlier job experience

(3) You can de-emphasize any lack of career progress or lengthy unemployment.

Example of the Functional Resume

Relevant Skills

Personal Selling/Retailing

- Led house wares department in employee sales for spring 2006.
- Created end-cap and shelf displays for special house wares promotions.
- Sold the most benefit tickets during college fund-raising drive for local community centre

Public Interaction

- Commended by house wares manager for resolving customer complaints amicably
- Was captain college xi and participated in many University Fixtures

Managing

- Training part-time house wares employees in cash register operation and customer service
- Reworked house wares employee schedules as assistant manager
- Organized summer activities for children 6-12 years old for city of Karachi – including reading programs, sports activities, etc.

The Combination Resume A combination resume includes the best features of the chronological and functional approaches. Nevertheless, it is not commonly used, and it has two major disadvantages:

(1) It tends to be longer, and

(2) It can be repetitious if you have to list your accomplishments and skills in both the functional section and the chronological job descriptions.

Example of such a resume;

Naeem Ahmad
122-Mall Road Lahore
(042) 5858585

Objective

To obtain a position as a special events coordinator that will utilize my skills and experience

Skills and Capabilities

- Plan and coordinate large-scale public events
- Develop community support for concerts, festivals, and the arts
- Manage publicity for major events
- Coordinate activities of diverse community groups
- Establish and maintain financial controls for public events
- Negotiate contracts with performers, carpenters, electricians, and suppliers.

Special Event Experience

- Arranged 2001's week-long Arts and Entertainment Festival for the Public Library, involving performances by 25 musicians, dancers, actors, magicians, and artists
- Supervised the 2000 PTA Spring Carnival, an all-day festival with game booths, live bands, contests, and food service that raised Rs. 70,000 for the PTA
- Organized the 1999 Provincial convention for 80 members of the Lahore Women club, which extended over a three-day period and required arrangement for hotels, meals, speakers, and special tours
- Served as chairperson for the 1998 Children's complex Show, a luncheon for 400 that raised Rs.50,000 for orphans and privileged children

Education

- Bachelor of Arts, Psychology, APV College, Lahore.

Employment History

- First National Bank of Pakistan 1988 to 1990, personnel counselor/campus recruiter; scheduled and conducted interview with graduating MBA students on 18 campuses; managed orientation program for recruits hired for bank's management trainee staff
- ABC University 1996-1998, part-time research assistant for Professor Hassan (Science Department)

Compose your Resume to Impress

Write your resume using a simple and direct style. Use short, crisp phrases instead of whole sentences, and focus on what your reader needs to know. Avoid using the word I instead, start your phrases with impressive action verbs such as these:

Accomplished	coordinated	initiated	participated	set up
Achieved	created	installed	performed	simplified
Administered	demonstrated	introduced	planned	sparked
Approved	developed	investigated	presented	streamlined
Arranged	directed	joined	propose	strengthen
Assisted	established	launched	raised	succeeded
Assumed	explored	maintained	recommended	supervised
Budgeted	forecasted	managed	reduced	systematized
Chaired	generated	motivated	reorganized	targeted
Changed	identified	operated	resolved	trained
Complied	implemented	organized	saved	transformed
Completed	improved	oversaw	served

Avoid Weak Statements

Don't say: Responsible for developing a new branch
Say: Developed a new branch
Don't say: I was in charge of customer complaints
Say: Handled all customer complaints
Don't say: I won a cash prize of 100,000 for openings the newest customer accounts in my department
Say: Generated the highest number of new customer accounts in my department and awarded a prize of 100.000

Use Active Statement that Shows Results

In addition to listing your accomplishments, include your name and address, academic credentials, employment history, activities and achievement, and relevant personal data.

Name and Address

Name: an employer needs to know
Who you are
Where you can be reached: phone number/ e-email address contact information at school and at home both, cell phone no etc. No need to include the word resume. Just make sure the reader can tell in an instant who you are and how to communicate with you.

Career Objective or Summary of Qualification

Experts disagree about the need to state a career objective. Such a statement only limits you as a candidate (especially for a variety of openings). Employers will try to categorize you anyway, so you might as well make sure they attach the right label.

Remember, your goal is to generate interest immediately. If you decide to state your objective, make it effective by being as specific as possible about what you want:

Examples of Career Objective or Summary of Qualification

A marketing position in a growing company requiring international education

Summary of qualifications: ten years of experience in international banking with track record.

The career objective or summary may be the only section read fully by the employer, so if you include either one, make it strong, concise, and convincing.

Education

If you are still in school, education is probably your strongest selling point. Present your educational background in depth, choosing facts that support your "theme". Give heading such as "Education", "Professional College Training", or "Academic Preparation" starting with most recently attended, List the name and location of each one, the term of your enrollment (in months and years), your major and minor fields of study, significant skills and abilities you've developed in your course work, and the degrees or certificates you've earned.

Indicate incomplete education. Include any training qualifying you for the job and any scholarship, award that you have won. Also tell them whether the training was sponsored by business or government.

Include any relevant seminars or worship you've attended, as well as the certificates or other documents you've receive. Listing your grades depends on the job you want and the quality of your grades. Remember education is usually given less emphasis if you've worked in your chosen field for a year or more.

Work Experience, Skills & Accomplishments

List the Education Section, the Work-Experience Section

Do the following.

- Focus on your overall theme.
- Show relationship between your previous responsibilities and your target field.
- Call attention to skills you've developed and your progression from jobs of lesser to greater responsibility.
- Describing your work experience,
- List your jobs in chronological order,
- Include any part-time, even if unrelated to your current career objective. It shows your ability to get and hold a job – an important qualification in itself. If you have worked your way through school, say so. Employers interpret this as a sign of character.

Before or after each job listing, state your functional title, such as 'salesperson'. Don't try to make your role seem more important by glamorizing your job title.

The work experience section lists the entire related job you've had:

- Name and location of employer
- What the organization does (if not clear from its name)
- Your functional title
- How long you worked
- Your duties and responsibilities
- Your significant achievements or contributions.

For example, developed a new filing system, that reduced paperwork by 50 percent. Include miscellaneous facts that are related to your career objective:

- Command of other languages
- Computer expertise
- Date you can start working

You may put "References available on request" at the end of your resume, but doing so is not necessary. The availability of references is usually assumed. Don't include actual names of references. List your references on a separate paper and take them to your interview.

Activities and Achievements

- Describe any volunteer activities that demonstrate your abilities.
- List any project that requires leadership, organization, teamwork, and cooperation.
- Emphasize career-related activities such as "member of the Student Marketing Association".
- List skills you learned in these activities, and explain how these skills are related to the job you're applying for.
- Include speaking/writing/tutoring experience/participation in athletics/creative projects/ fundraising/community-service activities in academic or professional organizations.
- Non-paid activities may provide evidence of work-related skills.

Resume Deception

One in four resumes has a lie in it. The most frequent forms of deception include the following:

- Claiming nonexistent educational credits.
- Inflating grade-point averages.
- Stretching dates of employment to cover gaps.
- Claiming to be self-employed
- Claiming to have worked for companies that are out of business
- Omitting jobs that might cause embarrassment.

- Exaggerating expertise or experience

Personal Data
Leave personal interest off your resume-unless including them enhances the employer's understanding of why you would be the best candidate for the job.

Experts also recommend excluding salary information, reasons for leaving jobs, names, of previous employer, etc.

Revise your Resume
The keys to writing a successful resume adopt the 'you' attitude and focus on your audience. Think about what the prospective employer's need, and then tailor your resume accordingly.

The 'perfect' resume responds to the reader's needs and preferences and avoids some common faults. The following is a list of common faults.

Too long: The resume is not concise, relevant, and to the point.
To short or sketchy: The resume does not give enough information for a proper evaluation of the application
Hard to Read: A lack of 'write space' and of deceives such as indention and boldfacing makes the reader's job more difficult.
Wordy: Descriptions are verbose with numerous words used for what could be said more simply.
Too Slick: The resume appears to have been written by someone other than the applicant, which raises the question of whether the qualifications have been exaggerated.
Amateurish: The applicant appears to have little understanding of the business world or of a particular industry, as revealed by including the wrong information or presenting it awkwardly.
Poorly Reproduced: The print is faint and difficult to read.
Misspelled and Ungrammatical throughout: Recruiters conclude those candidates who make spelling and grammar mistakes lack good verbal skills, which are important for the job.
Boastful: The overconfident tone makes the reader wonder whether the application's self-evaluation is real.
Dishonest: The applicant claims to have the expertise or work experience or work experience that he or she does not possess.
Gimmicky: The words, structure, decoration, or material used in the resume departs so far from the usual as to make the resume ineffective.
Produce your Traditional Resume
With less than a minute to make a good impression, your resume needs to look sharp and grab a recruiter's interest in the first few lines. A typical recruiter devotes 45 seconds to each resume before tossing it into either the 'maybe' or the 'reject' pile.

Try to keep your resume to one page. If you have a great deal of experience and are applying for a higher-level position, you may need to prepare a somewhat longer resume. The important thing is to have enough space to present a persuasive but accurate portrait of your skills and accomplishments.

Approach for Writing Resume

A. Organizational Approach

1. Use the chronological approach unless you have a weak employment history
2. Use the functional approach if you are new to the job market, want to redirect your career, or have gaps in your employment history.
3. Use the combined approach to maximize the advantages of both chronological and functional resumes, but only when neither of the other two formats will work.

B. Format and Style

1. Use short noun phrases and action verbs, not whole sentences.
2. Use facts, not opinions.
3. Adopt a "you" attitude.
4. Omit personal pronouns (especially I).
5. Omit the date of preparation, desired salary, and work schedule.
6. Use parallelism when listing multiple items.
7. Use positive language and simple words.
8. Use white space, quality paper, and quality printing.

C. Opening

1. Include contact information (name, address).
2. Include a career objective or a skill summary if desired.
3. Make your career objective specific and interesting.
4. Prepare two separate resumes if you can perform two unrelated types of work.
5. In a skill summary, present your strongest qualifications first.

D. Education

1. List the name and location of every postsecondary school you've attended (with dates, and with degrees/certificates obtained).
2. Indicate your college major (and minor).
3. Indicate numerical scale (4.0 or 5.0) if you include your grade-point average.
4. List other experiences (seminars, workshops) with dates and certificates obtained.

E. Work Experience, Skills, and Accomplishments

1. List all relevant work experience (paid employment, volunteer work, internships).
2. List full-time and part-time jobs.
3. Provide name and location of each employer (with dates of employment).
4. List job title and describe responsibilities.
5. Note on-the-job accomplishments and skills; quantify them whenever possible.

F. Activities and Achievements

1. List all relevant offices and leadership positions.
2. List projects you have undertaken.
3. Show abilities such as writing or speaking, and list publications and community services.
4. List other information, such as your proficiency in language other than English.

5. Mention ability to operate special equipment, including technical, computer, and software skills.

G. Personal Data

1. Omit personal details that might be seen as negative or used to discriminate against you.
2. Leave personal interest off unless they are relevant to the position being sought.
3. List a reference only with permission to do so.
4. Balance Common Language with Current Jargon.

Another way to maximize hits on your resume is to use words that potential employers will understand (for example, use keyboard, not input device). Also, use abbreviations sparingly (except for common ones such as BA or MBA.

Submitting Scan-able Resume

When submitting your resume by email, don't attach it as a separate document. Most human resources departments won't accept attached files. Instead, paste your resume into the body of your email message. Whenever you know a reference number or a job ad number, include it in your e-mail subject line.

Proofread Your Resume

Once your resume is complete, update it continuously, as already mentioned, employment is becoming much more flexible these days, so it's likely, you'll want to change employers.
Examine the following resume and write a critique of it.
Naeem Ahmed

Application Letters

Whenever you submit your resume accompany it with a cover, or application letter to let readers know what you're sending, why you're sending it, and how they can benefit from reading it because your application letter is in your own style rather than the choppy, shorthand style of your resume.

Send you resume and application letter together, because each has a unique job to perform. The purpose of your resume is to get employers interested enough to contact you for an interview. You can achieve this purpose by doing the following:

- Learn something about the organization you're applying to and focus on your audience.

- Imagine yourself in the recruiter's situation.
- Show how your background and talents will solve a particular problem or fill a specific need the company has. During your research, find out the name, title of the person to contact.
- So respect your reader's time.
- Include nothing in your cover letter that already appears in your resume.
- Keep your letter straightforward, fact-based, short, upbeat, and professional.

Drafting Cover Letter

- Be Specific.
- Avoid general objectives.
- Be as clear as possible about the kind of opportunity and industry you're looking for.

Make Email Cover Even Shorter

When sending a cover letter by e-mail, make it a bit shorter than traditional application letters. Remember, e-mail readers want the gist very quickly.

Aim for high quality. Carefully check your spelling, mechanics, and grammar. Employers complain about the declining quality of written communication, including cover letters.

Two Types of Job Letters

Solicited application letter is in response to an announced job opening – you'll usually know what qualifications the organization is seeking. You'll also have more competition because hundreds of other job seekers will have seen the listing and may be sending applications too.

Both solicited and unsolicited letters present your qualifications similarly. The main difference is in the opening paragraph. In a solicited letter, you need no special attention-getter because you have been invited to apply. In an unsolicited letter, you need to start by capturing the reader's attention and interest.

Getting Attention

Follow the AIDA approach when writing your application letter: attention, interest, desire, action. Like your resume, your application letter is a form of advertising, so organize it as you would a sales letter: Use the AIDA approach, focus on your audience, emphasize reader benefits and make sure your style project confidence. To sell a potential employer on your merits, you must believe in them and sound as though you do.

An Unsolicited Confident Opening

The opening of an application letter captures attention, gives the reason you're writing, and states which job you're applying for. Open a solicited application letter by mentioning how you found out about the position.

Please consider my application for an entry-level position in technical writing. Your firm advertised a position (on September 23, 2006, in the New Sun). With my two years experience, won't you consider me for that position?

Building Interest and Increasing Desire

The middle section of your application letter presents your strongest selling points in terms of their potential benefit to the organization, thereby building interest in you and creating a desire to interview you.

The middle section of an application letter does the following.

- Summarize your relevant qualifications
- Emphasize your accomplishments
- Suggests desirable personal qualities
- Justifies salary requirements
- Refers to your resume

Show how your strongest skills will benefit the organization. A 20 years old, his/her third year of college, might begin like this: When you need a secretary in your export division who can take shorthand at 125 words a minute and transcribe notes at 70 – in English, Urdu or Portuguese – call me. Describe your understanding of the job's requirements and then show how well your qualifications fit them.

Use a question to demonstrate your understanding of the organization's need.

Can your fast-growing market research division use an interviewer with 1½ years of field survey experience, a B.A in public relations, and a real desire to succeed? If so, please consider me for the position.

Solicited Application Letters

Identify the publication in which the ad ran; then describe what you have to offer.

In the April issue of Travel & Leisure your ad for a cruise-line social director caught my eye. My eight years of experience as a social direction in the travel industry would allow me to serve your new cruise division well.

Spell out a few of your key qualification, and back up your assertions with some convincing evidence of your ability to perform:

Poor: I completed three college courses in business communication, earning an A in each course, and have worked for the past year at Imperial Construction.

Improved: Using the skills gained from three semesters of college training in business communication, I developed a collection system for Imperial Construction that reduced its 2001 bad-debt losses by 3.7 percent, or Rs. 90,000, over those of 2000. Instead of using time worn terminology, the new system's collection letters offered discount incentives for speedy payment.

The middle of your application letter also demonstrates a few significant job-related qualities, such as your diligence or your ability to work hard, learn quickly, handle responsibility, or get along with people:

While attending college full-time, I trained 3 hours a day with the varsity track team. In addition, I worked part-time during the school years and up to 60 hours a week each summer in order to be totally self-supporting while in college. I can offer your organization the same level of effort and perseverance.

Another matter you might bring up in this section is your salary requirement – but only if the organization has asked you to state them.

For the past two years I have been helping a company similar to yours, organizes its database. I would therefore like to receive a salary in the same range over twenty for helping your company set up a more efficient customer database.

Toward the end of this section, refer the reader to your resume by citing a specific fact or general point covered there.

Motivating Action
The final paragraph of your application letter has the two important functions:

(1) To ask the reader for a specific action
(2) To make a reply easy. In almost all cases, the action you request is an interview.
(3) Don't demand it; however, try to sound natural.

After you have reviewed my qualifications, could we discuss the possibility of putting my marketing skills to work for your company? Because I will be on spring break the week of March 8, I would like to arrange a time to talk then. I will call in late February to schedule a convenient time when we would discuss employment opportunities at your company.

Adapting Style and Approach to Culture
The AIDA approach isn't appropriate for job seekers in every culture. If you're applying for a job abroad or want to work with a subsidiary of an organization based in another country, you may need to adjust your tone.

Guideline for Writing Applications Letter

A. Attention (opening paragraph)

1. Open the letter by capturing the reader's attention in a businesslike way.
2. Use a summary, name, source, question, news, personalized, or creative opening.
3. State that you are applying for a job, and identify the position or the type of work you seek.

B. Interest and desire, or evidence of qualifications (next several paragraphs)
1. Present your key qualifications for the job, highlighting what is on your resume: job-related education and training; relevant work experience; and related activities, interests, and qualities.
2. Adopt a mature, businesslike tone.
3. Eliminate boasting and exaggeration.
4. Back up your claims by citing specific achievements in educational, work, and outside settings.
5. Demonstrate your knowledge of the organization by citing its operations or trends in the industry.
6. Link your education, experience, and personal qualities to the job requirements.

7. Relate aspects of your training or work experience to those of the target position.
8. Outline your educational preparation for the job.
9. Provide evidence that you can learn quickly, work hard, handle responsibility, and get along with others.
10. Show that you possess personal qualities and work attitudes that are desirable for job performance.
11. If asked to state salary requirements in your letters, state current salary or a desired salary range, and link it to the benefits of hiring you.
12. Refer the reader to the enclosed resume.

C. Action (Closing Paragraph)

1. Request an interview at the reader's convenience.
2. Request a screening interview with the nearest regional representative, if company headquarters is some distance away.
3. Make it easy to comply with your request by providing your phone number (with area code) and stating the best time to reach you, or mention a time when you will be calling to set up an interview.
4. Express your appreciation for an opportunity to have an interview.
5. Repeat your strongest qualification to reinforce your claim that you can contribute to the organization.

LESSON 36

JOB INQUIRY LETTER AND INTERVIEW

Outline:

- Application Follow-Ups
- The typical Sequence of Interviews
- Types of Interviews

Some organizations require you to fill out and submit an application form before considering you for a position. It is a standardized data sheet that simplifies comparison of applicant's qualifications. To request such a form, send a job-enquiry letter. You can also go to the organization and pick up the form.
Organizations use this form for information about your qualification so try to be accurate when filing it out. Your care in filling out application form suggests to the employer that you will be thorough and careful in your work. When writing a job-Inquiry letter, plan for direct requests: main idea, necessary details, and specific request.

Application Follow-Ups

Even if you've received a letter acknowledging your application and saying that it will be kept on file, don't hesitate to send a follow-up letter three months later to show that you are still interested. Look at the following.

Three months have elapsed since I applied to you for an accountant position, but I want to let you know that I am still very interested in joining your company.

Please keep my application in your active file, and let me know when a position opens for a capable accountant.

Unless you state otherwise, the human resources office is likely to assume that you've already found a job and are no longer interested in the organization. Moreover, requirements change. A follow-up letter can demonstrate that you're sincerely interested in working for the organization, that you're persistent in pursuing your goals, and that you're upgrading your skills to make yourself a better employee. And it might just get you an interview.

If your application letter and resume fail to bring a response within a month or so, follow up with a second letter to keep your file active. This follow-up letter also gives you a chance to update your original application with any recent job-related information.

Since applying to you on May 3 for an executive secretary position, I have completed a course in office management at ABC College. I received straight A's in the course. Now, I am a proficient user of MS Word, including macros and other complex functions.

Please keep my application in your active file, and let me know when you need a skilled executive secretary.

Understanding the Interview Process

It is very important to understand the interviewing process as well as the hiring practices of the big and small organizations. For this purpose study the following.

	Big Companies	Small Companies
Number and type of applicants sought	Consistently hire thousands of new employees each year; have relatively specific hiring criteria, depending on the position; tend to be highly selective.	Hiring requirement fluctuate, often looking for flexibility, versatility; often somewhat more open-minded.
Person or department in charge of recruiting	Handled by human resource or personnel department	In really small companies, the founder/top manager makes all hiring decisions.
General recruiting and interviewing style	Governed by formal policies and procedures; typically involves series of several interviews; approach is generally systematic, well planned, and well financed.	Conducted informally on an as-needed basis without a standard procedure; hiring decision may be made after first interview or may drag on for several months.
Where/how they advertise	Use national and local newspapers, trade journals, campus placement offices, word of mouth, online job banks, company websites.	Rely heavily on word of mouth and local newspapers

Use of employment agencies, search firms	Roughly 60 percent use employment agencies; whereas 40 percent use executive search firms.	Agency use varies widely among small companies; cost may be a factor.
Responsiveness to unsolicited resumes	Received hundreds of unsolicited resumes, which typically get less attention than resumes obtained through departments' own planned recruiting program; most companies will scan unsolicited resumes into a database if they maintain one; best to send resume directly to line manager or potential co-worker in department where you want to work.	Receive relatively few unsolicited resumes, so they pay close attention to them; however, given limited hiring needs, chances are slim that your resume will arrive when company has a corresponding opening.
Reliance on campus recruiting	On campus recruiting programs, relatively small in number	The smaller the company, the less likely it is to recruit in this manner.
Best way for candidate to approach company	Use campus placement office to schedule interviews with companies that recruit on your campus. If company does not recruit on your campus, call the person in charge of college recruiting, explain your situation, and ask for advice on best way to get an interview.	Check with campus placement office; try to make direct personal contact with owner/manager or department head; get names and addresses from chamber of commerce, business directories, send resume and application letter.

Understanding the Interview Process

An employment interview is a formal meeting in which both employer and applicant ask questions and exchange information to learn more about each other.

Dual Purpose

1. The organization's main objective is to find the best person.
2. The applicant's main objective is to find the job best suited to his or her goals and capabilities.

Organizations hiring hundreds of new employees every year take a more systematic approach to the recruiting and interviewing process. Adjust your job search according to the company's size and hiring practices. Start seeking jobs well in advance of the date you want to start work. Begin job search as much as nine months before. During downturns in the economy, early planning is even more crucial.

The Typical Sequence of Interviews

In a typical job search, you can expect to have many interviews before you accept a job offer. A candidate undergoes a rigorous interview process. Most organizations interview an applicant several times before extending a job offer. These are the stages that normally take place in the interview process.

- Screening stage
- Selection stage
- Final stage

Interviews at the screening stages are fairly structured, so applicants are often asked roughly the same questions. Many companies use standardized evaluation sheets to "grade". Technology has transformed the initial, get-to-know-you interview, allowing employers to screen candidates by phone, video interview, or computer.

During the screening stage of interviews, try to differentiate yourself from other candidates. You might face a panel of several interviewers who ask you questions during a single session. By noting how you listen, think, and express yourself, they can decide how likely you are to get along with colleagues.

Best approach during the selection stage is to show interest in the job, relate your skills and experience to the organization's needs, listen attentively, ask insightful questions, and display enthusiasm.

You may be invited back for a final evaluation by a higher-ranking executive who has the authority to make the hiring decision and to decide to your compensation.

Organizations use various types of interviews to discover your potentials .These interview are of the following types.

- Structured Interview
- Open-ended Interview
- Group Interview
- Stress Interview
- Video Interview
- Situational Interview

Structured Interviews

A structured interview is generally used in the screening stage. A Structured Interview is controlled by the interviewer to gather facts. Here the employer controls the interview by asking a series of prepared questions in a set order. Working from a checklist, the interviewer asks candidates each question, staying within an allotted time period. All answers are noted. Although useful in gathering facts, the structured interview is generally regarded as a poor measure of an applicant's personal qualities. Some companies use structured interviews to create uniformity in their hiring process.

Open-ended Interviews
Opening-ended interview is less formal and unstructured. In an open-ended interview, the recruiter encourages the candidate to speak freely. The interviewer poses broad, open-ended question and encourages the applicant to talk freely. It is good for bringing out an applicant's personality and is used to test professional judgment. However, some candidates reveal too much, rambling on about personal or family problems that have nothing to do with their qualifications for employment, their ability to get along with co-workers, or any personal interests that could benefit their performance on the job. So be careful. To strike a delicate balance between being friendly, remember that you're in a business situation.

Group Interviews:
In them recruiters meet several candidates simultaneously. Group interviews help recruiters see how candidate interact. These types of interview are useful for judging interpersonal communication. They tell them how candidates relate to one another. Do they smile? Are they supportive of one another's comments? Do they try to score points at each other's expense?

Stress Interviews
Perhaps the most unnerving types of interview are the stress interview. Stress interviews help recruiters see how you handle yourself under pressure. They see how well a candidate handles stressful situations. During a stress interview, you might be asked pointed questions designed to unsettle you. You might be subjected to long periods of silence, criticisms of your appearance, deliberate interruptions, abrupt or even hostile reactions by the interviewer.

Video Interviews
Video interviews require some special preparation. As employers try to cut travel costs, the video interview is becoming more popular. Companies use videoconferencing systems to screen middle-management candidates or to interview new recruits at universities. Experts recommend that candidates prepare a bit differently for a video interview than for an in-person meeting. Follow are the guidelines.

- Ask for a preliminary phone conversation to establish rapport with the interviewer.
- Arrive early enough to get used to the equipment and setting.
- During the interview, speak clearly but not more slowly than normal.
- Sit straight.
- Look up but not down.
- Try to show some animation, but not too much (since it will appear blurry to the interviewer).

Situational Interviews
In situational interviews candidates must explain how they would handle a specific set of circumstances. "How would you handle this?" Proponents of this approach claim that interview is about the job, not about a candidate's five-year goals, weaknesses or strengths, challenging experiences, or greatest accomplishment. So the situational interview is a hands-on, at-work meeting between an employer, who needs a job done, and a worker who must be fully prepared to do the work.

Regardless of the type of interview you may face, a personal interview is vital because your resume can't show whether you're lively and outgoing or subdued and low key, able to take direction or able to take charge. Each job requires a different mix of personality traits. The interview's task is to find out whether you will be effective on the job.

What Employers Look For

Having the right personality traits for the job is important in today's workplace. A sense of humor tops the list because they believe that people who don't take themselves too seriously are better able to cope with the stress. Employers look for the people who are self-motivated, enthusiastic, not afraid to make decisions, willing to take risks, intelligent, good communicators, and considerate of others.

Current research shows that employees with certain personality traits tend to be more successful at their job. As a result, many employers today seek candidates with a high "emotional intelligence," or EQ (emotional quotient). People with a high EQ generally possess these desirable attributes: self-awareness, good impulse control, persistence, confidence, self-motivation, and empathy, as well as the ability to persuade, articulate a mission, interpret the mood of a group, and communicate with people in terms they understand.

What's your EQ?

- Think clearly and stay focused on the task at hand while under pressure.
- Admit your own mistakes.
- Meeting commitments and keep promises.
- Hold yourself accountable for meeting your goals.
- Seek new ideas for a variety of sources.
- Handle multiple demands and changing priorities.
- Make sacrifices to meet an important organizational goal.
- Cut through red tape and bend outdated rules when necessary.
- Seek fresh perspectives, even if that means trying something totally new.
- Separate from an expectation of success rather than a fear of failure.
- Try to learn how to improve your performance.
- Set challenging goals and take calculated risks to reach them.

When it comes down to it, every job has basic qualifications. Employers first look for two things: evidence that a candidate will fit in with the organization and proof that the person can handle a specific job.

Compatibility

Interviewers try to decide whether a candidate will be compatible with the other people in the organization. Compatibility with the organization is judge on the basis of personal background attitudes, and style. Some interviewers believe that personal background is an indication of how well the candidate will fit in, so they might ask about your interests, hobbies, awareness of world events, and so forth. You can expand your potential along these lines by reading widely, making an effort to meet new people, and participating in discussion groups, seminars, and workshops.

LESSON 37

PROCESS OF PREPARING THE INTERVIEW

Outline:

- Qualifications for the Job
- Preparing for a Job Interview
- Interview Strategies
- Closing of Interview

Qualifications for the Job

Suitability for the specific job is judged on the basis of:

- Academic preparation
- Work experience
- Job-related personality traits

When you're invited to interview for a position, the interviewer may already have some idea of whether you have the right qualifications, based on a review of your resume. But during the interview, you'll be asked to describe your education and previous jobs in more depth so that the interviewer can determine how well your skills match the requirements. In many cases, the interview will be seeking someone with the flexibility to apply diverse skills in several areas. Pre-employment tests attempt to provide objective, quantitative information about a candidate's skills, attitudes, and habits.

Pre-employment Test

Three types of pre-employment tests frequently administered by companies are job skill tests, psychological tests, and drug tests. Job-skill tests, the most common type, are designed to access competency or specific abilities needed to perform a job. Psychological tests usually take the form of questionnaires. These tests can be used to assess overall intellectual ability, attitudes toward work, interests, managerial potential, or personality characteristics – including dependability, commitment, honesty, and motivation. Drug tests are not conducted in our country, however they are conducted abroad.

Preparing for a Job Interview

For a success interview, preparation is mandatory. The best way to prepare for a job interview is to think about the job itself. It's perfectly normal to feel a little anxious before an interview. But good preparation will help you perform well. Be sure to consider any cultural differences when preparing for interviews, and base your approach on what you audience expects. Before the interview, learn about the organization, think ahead about questions, bolster your confidence, polish you interview style, plan to look good, and be ready when you arrive.

Learn About the Organization
Planning your employment search, you probably researched the companies you sent your resume to. But now that you've been invited for an interview, you'll want to fine-tune your research and brush up on the facts you've collection.

Today's companies expect serious candidates to demonstrate an understanding of the company's operations, its market, and its strategic and tactical problems. Learning about the organization and the job enable you to show the interviewer just how you will meet the organization's particular needs.

Planning for a Successful Interview
How can you practice for a job interview? What are some questions that you might be asked, and how should you respond? What questions are you not obligated to answer? These entire questions are important for interviews.

Think Ahead about Questions
Planning ahead for the interview questions will help you handle them more confidently and intelligently. Moreover, you will want to prepare intelligent questions of your own.

Interview Strategies
You may be asked the following questions.
1. What was the toughest decision you ever had to make?
2. Why do you want to work for this organization?
3. Why would we employ you?
4. If we hire you, what changes would you make?
5. Can we offer you a career path?
6. What are your greatest strengths?
7. What are your greatest weaknesses?
8. What didn't you like about previous job you've held?
9. Are there any weaknesses in your education or experience?
10. Where do you want to be five years from now?
11. What are you salary expectations? What are your expectations about salary?
12. What would you do if……
13. What type of position are you interested in?
15. Tell me something about yourself.
16. Do you have any question about the organization or the job?

Bolster Your Confidence

If you feel shy or self-conscious, remember that recruiter is human too. By building your confidence, you'll make a better impression. The best way to counteract any apprehension is to remove its source. You may feel shy or self-conscious because you think you have some flaw that will prompt others to reject you. Bear in mind, however, that you're much more conscious of your limitations than other people are.

Polish your Interview Style
Staging mock interview with a friend is a good way to hone your style. Nonverbal behavior has a significant effect on the interviewer's opinion of you. Confidence helps you walk into an interview, but once you're there, you want to give the interviewer an impression of poise, good manners, and good judgment. Some job seekers hire professional coaches and image consultants to create just the right impression.

Plan to Look Good

To look like a winner

- Dress conservatively
- Be well groomed
- Smile when appropriate

Physical appearance is important because clothing and grooming reveal a candidate's personality and professionalism. When it comes to clothing, the best policy is to dress conservatively. Wear the best-quality businesslike clothes you can, preferably a dark, solid colour.

Interviewing for Success

Be prepared for the interview by

- Taking proof of your accomplishments
- Arriving on time
- Waiting graciously

How you handle a particular interview depends on where you stand in the interview process. If you're being interviewed for the first time, your main objective is to differentiate yourself from the many other candidates who are also being screened.

Of the three stages, the warm-up is the most important, even though it may account for only a small fraction of the time you spend in the interview. Psychologists say that 50 percent of an interviewer's decision is made within the first 30 to 60 seconds, and another 25 percent is made within 15 minutes. If you get off to a bad start, it's extremely difficult to turn the interview around.

The Questions and Answer Stage

Questions and answers will consume the greatest part of the interview. The interviewer will ask you about your qualifications and discuss some of the points mentioned in your resume. You'll also be asking questions of your own.

Dealing with Questions

Tailor your answers to emphasize your strengths.

Listening to the Interviewer

Paying attention to both verbal and nonverbal messages can help you turn the question and answer stage to your advantage

Answering Discriminatory Questions

Employers cannot legally discriminate a candidate on the basis of race, caste, colour, creed or gender.

To Close
Like the opening, the end of the interview is more important than its duration. In the last few minutes, you need to evaluate how well you've done. You also need to correct any misconceptions the interviewer might have.

Concluding Gracefully
Conclude the interview with courtesy and enthusiasm. You can generally tell when the interviewer is trying to conclude the session. He or she may ask whether you have any more questions, sum up the discussion, change position, or indicate with a gesture that the interview is over.

Discussing Salary
Be realistic in your salary expectations and diplomatic in your negotiations. If you do receive an offer during the interview, you'll naturally want to discuss salary. However, let the interviewer raise the subject. If he asked your salary requirements, say that you would expect to receive the standard salary for the job in question.

When to Negotiate
If you don't like the offer, you might try to negotiate, provided you're in a good bargaining position and the organization has the flexibility to accommodate you.

What to Negotiate
Negotiating benefits may be one way to get more value from an employment package. Even if you can't bargain for more money, you may be able to win some concessions on benefits. The value of negotiating can be significant because benefits often cost employer 25 to 45 percent of your salary.

Interview Notes
Keep a written record of your job interviews. If yours is a typical job search, you'll have many interviews before you accept an offer. For that reason, keeping a notebook or binder of interview notes which can help you refresh your memory of each conversation. As soon as the interview ends, jot down the names and titles of the people you have met. Briefly summarize the interviewer's answers to your questions.

Application Follow-Ups
If your application letter and resume fail to bring a response within a month or so, follow up with a second letter to keep your file active. This follow-up letter also gives you a chance to update your original application with any recent job-related information.

A Letter of Acknowledge
Even if you've received a letter acknowledging your application and saying that it will be kept on file, don't hesitate to send a follow-up letter three months later to show that you are still interested.

LESSON 38

ORAL PRESENTATION

Outline:

- Definition and Successful Oral Presentation
- The Three Step Oral Presentation Process
- Audience Analysis
- Writing Oral Presentation
- Types of Oral Presentations

Successful Oral Presentation

In your personal life and in the world of business, you orally communicate with your customers, colleagues, associates, superiors, employees, employers and others. But this communication does not need any special preparation as this is simply a face to face conversation in which you can convey your message very easily and without any hesitation. However, at certain occasion you have to talk to a big audience such as employees to convince them to do hard work and customer to trust you.

Definition

The action of communication in which one speaker is doing most of the sending and a number of listeners are doing most of the receiving is known as oral presentation

Successful Oral Presentation

Oral presentation creates mutual understanding between audience and speaker so you will have to give yourself some time to improve your oral presentation skills. For oral presentations, you need the different steps to be effective in your oral presentation. These steps are the following.

- Stages for preparing oral presentations.
- Types of oral presentations.
- Art of delivering the oral message.
- Delivering the speech.
- Nonverbal delivery.

The Three Step Oral Presentation Process

Regardless of your job or the purpose of your presentation, you will be more effective if you adopt an oral presentation process that follows these three steps:

1. Planning your presentation
2. Writing your presentation
3. Completing your presentation

The content and style of speeches and presentations vary, depending on your purpose.

Planning Oral Presentation

Planning oral presentations is much like planning any other business message: it requires analyzing your purpose and your audience, investigating necessary information, and adapting your message to the occasion and your audience so that you can establish a good relationship.

The four basic purposes for giving presentations are to inform, to persuade, to motivate, and to entertain. Here are sample statements of purpose for business preventative:

To Inform

Here your objective is to clarify, explain a process as a teacher, delivers a lecture to inform. In brief, at the conclusion of your message you hope, your listeners have a better comprehension of an issue, an idea, a process and a procedure that you have talked about.

- To inform the accounting department of the new remote data-access policy.
- To explain to the executive committee the financial ramifications of Omni Group's takeover offer.

To Persuade

Gaining willing acceptance of an idea is objective to persuasion. Note that the key word here is willing. Your goal is that after you have finished your presentation, listeners will accept your proposal. You hope they will do as you ask them to do. To persuade potential customers that our bank offers the best commercial banking services for their needs

To Motivate

To motivate the sales force to increase product sales by 10 percent.

To Entertain

In this type of presentation your purpose is to entertain an audience. Gear the content, organization, and style of your message to your audience's size, background, attitudes, and interests.

Audience Analysis

A. Determine Audience Size and Composition

1. Estimate how many people will attend.
2. Consider whether they have some political, religious, professional, or other affiliation in common.
3. Analyze the mix of men and women, age ranges, socioeconomic and ethnic groups, occupations, and geographic regions represented.

B. Predict the Audience's Probable Reaction

- Analyze why audience members are attending the presentations.
- Determine the audience's general attitude toward the topic i.e. interested, moderately interested, unconcerned, open-minded, or hostile.
- Analyze the mood that people will be in when you speak to them.
- Find out what kind of backup information will impress the audience i.e. technical data, historical information, financial data, demonstrations, samples, and so on.
- Consider whether the audience has any biases that might work against you.
- Anticipate possible objections or questions.

C. Gauge the Audience's Level of Understanding

1. Analyze whether everybody has the same background and experience.
2. Determine what the audience already knows about the subject.
3. Decide what background information the audience will need to understand the subject better.
4. Consider whether the audience is familiar with your vocabulary.
5. Analyze what the audience expects from you.
6. Think about the mix of general concepts and specific details you will need to present.

Writing Oral Presentation

Main Ideas or Content
Brainstorm your ideas first. Then decide which ideas are more relevant and appropriate to your audience and to your objective. Carryout any research that is necessary. Be selective, your first list of ideas may be disorganized. Later you can select those ideas that are workable. Don't think this initial structure will be your final version.

The main ideal is to point out how the audience can benefit from your message. Convince audience that reorganizing the data-processing department will improve customer service and reduce employee turnover.

- Convince audience that we should build a new plant in Lahore to eliminate manufacturing bottlenecks and improve production quality.
- Address audience's concerns regarding a new employee health-care plan by showing how the plan will reduce costs and improve the quality of care.

Limit Your Scope
Effective presentation focuses on audience's need but also tailor messages to the time allowed.

- In one minute, the average speaker can delivery about one paragraph or 125 to 150 words.(7500 to 9000 wph)
- Fit your oral presentation to the time allotted.
- Introduction
- Conclusion
- Time to each point
- 10 minutes presentation / one hour

Choose Your Approach
With a well-defined idea you begin to arrange your message

- Structure a short oral presentation like a letter or a memo.
- Organize language speeches and presentations like formal reports.
- For bad news or persuasive plan, to arouse interest or give a preview.

Long Presentation

Organize longer speeches and presentations like formal reports. If purpose is to entertain, motivate or to inform, then, use direct order and a structure, imposed naturally by the subject e.g. importance, sequence, chronology, spatial orientation, geography or category. If you purpose is to analyze, persuade or collaborate organize your material around conclusions and recommendation or around a logical arguments. Use direct order if the audience is receptive use indirect if you expect resistance. Regardless of the length of your presentation, bear in mind that simplicity of organization is valuable in oral presentation.

Prepare Your Outline

A Carefully prepared outline can be more than just the starting point for composing a speech or presentation – it will help your stay on task. You can use your outline to make sure your message accomplishes its purpose to help your keep your presentation both audience-centered and within the allotted time. If you plan to deliver your presentation from notes rather than from a written text, your outline can also become your final "script". Outline will serve you speaking notes. The heading should be complete sentences or lengthy phrase not one two word. Include visual aid. Use transmittal sentences Outline can help you compose your presentation and stay on task.

Decide on Style

Choose your style to fit the occasion your audience size subject purpose
Decide on an Appropriate Style:
Use a casual style for small groups; use a formal style for large groups and important events.
In both formal and informal presentations, keep things simple. Remember to choose your words carefully. Don't try to impress your audience with obscure and unfamiliar words.

Developing Your Oral Presentation

Developing a major presentation is much like writing a formal report, with one important difference. You need to adjust your technique to an oral communication channel. Her you have the opportunity of interacting with your audience. So, formal presentations differ with formal reports because they have more interaction with the audience. The speaker uses nonverbal cues to express his meaning, has less control of contents and requires greater need to help the audience stay on track. How formal presentations differ from formal reports:

- More interaction with the audience
- Use of nonverbal cues to express meaning
- Less control of contents
- Greater need to help the audience stay on track

Introduction

The introduction must capture attention, inspire confidence, and preview the contents.

Arousing Audience Interest

- To capture attention, connect your topic to your listeners' needs and interests.
- Match the introduction to the tone of your presentation

Body

Limit the body to three or four main points. Help your audience follow your presentation by using clear transitions between sentences and paragraphs, as well as between major sections. Emphasize your transition by repeating key ideas, using gestures, changing your tone of voice, or introducing a visual aid.

Holding Your Audience's Attention

- Relate your subject to your audience's needs
- Anticipate your audience's questions
- Use clear, vivid language
- Explain the relationship between your subject and familiar ideas.

Close

To close should leave a strong and lasting impression.

Restating your main Points

Summarize the main idea, and restart the main points

- Increase the overall level of compensation
- Install a cash bonus program
- Offer a variety of stock-based incentives
- Improve our health insurance and pension benefits

Describing the Next Steps

- Be certain that everyone agrees on the outcome and understands what should happen next.
- Make your final words memorable
- Completing oral presentation
- Evaluate the content of your message

Edit for clarity, besides mastering the art of delivery, prepare to speak, overcome anxiety and handle questions with responsively.

Types of Oral Presentations

The effectiveness of your presentation largely depends on how it is delivered. Following are four main delivery methods, you can choose according to need and situation.

1. Extemporaneous

This method of delivery is very carefully planned and practiced. In it, the speaker makes a presentation with the help of an outline, note cards, or visual aid. It is very popular and effective method of delivering a speech. In this way the speaker can glance at his notes, keep eye contact and speak in a natural, conversational tone.

2. Reading

In this method the whole presentation is read aloud. It helps a speaker when the presentation has technical or complex topic. If you choose to read your speech, practice enough so that you can still have eye contact with your audience, otherwise, your speech may become boring.

For reading, some speakers use a page style similar to a TV script, leaving a left margin of about one-third of the page. In that wide margin is pronunciation aids or suggestions as to where to look in an audience.

3. Memorization

Few speakers today memorize complete speeches. However, it can be useful for short speeches. In case of a long speech, often the first few words of a statement can be memorized. This technique may sound like a robot. Besides, forgetting a single line may cause disaster.

4. Impromptu

It means a speech made without any preparation or made on the spur of the moment. In so many situations you are asked to make a speech or offer your comments, when you're asked to speak "off the cuff", take a moment or two to think through what you're going to say. Avoid the temptation to beat about the bush.

You may feel a bit of stage fright at the time of delivering the speech. In addition to the stages mentioned above, you should focus on the following aspects to decrease stage fright.

ORAL PRESENTATION

- Art of Delivery
- Preparation for Speaking

Completing Oral Presentation

Evaluate the content of your presentation, for clarity and conciseness, develop visual aid and coordinate them with your delivery. Besides four areas it also includes mastering the art of delivery preparing to speak, overcoming anxiety and handling question responsively.

Extemporaneous

This method of delivery is very carefully planned and practiced. In it, the speaker makes a presentation with the help of an outline, note cards, or visual aids. It is very popular and effective method of delivering a speech. In this way the speaker can glance at his notes, keep eye contact and speak in a natural, conversational tone. In this method, the whole presentation is read aloud. It helps a speaker when the presentation has technical or complex topic. If you choose to read your speech, practice enough so that you can still have eye contact with your audience, otherwise, your speech may become boring.

Memorization

Few speakers today memorize complete speeches. However, it can be useful for short speeches. In case of a long speech, often the first few words of a statement can be memorized. This technique may sound like a robot. Besides, forgetting a single line may cause disaster.

Impromptu

It means a speech made without any preparation or made on the spur of the moment. In so many situations you are asked to make a speech or offer your comments, when you're asked to speak "off the cuff", take a moment or two to think about what you're going to say. Avoid the temptation to beat about the bush.

Preparing to Speak

Knowing your material and practicing your delivery can build your confidence. Make sure you know the location and have everything you need (projector, microphone chalkboard etc.)

If you are addressing audience that doesn't speak your language consider using an interpreter

Important aspects to take into account are cultural differences in appearance, mannerism or customs.

Overcoming Anxiety

If you are nervous about facing audience and experience stage fright, prepare more material, rehearse and think positively.

Show Confidence
You will be nervous at the beginning of your presentation. Don't worry – most people are nervous. Try not to speak too fast during the first couple of minutes. This is the time you establish your rapport with the audience. Remember your first impressions are very important. You may find it helpful to memorize your introduction. Move during the speech. Some movements hold audience attention. If you're seated, shift position in your chair or gesture a bit more with your arms.

Body Language
Stand rather than sit when you are delivering your presentation and try to be aware of any repetitive hand gestures or awkward mannerisms that might irritate your audience.

Voice Quality
You must be clearly audible at all times – don't let your voice drop at the end of sentences. If you vary your intonation, your voice will be more interesting to listen to and you will be able to make your points more effectively.

Visual aids
Use your visual aids confidently, making sure you allows your audience time to absorb information from flipcharts and transparencies.

Delivery
Audience Reaction
Be ready to deal with any hostile questions. Polite, diplomatic answers are a good disarming tactic, but if you should find yourself 'under fire', suggest that the audience keeps any further questions until the end of the presentation and continue with your next point.

Language

Simplicity: use short words and sentences that you are comfortable with. There is no benefit in using difficult language.

Clarity: Active verbs and concrete words are much clearer and easier to understand than passive verbs and abstract concepts. Avoid jargon unless you are sure all your audience will understand it.

Signaling: Indicate when you've complete one point or section in your presentation and are moving on the text. Give your audience clear signals as to the direction your presentation is taking.

Handling Question Responsively
- Question and answer period is very important.
- Give chance to obtain impotent information
- To emphasize your main idea and supporting points
- Treat hostile question as legitimate request for information
- Maintain professionalism to improve your credibility

- Focus on the questioner using body language to emphasize the fact that you are listening to him.
- Keep your answer short and to the point.
- Maintain control by stating some ground rules in the beginning of the question and answer session.
- Respond unemotionally
- Motivate questioning.
- Conclude your presentation finish on time

Presentation on a Cell Phone

1 Welcome everyone
2 Mention handouts /graphics

A Model Presentation (continued from previous page)

'Good afternoon, everybody, I'd like to thank you all for being here'.

'My purpose today is to tell you about our corporate strategy for the next decade and more specifically to bring keep up to date with our plans for Quetta.'

To start with, I'd like to describe briefly our current marketing policy in the Punjab. Then I'll illustrate some of the problems we're having over market share. After that I'll quickly outline the opportunities we see for further progress in the 21st century. Finally I'll quickly sum up before concluding with some recommendations.

Please feel free to interrupt me if you have any questions at any time.

Now I'd like to draw your attention to chart B showing our sales revenue and pre-tax profits over the last ten years. You will notice that although turnover has risen, our profits have not increased at the same rate.

I've talked about our current position in the Punjab and I've pointed out some of the problems we are facing. Well, what options are open to us now? Where do we go from here?

'As I have already indicated I think our first priority must be to build on the excellent results we have achieved in certain markets in Sindh. I'm referring of course, to Karachi and Hyderabad. Let me quickly expand on those successes before we move on.

'We should not forget the Peshawar market. Admittedly our results there have been poor so far, but there are signs the market is changing and we can learn a lot from our mistakes. On balance, though, I think we stand to gain most from concentrating on southern areas and I strongly recommend we put all our efforts into further expansion in these areas.

In conclusion, may I thank you all for being such an attentive and responsive audience. Thank you also for your pertinent questions. Are there any final questions?

Language Practice

Signaling

Study these examples of 'signaling devices' from listening. Then write suitable headings for the groups of phrases that follow to summarize what each is signaling. As a guide to complete the exercise, a heading for group 1 has been given.
Before doing so, I would like you to look at some interesting statistics. What do these world statistics to us?
Let me give you an example that I think really brings out graphically what I mean. Now for some trends in the market
I'll start with memory models.

Negotiation Skills
Negotiation is a process in which two or more parties try to resolve differences, solve problems and reach agreement. Good negotiation meets at as many interests as possible with an agreement that is durable.

Successful Negotiators
Collaborate with another party (or parties) to reach a mutually beneficial agreement.
Use empathy appropriately because they can see the situation from others' points of view. Put them in the other person's position to show them that they fully understand their needs and concerns.

Respond with Honesty.
Positive regard for yourself and the others involved will communicate your warmth and acceptance of them. Negotiators who have respect for themselves are also likely to show respect for others.
Good negotiator's verbal and nonverbal communication is open, confident and oriented to the needs and concerns of both parties.

Negotiation Strategies
Although negotiation has a specific purpose – to reach agreement – it does not always achieve this aim.
Before attempting to negotiate, consider the differences between the following four strategies.
1. Win-win strategy
2. Win-lose strategy
3. Lose-win strategy
4. Lose-Lose strategy

Win-Win Strategy
In this strategy, both parties are satisfied with the settlement negotiated, it aims to meet the needs of both parties, not to win position or gain victories on one party's expense, result is hard to achieve, good verbal and nonverbal communication and careful listening help to achieve it. It succeeds only if both parties concentrate on problem solving and effective communication strategies well. Each party is then more likely to be committed to the outcome. Even as you reach a win-win conclusion that suits both parties, circumstances can change. After successfully negotiating a difficult or important issue, take the time to follow up to check that the other party also considers that the result is win-win.

Win-Lose Strategy

Result in the party who initiates the conflict being satisfied and the other dissatisfied. This strategy focuses on the initiator's problem to the exclusion of the other's. The initiator wins. Many people who adopt this strategy use a confusing presentation or a dominating style of speech and body movement. This invites the other side to be just as difficult, or to withdraw from conflict.

Lose-Win Strategy

This is a situation in which the initiator is dissatisfied and the other is satisfied. The loosing party usually makes too many concessions. In an extreme case, the win-lose style of negotiation and the lose-win style of negotiation can lead to a deadlock followed by the loose-loose result. Deadlocks can occur when neither party is satisfied by the negotiations.

Lose-Lose Strategies

Lose-lose strategies result from a situation in which the objectives of both parties are too rigid, or both parties are unable to collaborate, or unaware of the opportunity to do so. Both parties walk away from the negotiation dissatisfied. When agreement cannot be reached, a third party may mediate to help them reach a solution, or arbitrate and make the decision on behalf of both the parties. In any negotiation, be aware of your own and the other person's objectives and expectations. Keep your objectives reasonable and try to avoid the loose-loose outcome.

Personal Styles in Negotiation

Whenever people come together to negotiate, they bring their own personal styles, and these affect the way they communicate and handle the conflict.

Self-denying;

People difficult to negotiate, they are introverted and reticent with information (feedback), hide their feelings.

Self-protecting:

People use divisionary tactics, discussing other people or sides tracking to other issues hide their true feelings.

Self-exposing:,

People wish to be centre of attention, demand this attention by speaking loudly, and speak over other use attention-seeking body movement or by ignoring feedback and other's view.

Self-bargaining:

People show feeling if you show yours, wait until you lead them in negotiation open up when others initiate the process.

Self-actualizing:

People ideal negotiators, want information and feedback from others, present information constructively to aid the negotiation process, achieve goal without conflict (barriers).

Psychological Barriers

When you are negotiating, psychological barriers may raise. It may be produced by you or the other party. Be on the alert for signs of these barriers. 'Listen' for their effects and use your communication skills to ease or lower them.

Psychological Barriers to Negotiation may include:

- Fear of being taken for a ride
- Wanting to be liked
- Guilt about wanting to be assertive
- Wanting to be 'nice'
- Feeling intimidated by so-called powerful people
- Fear of conflict or confrontation
- Fear of loosing face with the boss or colleagues
- Lack of self-confidence
- Power

Power in Negotiation

When an organization delegates people to get the job done, it gives them power to act. Power may be used to influence and, in some cases, to control people. It can also be used to bring about change. Power can be exerted over one person or a group by another person or group. Power used well achieves good communication and results. Each person has and can enjoy power. Observe how you use power. If you use it properly, you will make an impact on workplace decisions and actions. Abuse or misuse it and people will mistrust you. Power is a useful tool in the negotiation process; however, if you misuse it or refuse to use it correctly, the likely result is tension and conflict.

Five Types of Workplace Power

Legitimate Power bases on a person's position or role in an organization, their authority and control over resources give them power that is acknowledged.

Expertise Power people with more skill and strength than others have to them; their colleagues defer to them.

Reward Power is exerted by someone who has control over resource desire by others. Such as person can influence and manipulate behavior.

Coercive Power is exerted by those who use their authority or any force, emotional or physical, against the interest of the other party.

Consultative Power is exerted by someone who seeks information, considers other's advice and makes plans with others.

They operate in any workplace, either singly or in combination. Perception of what power is and how it should be used varies between people and organizations. Acknowledgement of, and deference to, power depends on others' perception.

LESSON 41

NEGOTIATION AND LISTENING

Outline:

- Five-Step Approach to Negotiation
- Plan for Negotiation
- Gathering Useful Information
- Problem Solving By Negotiating
- Negotiating Methods
- Skills in Conflict Resolution and Negotiation
- What is Listening?
- Purpose of Listening
- A Variety of Listening Skills
- Faults in Listening
- Ways to Improve Your Listening

The Use of Power

A person, who has power, particularly over the allocation and use of resources, must be willing and able to use that power to make decisions and take action. If they refuse, or are unable to do this, conflict will arise because processes that are essential to the running of the workplace do not take place. Don't depend solely on your workplace power source or your personal power, develop strategies that achieve results. Use your communication skills to present your ideas without producing conflict.

Five-Step Approach to Negotiation

Negotiating is a process in which two or more people (or parties) with common or conflict interests decide on a specific issue or business transaction. This may at times produce win-win, win-lose-lose-win or lose-lose outcome. The five-step approach is more suited to a situation where the issue is more important than the relationship: for example, it is appropriate for purchasing a car but not for resolving crises with your partner. These five stages of the negotiation process shows in figure 8.4.

Plan for Negotiation

Careful and thoughtful planning is essential before you negotiate. First, create a set of clear objectives to steer you towards the results you want. Prepared objectives allow you to progress through the five stages of negotiation. Think about how your objective can be achieved.

Gather Information that Helps you:

- Give the other party relevant information
- Make sure that this information is accurate and objective
- Develop and maintain good relationships with the other party
- Consider the other party's point of view.
- Organize all the relevant information as this provides the ideal starting-point for your discussion. Plan your approach and the sequence of issues you wish to raise.

- Assess the other party's objectives.
- Identify links and common ground. Anticipate the party's probable response to each of your issues, and prepare answers.

Discuss

Set the communication climate by exchanging greetings; it aims to establish trust and confidence. By being sociable you are able to establish a tension-free atmosphere. Review proceedings leading up to the meeting. Iron out any differences in 'facts' before you start to negotiate. Confirm both parties' broad objectives and feelings. Listen carefully. Identify areas of agreement and try to establish some rapport with the other party. Your intention is to establish common ground before moving into areas of difference.

Propose

Define the issues and specify in detail what you wish to resolve. Link issues to the other party's objectives and focus on interests rather than position. Detail with one issue at a time. Try to keep to the point and avoid generalizing. Paraphrase their message to check that you understand it correctly. Summarize the content, ideas and feelings being communicated.

Negotiate the Issue

Start by asking for what you want, but accept that your goals may have to be modified or compromised. Communicate your intention with the other party to produce a solution that is satisfactory to both. Remember the phrase: 'if… then….' separates the people from the issue. Try to generate as many options as possible – this gives both parties room to negotiate a solution. Throughout the discussion keep summarizing the points to confirm understanding, particularly when complex issues are involved. Take the time to confirm what you have negotiated so far. Unless agreement is fully understood by both parties, the settlement may not last.

Confirm

Once the agreement is concluded, confirm that each party is committed to it. The five-step approach to negotiation will help you negotiate more effectively. Good negotiation strategies enable you to solve the problem in such a way that both parties win. Clearly state your needs and goals as you negotiate and listen to those expressed by the other party. Allow each party to evaluate the other's needs and goals and the areas of common interest. People who negotiate honestly treat one another as equals. Another approach to negotiating is principled bargaining. 1. It should be a wise agreement, if possible. 2. It should be efficient.

Principled Bargaining

Fisher and Ury (1991) developed a concept known as principled bargaining. This works well when a group of stakeholders have a common interest. An acknowledgement to work together for mutual outcomes is the essence of the principled bargaining approach: It acknowledges the Australian ethic of a 'fair go'. Everyone is treated equitably. In Fisher and Ury's view, each negotiated agreement should satisfy the following three criteria. 1. It should a wise agreement, if possible. 2 It should be efficient 3 It should improve, or at least not damage, relationship. The principled negotiation method takes time, energy and commitment.

- Their method has the four elements
- People to separate the people from the problem

- Interest to focus on interest rather than the position
- Option to generate a range of possibilities before choosing one
- Criteria to ensure that results are based on some objective standard

To implement the principled negotiation method you need to:

- State your case clearly and persuasively
- Organize your facts well.
- Be aware of the timing and speed of the talks.
- Assess others' needs properly
- Be sensitive to those needs.
- Not be unduly worried by conflict.
- Be committed to a win-win philosophy.
- Have patience.
- Sometime, you settle less than your goal.

BATNA stands for the 'best alternative to a negotiated agreement.' If the person you are negotiating with is your manager or supervisor you may have WATNA.
WATNA stand for 'worst alternative to a negotiated agreement. If the other person has the legitimate power, or if you want to the relationship to continue as it is, you may have to settle for less than your preferred outcome. You might have to modify your goal to maintain the relationship, especially if the other person is your boss. Sometimes your goal may be unrealistic and you have to modify it to make it more realistic. You may even decide not to negotiate if you feel that this will not achieve something better.

By identifying the BATNA and WATNA, you are exploring the alternatives available if negotiation is not possible. Rather than accept an unsatisfactory outcome you can say no to negotiation.

Problem Solving by Negotiating…….
Problem solving by negotiation is dealt with by a team or group of people who already have a working relationship and want to solve a work-related problem. The six-step approach to problem solving by negotiation will succeed only if the relationship is important to both parties and if they have a genuine desire to solve the problem rather than to win (see This 8.4)

Negotiating Methods…….
In the negotiating process, the parties involved may choose one of five different negotiation methods. A skillful negotiator is able to identify them and recognize which one is being used by the other person.

1. Compromise
2. Collaboration
3. Competition
4. Accommodation
5. Withdrawal or avoidance

Compromise
Compromise means to settle differences through concessions made by one or both parties. A compromise usually produces win-win or win-lose results. When the settlement meets the needs and goals of both parties (win-win), both are satisfied with the outcome. When the solution meets the needs and goals of only one party (win-lose), the other party is dissatisfied with the outcome (see figure 8.5).

Collaboration
Collaboration involves people cooperating to produce a solution satisfactory to both parties (win-win). It improves personal relationships and allows the exploration of new ideas. Permanent solutions and commitment to them can be achieved this way. On the other hand, it is time-consuming and demands well negotiating skills on each side.

Competition
Competition often leads to one party gaining advantage over the other, if it can negotiate at the expense of the other's needs. Since the competitive approach usually produces a win-lose result, it is bad for personal relationships. The solution is likely to be temporary as there is no commitment from the losing party, so the problem will occur again. It also leaves the losing side in a difficult situation.

Accommodation
Accommodation means that only one party is willing to oblige or adapt to meet the needs of the other. It produces a win-lose outcome. However, this method is useful for negotiating on minor matters. The result can go one way or the other. It is suitable if the accommodating party does not really care about the loss. However, the negotiating parties may not bother to look for creative solutions. With this negotiation method, points of view are easily swayed.

Withdrawal or Avoidance

Withdrawal (avoidance) is a negotiation method that makes both parties loose, because one party retracts their point of view or backs away from the situation. Such dissatisfaction may lead to conflict in the future.

The choices you make are influenced by the context in which you negotiate and by your range of personal communication and negotiation skills.

Skills in Conflict Resolution and Negotiation
In your organization several negotiating styles and strategies are likely to be demonstrated. Some achieve acceptable responses, others hinder negotiation and conflict resolution. Some solutions may be simple and practical. Others may be complex and difficult and may even require attitude changes and commitment from each party.

Negotiation involves a range of positions by both parties. You might change the other party's position, change your own position, or can reach at a compromise. Clearly define your own objectives as well as the other party's. This places you in a better position to understand what is happening.

Figure 8.5 shows how each negotiation method affects relationships and the achievement of goals. It also matches each method with the most likely conflict resolution strategy.

Once you understand them all you are in a position to decide which one is suited to a situation and your intended result.

Negotiation based on empathy for the other party establishes a climate where both parties can communicate easily. By contrast, confrontation leads to disputes and extreme positions. Check the full list of items to be negotiated.

Focus on the problem, not individual personalities. Ask questions to check that you understand the other side's expectation and position. Avoid aggression. Use your assertive communication skills. Listen carefully to the other party.

Establish the criteria that will make a realistic solution acceptable to both parties. This may involve several options. Successful negotiation develops these options into a plan of action.

What is Listening?

Listening is an active process of receiving aural stimulus. Listening is an active rather than a passive process. Listening does not just happen we must make it happen. A great time is spent on listening and talking. Listening serve two purposes in its process.

1. As the sender of the message, listening to your receiver tells you how the other person has interpreted your message.
2. As the receiver of a message listening to the other person allows you to understand their meaning.

Listening

- Difference between hearing and listening
- Hearing is a physical process. The ear receives stimuli or sensations and transmits them to brain.
- Listening refers to the interpretive process that takes place when we hear something. When we listen, tore ,classify and label information
- Listening is the most important of all the communication skills. Upon awakening we listen to people, friends around us. Wherever we go, we listen to something. We spend most of our time engaged in listening. Listening occupies more time than any other communication.

Purpose of Listening

Listening serves a number of important purposes. It enables the listener to check on the accuracy of understanding what the speaker said. Besides, the listener expresses acceptance of speaker's feelings. Most important of all, listening provides a chance to the speaker to explore his or her feelings and thoughts further.

A variety of listening skills can be learned and developed with practice. The following skills are worth practicing

- Attending listening
- Encouraging listening
- Pause
- Reflecting listening
- Active listening

Attending Listening
In attending listening you focus on speaker by giving them your physical attention you use whole body, eye contact posture personal space in short complete feedback.

Encouraging Listening
It invites speaker to say more without pressuring them to disclose their feelings or though it is their choice. Minimal and brief responses ,brief spoken responses let speaker know you are listening and encourage them to talk.

Pause
Brief pause allows speaker time to consider reflect and decide whether to continue speaking. Allow silence.
Use encouraging questions (5ws)

Reflecting Listening
Restate the speakers feeling and contents it shows the other person you understand.
Active Listening
An active listener has empathy with the speaker: that shows that you understand the issue from other person' point of view. Feedback is the connecting continuing or completing link.
Faults in Listening
Remember that every sound or voice that we receive cannot be termed as listening. There are certain occasions when you receive some certain sound stimulus but you do not understand it because your attention is towards something else. In such cases, we say that you heard something but you did not listen to anything. Moreover there are certain other factors which bar our proper listening. An average person remembers only half of what is said during a 10-minute conversation and forgets half of that within 48 hours. Studies agree that listening efficiency is no better than 28 to 30 percent. Following are the causes of listening pit falls:
Prejudice
All of us have personal opinions, attitudes, or beliefs about certain things. When we listen to a speaker who is contrary to our ideas, we cannot maintain attention. As a result we do not listen to whatever he says. We should give a chance to the speaker to finish his message. Later, we can agree or disagree.
Distraction
Not only the verbal messages but also the nonverbal cues of the speaker affect our listening. Actually, the entire physical environment affects listening. Among the negative factors are noisy fans, poor light, distracting background music, bang of a horn, extreme weather. Among the speaker's nonverbal cues are his clothes, his voice quality, his wearing of a certain perfume, reek of sweat, excessive gestures, etc.

Semantic Barrier
Meaning of words also create problem in listening, as meaning of words vary from person to person influenced by feelings, attitudes, prejudices and biases. Sometimes the way a speaker utters a word annoys us.

Preshrinking

The average thinking capacity of a person is up to 800 words per minute while the average speaker utters 80 to 160 words per minute. This difference sometimes makes listeners deviate from the speaker's words and they shift to something else. On the other hand people fill this gap by premature evaluation of what they are listening to. They arrive at the concluding thought quickly. This premature evaluation poses us our effective listening is impaired.

- Boredom or lack of interest
- Listener's dislike of speaker
- Desire to change rather than accept the speaker
- Tendency to make early conclusion
- Intrusion of listeners' own values or attitude
- Listener's opinion that the speaker lacks credibility Ways to improve listening

Ways to Improve Listening

(1) Be prepared. By knowing the speaker and the topic beforehand you can prepare yourself for better understanding of the topic.

(2) Show positive attitude. Don't make premature assumptions before listening to a certain speaker. Always be ready to learn new ideas or facts that you are not aware of.

(3) Listen to learn, not to refute. While listening, try to understand the points. Don't let them mix up with your biases before you have listened and evaluated the message.

(4) Concentrate. Pay attention to what is said. You know that everything that is said has a special meaning in a certain context. Out of the context it may be misunderstood.

(5) Jot down notes. If possible, take down main ideas. These notes will help you a lot later on.

LESSON 42

THESIS WRITING AND PRESENTATION

Outline:

- Thinking about it Stage
- Preparing the Proposal
- What is a Proposal?
- Include a Title on your Proposal
- What is Research?
- Different Fields of Research

While writing and presenting your Thesis or Dissertation, you go through many stages. These stages are very important. Anyone in this process must make sure that no stage is left out. These stages are the following.

- Thinking About it
- Preparing the Proposal
- Conducting the Research
- Writing the Research Paper
- Define research
- Discuss Basic Elements of a Research Paper
- Sharing the Research Outcomes with Others
- Revising the Research Paper

Thinking about it

The "thinking about it stage" is when you are finally faced with the reality of completing your degree. Usually the early phases of a graduate program proceed in clear and very structured ways. The beginning phases of a graduate program proceed in the same manner as an undergraduate degree program. There are clear requirements and expectations, and the graduate student moves along, step by step, getting ever closer to the completion of the program. One day, however, the clear structure begins to diminish and now you're approaching the thesis/dissertation stage. This is a new and different time. These next steps are more and more defined by you and not by your adviser, the program, or the department.

Be Inclusive with Your Thinking

Don't try to eliminate ideas too quickly. Build on your ideas and see how many different research projects you can identify. Give yourself the luxury of being expansive in your thinking at this stage -- you won't be able to do this later on. Try and be creative.

Write Down Your Ideas

This will allow you to revisit an idea later on or, you can modify and change an idea. If you don't write your ideas they tend to be in a continual state of change and you will probably have the feeling that you're not going anywhere. What a great feeling it is to be able to sit down and scan the many ideas you have been thinking about, if they're written down.

Try not to be Overly Influenced at this Time by What you Feel Others Expect from You

You shouldn't be influenced by your colleagues, your profession, your academic department, etc. You have a much better chance of selecting a topic that will be really of interest to you if it is your topic. This will be one of the few opportunities you may have in your professional life to focus in on a research topic that is really of your own choosing.

Don't be Overambitious

Don't begin your thinking by assuming that your research will draw international attention to you! Instead, be realistic in setting your goal. Make sure your expectations are tempered by the realization that you are fulfilling an academic requirement,

Be Realistic about the Time of the Research Project

Instead, be realistic in setting your goal. Make sure your expectations are tempered by the realization that you are fulfilling an academic requirement, and the idea that first and foremost occurred to you is very important. The whole research project should be a learning experience for you. If you can keep these ideas in mind while you're thinking through your research you stand an excellent chance of having your research project turn out well. The best time to get the most from a leave of absence is during the fourth stage - the writing stage. This is the time when you really need to be thinking well. To be able to work at your writing in large blocks of time without interruptions is something really important.

It can be most helpful at this early stage to try a very small preliminary research study to test out some of your ideas to help you gain further confidence in what you'd like to do. The study can be as simple as conducting half a dozen informal interviews with no attempt to document what is said. The key is that it will give you a chance to get closer to your research and to test out whether or not you really are interested in the topic.

And, you can do it before you have committed yourself to doing something you may not like. Take your time and try it first.

Preparing the Proposal

Assuming you've done a good job of "thinking about" your research project, you're ready to prepare the proposal actually. A word of caution - those students who tend to have a problem in coming up with a viable proposal often are the ones that have tried to rush through the "thinking about it" part and move too quickly to trying to write the proposal.

Read through Someone else's Research Proposal

Very often a real stumbling block is that we don't have an image in our mind of what the finished research proposal should look like. How has the other proposal been organized? What are the headings that have been used? Does the other proposal seem clear? Does it seem to suggest that the writer knows the subject area? Can I model my proposal after one of these that I've seen? If you can't readily find a proposal or two to look at, ask your adviser to see some.

Make sure your proposal has a comprehensive review of the literature included. Now this idea, at first thought, may not seem to make sense. Many students may tell me that "This is only the proposal. I'll do a complete literature search for the dissertation. I don't want to waste the time now." But, this is the time to do it. The rationale behind the literature review consists of an argument with two lines of analysis: 1) this research is needed, and 2) the methodology I have chosen is most appropriate for the question that is being asked. Now, why would you want to wait? Now is the time to get informed and to learn from others who have preceded you! If you wait until you are writing the dissertation it is too late. You've got to do it same time so you might as well get on with it and do it now. Besides, you will probably want to add to the literature review when you're writing the final dissertation

What is a Proposal Anyway?
A good proposal should consist of the first three chapters of the dissertation. It should begin with a statement of the problem/background information (typically Chapter I of the dissertation), then move on to a review of the literature (Chapter 2), and conclude with a defining of the research methodology (Chapter 3).

Of course, it should be written in a future tense since it is a proposal. To turn a good proposal into the first three chapters of the dissertation consists of changing the tense from future tense to past tense. For example;
"This is what I would like to do" to "This is what I did"

And you also make any changes based on the way you actually carried out the research when compared to how you proposed to do it. Often the intentions we state in our proposal turn out different in reality and we then have to make appropriate editorial changes to move it from proposal to dissertation

Focus your Research very Specifically
Don't try to have your research cover too broad an area. Now you may think that this will distort what you want to do. This may be the case, but you will be able to do the project if it is narrowly defined. Usually a broadly defined project is not do-able. Often the researcher finds that what he/she originally thought to be a good research project turns out to really be a group of research projects. Do one project for your dissertation and save the other projects for later in your career. Don't try to solve all of the problems in this one research project.

Include a Title on your Proposal
How often the title is left for the end of the student's writing and then somehow forgotten when the proposal is prepared for the committee. A good proposal has a good title and it is the first thing to help the reader begins to understand the nature of your work. Use it wisely! Work on your title early in the process and revisit it often. It's easy for a reader to identify those proposals where the title has been focused upon by the student.

- Preparing a topic understand the distinction between the subject and a topic that can help you to plan your research paper effectively.
- Within a broader research subject decide about the topic that is more focused and worth an investigation.
- Consider your subject or topic and answer the questions who, what, when, where, why, and how.

- Draw a short and possible list of topics and settle for the one that interests you and is worth investigating.
- Explore your own understanding of the topic, as there's always a temptation to select a topic before a thorough ground work, resist the temptation.
- Be sure that the topic meets the requirements of your research assignment, audience's needs, and expectations
- Avoid dead end topics those unsuitable for your interest or resources.
- Avoid scattered, superficial research topics.
- Avoid topics that are too beaten and narrow and has nothing new to offer.
- Pick a topic that shows your individuality, ability and interests.
- Continue refining and narrowing it to make it significantly specific
- Ensure that there: are sufficient resources available on your selected topic because without a worthwhile literature
- Good title means: having the most important words appear towards the beginning of your title.

What is Research?

The word research is used in different field in different senses. If you are a beginner researcher, you are facing the same problem whether you are preparing a small project, an MBA dissertation or PhD thesis. You need to select a topic, identify the objectives of your study plan and design a suitable methodology. Besides, devise a research instrument, negotiate access to institutions, material and people, collect, analysis, present information and finally, provides a well-written repot or dissertation.

We all learn how to do research by actually doing it but a great deal of time can be wasted and goodwill dissipated by inadequate preparation. But before we discuss further it better to define the term research.

Different people define it differently. For example;

- A formal document
- Knowing a subject thoroughly
- Expression of ones undertaking About the topic
- Result of one's intellectual curiosity
- Analysis and syntheses of different resources
- Reasonable bias free conclusion
- Howard and Sharp (1983) "Seeking through methodical processes to add to one's own body of knowing and hopefully, to that of others, by discovery of non-trivial facts and insight."
- Drew (1980) "Research is conducted to solve problems and expand knowledge. Research is a systematic way of asking questions, a systematic method of enquiry."

We find the word research being used in two senses.

1. The outcome of research is the establishment, publicizing or utilization of something that somebody-not the researcher or the person commissioning it already knows.
2. The outcome of knowledge that nobody had before.

The word research is used in different fields in one or other of these senses and in some fields in both senses

Fiction

For many novelists, It is essential to prepare for their writing by researching the background in which they wish to set their narrative for accuracy of description, sensitivity to atmosphere, history of the period in which their fiction takes place and authenticity of the language. The final criterion for them is the authenticity and artistic conviction of the final product in their reader's eyes. Research in this sense may take many forms, and involve considerable expense in terms of effort, time, and money: but the originality of the novel does not lie in the research but in the artistic creation for which it provides a background.

Journalism

For journalist, especially in investigative journalism, long periods of time are spent researching their stories to uncover facts and secrets which their editorial policy judges to be in the public interest, and in cross-checking what they are told or discovered to establish its truth. This is not usually new truth, but information otherwise not public or deliberately withheld by another person. For them, the final criterion of truth may be bound up with legalities: the law of libel and slander, or the Official Secret Act.

Police Work

For the police, there is an obvious parallel between preparing case against a suspect by detective work and research in this first sense: the criminal they seek has a secret which the police are bound to uncover. Here again the criterion of validity of the research is circumscribed by the law: laws of evidence, police procedure, protection of the rights of the innocent, the criminal and the victim. However, it is interesting that in this connection the language prefers the term 'detection' or 'investigation' to research.

Business and Commerce

In the commercial world, much money is invested in product development and even sponsorship of basic research, and here one is referring to the second sense as described above. However, research is also conducted into the people who will buy the products: market research. Market research is used to establish what can be sold who will buy it, how a product can be packaged, advertised priced to make it commercially attractive and linked to advertising campaigns, even to create market – to persuade people to buy something they did not know they wanted. The final criterion for research in this field is not therefore simply truth – the description of a market situation – and the authentic expression of that truth, but also the success of an intervention or manipulation of the market is measured usually in profit terms.

Some obvious examples of research in the second sense are the following:

Medical Research

This is research in the second sense: to find out things nobody knew before. The final criterion is the discovery of new truths, but also the translation of the new truths into practical treatments, and the developments of economies of scale so that the treatment is available for the largest number of people. Here ethical considerations receive a great deal of attention, both in terms of the human patients and the animals which are used for trials.

Science and Technology

Everyone naturally associates research with science and technology, white coats and laboratories, but it should be remembered in this context that advances in the sciences are not restricted to the discovery of new facts: advances in theory development and in research methods and approaches occur in parallel. It is of course a commonplace, though nevertheless important, to highlight the ethics of the development of scientific knowledge, both in the process of gathering the knowledge and in the fields of application

THESIS WRITING AND PRESENTATION

Outline:

- Sections of a Thesis (Format):
- Introduction
- Statement of the Problem
- Background and Need
- Rationale
- Purpose of the Project
- Research Questions/Hypotheses
- Literature Review
- Methodology
- Data Collection and Analysis Plan
- Discussion
- Conclusions
- Bibliography
- Appendices
- Tables and Figures

Sections of a Thesis (Format)

The following are sections that most theses should contain.

Introduction

This section is an introduction to the topic and the subject. It describes the background to the research, particularly the major ideas (or theoretical perspective) from which the research is derived. The introduction explains the reasons for doing the research, and indicates why the research is important valuable or significant. It outlines the contribution that the research will make to knowledge. The introduction also outlines the aims of the research by presenting research questions or hypotheses.

Be sure to include in the introduction a clear statement of your hypothesis and how you are going to address it Throughout the introduction you should use citations from the research literature to support your study. These citations should include but not be limited to research presented in the Literature Review.

Statement of the Problem

You should clearly state the problem that your thesis is going to address. You should also present relevant information about why this is an important problem. Describe what precisely you intend to show/argue and why (i.e., address the ever-lurking "So what?" question). Is your research problem addressing a significant social problem, or is it testing some theoretical hypothesis, such as the argument that high television viewing levels make people feel apolitical and powerless.

The issues raised ideally are timely, relevant to the problems or trends of the present time and have broad applicability. Good questions are those allowing theories to be tested or, as when two theories make opposing predictions, can be compared.

In this section you should first grab the attention and interest of your readers; and secondly introduce the problem to be studied. All assertions of feet must be documented. Be careful of any generalizations that you make. A social science research paper is not an editorial. In short a thesis statement is what you'll PROVE, it is the ARGUMENT. If is the SCOPE, it is the MAIN IDEA and the PURPOSE of your paper and that you intend to develop, prove, defend or explore with evidence and therefore has an argumentative or informational edge and must not state the obvious.

Background and Need

You should present relevant literature that supports the need for your project. Research articles, books, educational and government statistics are just a few sources that should be used here. This section can include brief overviews of articles covered in the literature review that supports the need for your project.

Rationale

The rationale should define the larger problem being investigated. Summarize what is known about the problem, define the gap(s) in the knowledge, and state what needs to be done to address the gap(s).

Purpose of the Project

Based on the above background information, explain the purpose of the study. Explain what you hope the study will accomplish and why you chose to do this particular study. This should be supported with citations and specific information related to the study.

Research Questions/Hypotheses

Given the background above, you carefully state the hypotheses that will be tested in your thesis. The hypothesis is the central question being researched. It should be expressed in straight-forward terms. A good hypothesis is comparative, measurable, and falsifiable. Hypotheses are usually defined in "cause -effect" relationships. Any corollary hypotheses or secondary research questions should also be stated. Any supplemental definitions or discussion necessary to explain the hypothesis should be offered.

Underlying every theory is the issue of causality. What exactly does it mean to say that poverty "causes" crime, that cultural materialism "causes" moral decay? Just because two events historically occur simultaneously does not necessarily mean that one is influencing the other.

Hypothesis is a guide or a sign post to the researcher that keeps one on the track. The researcher tests the initial presupposition or hypothesis while working along.

- Hypothesis is formulated in such a way that it enables the researcher to test it.
- Hypothesis depicts and describes the method that follows during the study.
- Hypothesis is a kind of hunch that the researcher has about the topic.
- Hypothesis establishes the precise focus of the research study.
- Hypothesis helps decide the aims and objectives of the study.
- Hypothesis is of speculative nature, an imaginative preconception of "what might be true".
- Hypothesis is a well-established research question that can be in form of a descriptive statement or a question.

The thesis statement is usually considered the most important sentence and the main point of your essay/ report or research paper because it outlines the central purpose of your essay.
A thesis, statement is one of the greatest unifying aspects of a paper. It should act as mortar, holding together the various bricks of a paper, summarizing the main point of the paper "in a nutshell" and heralds the development of the paper.
A thesis statement is what you'll PROVE, it is the ARGUMENT. If is the SCOPE, it is the MAIN IDEA and the PURPOSE of your paper and that you intend to develop, prove, defend or explore with evidence and therefore has an argumentative or informational edge and must not state the obvious.
A thesis statement is a sentence that clearly and concisely indicates the Subject of your paper, the main points you will discuss, and the order in which you will discuss them.

A thesis statement establishes the writer's point of view, set the stage or mood of the paper and prepare the readers what to expect. A thesis statement is important for the writer, because it gives the structure to the paper and is equally important for the readers, because it guides them as what to expect. It is precise. It is not something that one has trouble understanding and should be specific enough to give your reader a clear sense of what your entire essay is going to discuss. It should not be too general or so specific that it fails to represent any strong position. Often the thesis is stated clearly in one or two sentences at the end of the essay's introduction. There are exceptions to almost every rule of writing, including this one. Ideally, the position of the thesis statement needs to be at the end of the introductory paragraph so that reader knows the topic of the papers.

Examples of General to Specific Thesis Statements

Notice the transition...from General to Specific
Men and women are different. Men and women communicate differently. Whereas men tend to focus on the literal aspect of what is being said in a conversation, women often "read between the lines" and focus more on intonation and body language; this phenomenon may significantly contribute to the high divorce rate among many couples. Hawthorn discusses evilness in Young Goodman Brown. In Young Goodman Brown, Hawthorn discusses evilness through symbols. In Young Goodman Brown, Hawthorn uses light and darkness to emphasize good and evil in the world

Follow these guidelines while searching for a subject topic

- Understand the distinction between the subject and a topic that can help you to plan your research paper effectively.
- Within a broader research subject decide about the topic that is more focused and worth an investigation.
- Consider your subject or topic and answer the questions who, what, when, where, why, and how.
- Draw a short and possible list of topics and settle for the one that interests you and is worth investigating.
- Explore your own understanding of the topic, as there's always a temptation to select a topic before a thorough ground work, resist the temptation.
- Be sure that the topic meets the requirements of your research assignment, audience's needs, and expectations

A topic should be single, don't try too much. The topic is important to you and your reader? Specific -limit your topic to narrow, specific points, higher failure. Is there enough evidence to support, defend your topic?

Avoid dead end topics those unsuitable for your interest or resources. Avoid scattered, superficial research topics. Avoid topics that are too beaten and narrow and has nothing new to offer. Pick a topic that shows your individuality, ability and interests. Continue refining and narrowing it to make it significantly specific, ensure that there are sufficient resources available on your selected topic because without a worthwhile literature review the thesis will be worthless.

Limitations

Provide a background for any limitations to this study. Be very specific; for example, the population to which your findings will be limited.

Literature Review

The literature review should discuss all of the research that has been done on the subject, since the purpose of the literature review is to demonstrate concisely your level of understanding of the research related to your project. You should not discuss all of the literature in-depth. Rather you should group your literature according to some general topics and only discuss specific studies if they are "landmark" studies for your area of research (there should be 6-10 of these). How you group the discussion will depend on your project but be sure to come up with a logical organization before you begin writing. How many studies should be included will depend on the topic, but a general baseline in 75 to 100 references (although many topics will appropriately have many more than this). The literature review should end with a discussion of how the literature relates to your study. What have others found regarding your research question? From their findings, coupled with your theory, develop a logical argument that leads to the statement of your hypothesis (this is your theoretical hypothesis expressed in terms of concepts). Your hypothesis/hypotheses should be the conclusion of this "Review" section.

Methodology

This section includes methods which will be used. Describe data collection procedure to be used whether they'll be experiment, survey, questionnaires, observations, participatory methods, case studies document collection or other method. The method must be reliable that can be repeated same time and be internally and externally valid.

External validity means that the results are generalizable to a wide range of situations. It is often necessary to present evidence in this section that the study is actually achievable. This section or a separate section should also describe the data analysis methods to be used. As with the data collection methods, the analysis methods should be justified by reference to the relevant literature. A methodology section can contain a flow chart which summarizes the way in which the various processes involved in the project fit together.

Describe the sample employed and the variable used to test your hypothesis. One should give just enough information here so that other can replicate your procedures and hopefully come up with the same findings and conclusion as you did

One of the expectations of performing original research is that someone in the future will do further research on this topic. Such a researcher should be able to use your methodology without having to consult any other source. If you are using statistical analysis, explain the statistical methods. What do they mean? How are they used? Why are they more applicable here than other similar methods?

Data Collection and Analysis Plan

It is not uncommon for novice researchers to collect a considerable amount of data and then realize that they don't know what to do with it. Design the data collection process to make it easy to collect, code, manage, and analyze. Describe what the physical procedures will be for managing this data. Will you use tables, spreadsheets or data bases to aggregate and analyze the data? Will computers be used to store, manipulate or evaluate it? How will this be done? Who will do it? How long will it take? Will it require special hardware, software; budge accounts, or personnel (such as technical assistant)? What kinds of analysis will be done? How will it be accomplished? How will the findings be presented for interpretation?

Discussion

This chapter should begin with a concise restatement of your study's purpose along with any needed background information. You should restate each of your hypotheses. Now that you have presented the results in the previous section, discuss them in this section. What, specifically, do the results mean? How can they be interpreted? Can they be interpreted in multiple ways? What do the findings tell you about your hypothesis? Do not claim more for your results than the data really shows. Avoid speculation.

Conclusions

This section should summarize your results and discussion. You should include a list of the most important findings of your study in descending order of important. You should also provide a statement about the possibility of future study. What needs to be done and what does this study contribute? Since this is too often the only part of a paper that some individuals read it is important to reiterate what you intended to discover and what, in fact, you fond.

Bibliography

All pieces of literature referred to should be listed at the end of the proposal using the referencing style appropriate to the department. Before you begin compiling this section, find out what style you are expected to use. Carefully adhere to it or you will raise the ire of your committee. It is important to ensure that all the key journals and books in the field have been referred to in the proposal. This demonstrates that the proposal has been developed from a thorough understanding of the important theoretical perspectives and research findings in the literature.

Appendices

If you have the material that is too long to include in a table (raw data, field notes, etc.) or not appropriate to a particular section it should be included as an appendix.

Tables and Figures

Tables and figures should appear in the text after they are first mentioned. Appending them at the end of the thesis is a very awkward arrangement and makes the thesis difficult to read. Materials presented in tables and figures should not be duplicated in the text.

Raw Data

Your raw data should always appear as part of the thesis. This should appear as an appendix at the end of your thesis. Another research should be able to duplicate your work with no other documents at their disposal.

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

Outline:

- Making a Preliminary Choice of Methodology
- Quantitative and Qualitative Perspectives
- Research Types
- Studies Primarily Quantitative in Nature
- Studies Primarily Qualitative in Nature
- Research Methods

- Text
- Organization

Making a Preliminary Choice of Methodology

Distinguish between three related concepts:

i) Research Perspectives
ii) Research Types
iii) Research Methods

Research Perspectives

Quantitative and Qualitative Perspectives

A research perspective, as used here, is a general view and use of research approaches and methods. There are two major perspectives: quantitative and qualitative. The quantitative perspective derives from a positivist epistemology, which holds that there is an objective reality that can be expressed numerically. As a consequence the quantitative perspective emphasizes studies that are experimental in nature, emphasize measurement, and search for relationships. If a study uses language such as the following, it probably has used quantitative perspective i.e., variable, controls, validity, reliability, hypothesis, statically significant.

On the other hand, a qualitative perspective emphasizes a phenomenological view in which reality inheres in the perceptions of individuals. Studies deriving from this perspective focus on meaning, understanding, and take place in naturally occurring situations (McMillan, 1996). If a study uses language such as the following, it probably has used a qualitative perspective: naturalistic, field study, case study, context, situational, constructivism, meaning, multiple realities.

While some researchers seem chiefly concerned with the differences between the two approaches, Morgan (1997) explains how the two perspectives can be combined. He identifies four general ways of combining the two, based upon two factors: a) which one is primary and which secondary; b) which one is used first and which, second.

1. Quantitative primary, qualitative first. The researcher begins with a qualitative approach as the secondary method, using the qualitative data as a basis for collecting and interpreting the quantitative data (the primary method).
2. Quantitative primary, quantitative first. The researcher begins with a quantitative approach as the primary method, using qualitative follow-up to evaluate and interpret the quantitative results.
3. Qualitative primary, quantitative first. The researcher begins by collecting quantitative preliminary data as a basis for collecting and interpreting the primary qualitative data.
4. Qualitative primary, qualitative first. The researcher begins with the primary qualitative data, using quantitative follow up to interpret the qualitative data.

Research Types

The term research type is used here to identify the general research approach. While authorities in the field seem to differ as to how the types of research are classified, the following approaches, which are most often used in educational research, represent some of the options available to you as a researcher. To simplify the discussion, they are divided into whether they tend to use a quantitative or a qualitative perspective, although there is much overlapping in many of the types.

Studies Primarily Quantitative in Nature

The following types of research are primarily quantitative in nature.

Experimental Research

Experimental research uses methods originally applied in the physical and biological sciences. In most experiments the following procedures are used: a sample of subjects is selected; they are assigned randomly to experimental and control groups; a treatment is administrated to the experimental group only. The two groups are then evaluated on the basis of dependent variable and the consequence of the independent variable. The latter is the presumed cause of the dependent variable.

Quasi-Experimental Research

A quasi-experimental design is one that follows the general procedures of experimental research, without the use of control group or without random assignment, since random assignment or the use of control groups is often not feasible in educational settings.

Causal-Comparative Research

Causal comparative studies are designed to determine the possible causes of a phenomenon. Sometimes these studies are called ex post facto research.

Co relational Research

Correlation studies are designed to analyze the relationships between two or more variables, ordinarily through the use of correlation coefficients.

Descriptive Research

As the term implies, the purpose of descriptive research is to describe a phenomenon. Descriptive studies report frequencies, averages, and percentages. For example, you might study the attitudes.

Evaluation Research

Evaluation research makes judgments about the merit or wroth of educational programs, products, and organizations. It is typically undertaken in order to aid administrators in making professional decisions. Evaluation studies are usually described as either formative or summative. Formative studies are made while a new program or product is being developed; summative studies, when it has been completed. You might do an evaluation of a new standard-based curriculum performing both a formative and a summative assessment.

Studies Primarily Qualitative in Nature
The following types of research tend to take a qualitative perspective.

Case Study Research
A case study is an empirical inquiry that investigates a contemporary phenomenon within its real life context when the boundaries between phenomenon and context are not clearly evident; and in which multiple source of evidence are used.
Ethnographic research

Ethnographic Research
Ethnographic research is special types of case study research. It is distinguished from other types of case studies because it uses the theories and methods of anthropology to study the culture of schools and classrooms.
Action Research
Most action research documents deal with how an educational problem was identified, understood, and solved by practitioners.

Research Methods
Research methods, as the term is used here, are the specific techniques used to collect data with respect to the research problem. In general, five methods are typically used in educational research.

1. Test and measurements. Tests are administered and measurements made to determine the extent of change.
2. Interviews. Interviews are conducted with individuals or groups to ascertain their perceptions.
3. Observations. Observations are made to determine what is occurring and what individuals are doing.
4. Surveys. Surveys are administered to assess opinions, perceptions, and attitudes.
5. Documents. Documents are analyzed to establish the record.

Make Preliminary Choices

The process explained here assumes that in developing the prospectus you will make only a preliminary choice that may be like the following.

Type/ Method	Test, measurement	Interview	Observation	Survey	Documents
Experiment	P		A		A
Quasi-	P		A		A

experimental
Causal comparison	P		A		A
Co relational	P		A		A
Descriptive	A	A		P	A
Evaluation	P	A	A	A	A
Ethnographic		A	P		A

Following is the summery of the both types of research.

8.2 Organization

A research thesis probably includes:

i. Title Page
ii. Inner Title
iii. Abstract (2 pages)
iv. Acceptance Certificate (Annex E)
v. Dedication / Acknowledgements (optional)
vi. Content List
vii. Chapter 1: Introduction
viii. Chapter 2: Literature Review
ix. Chapter 3: Procedure of the study
x. Chapter 4: Data Analysis
xi. Chapter 5: Conclusion
xii. Bibliography xiii. Appendices, if any

Prelims (Inner title – content list) will be numbered in Roam numerals – i, ii, iii, iv, etc.

Arabic numerals (1, 2, 3, etc.) will begin from Chapter 1:

Understanding the Concept of Documentation

How to make documents

i) MLA Modern Language Association (name & page ref at each place where source is used, a parenthetical citation system

ii) APA American psychological association a parenthetical citation system source name and publication system and sometimes page reference

Your essay should be typed, double-spaced on standard-sized paper (8.5 X 11 inches) with margins of 1 inch on all sides. Your final essay should include, in the order indicated below, as many of the following sections as are applicable, each of which should begin on a separate page:

Title page: includes a running head for publication, title, and byline and affiliation.

General APA Guidelines

In the upper right-hand corner of each page, include a 1-2 word version of your title. Follow with five spaces and then the page number.

Abstract
If your instructor requires an abstract, write a 75-100 word overview of your essay which should include your main idea and your major points. You also may want to mention any implications of your research. Place the abstract on its own page immediately after the title page. Center the word Abstract and then follow with the paragraph.

Headings
Although not absolutely necessary, headings can be helpful. For undergraduate papers, only one level of heading is necessary. Major headings should be centered. Capitalize every word in the heading except articles (a, the), short prepositions (in, by, for), and coordinating conjunctions (and, but, or).

Visuals
Visuals such as tables and figures include graphs, charts, drawings, and photographs. Try to keep the visuals as simple as possible and clearly label each visual with an Arabic numeral (ex: Table 1, Table 2, etc.) and include the title of the visual. The label and the title should appear on separate lines above the table, flush left. Below the table, provide the source. A sample Figure treatment is shown below.

Reference List: Basic Rules
Your reference list should appear at the end of your paper. It provides the information necessary for a reader to locate and retrieve any source you cite in the body of the paper. Each source you cite in the paper must appear in your reference list; likewise, each entry in the reference list must be cited in your text.
Your references should begin on a new page separate from the text of the essay; label this page References (with no quotation marks, underlining, etc.), centered at the top of the page. It should be double-spaced just like the rest of your essay.

All lines after the first line of each entry in your reference list should be indented one-half inch from the left margin. This is called hanging indentation. Authors' names are inverted (last name first); give the last name and initials for all authors of a particular work unless the work has more than six authors. If the work has more than six authors, list the first six authors and then use et al. after the sixth author's name to indicate the rest of the authors. Reference list entries should be alphabetized by the last name of the first author of each work. If you have more than one article by the same author, single-author references or multiple-author references with the exact same authors in the exact same orders are listed in order by the year of publication, starting with the earliest. When referring to any work that is NOT a journal, such as a book, article, or Web page, capitalize only the first letter of the first word of a title and subtitle, the first word after a colon or a dash in the title, and proper nouns. Do not capitalize the first letter of the second word in a hyphenated compound word. Capitalize all major words in journal titles. Italicize titles of longer works such as books and journals. Do not italicize, underline, or put quotes around the titles of shorter works such as journal articles or essays in edited collections.

List of References

Create your list of references on its own page after the last page of your text. Center the title References one inch from the top of the page. Give double space. Alphabetize the list of references by the last name of the authors. If the work has no author or editor, alphabetize the work by the first word of the title (excluding A, An, or The).

In-Text Citations: The Basics

Reference citations in text are covered on pages 207-214 of the Publication Manual. What follows are some general guidelines for referring to the works of others in your essay.

Note: APA style requires authors to use the past tense or present perfect tense when using signal phrases to describe earlier research. E.g., Jones (1998) found or Jones (1998) has found...

APA Citation Basics

When using APA format, follow the author-date method of in-text citation. This means that the author's last name and the year of publication for the source should appear in the text, E.g., (Jones, 1998), and a complete reference should appear in the reference list at the end of the paper.

If you are referring to an idea from another work but NOT directly quoting the material, or making reference to an entire book, article or other work, you only have to make reference to the author and year of publication in your in-text reference.

In-Text Citation Capitalization, Quotes, and Italics/Underlining

Always capitalize proper nouns, including author names and initials: D. Jones.

If you refer to the title of a source within your paper, capitalize all words that are four letters long or greater within the title of a source: Permanence and Change. Exceptions apply to short words that are verbs, nouns, pronouns, adjectives, and adverbs: Writing

New Media, There Is Nothing Left to Lose. (Note that in your References list, only the first word of a title will be capitalized: Writing new media.)

When capitalizing titles; capitalize both words in a hyphenated compound word: Natural-Born Cyborgs.
Capitalize the first word after a dash or colon: "Defining Film Rhetoric: The Case of Hitchcock's Vertigo."
Italicize or underline the titles of longer works such as books, edited collections, movies, television series, documentaries, or albums: The Closing of the American Mind; The Wizard of Oz; Friends.

Put quotation marks around the titles of shorter works such as journal articles, articles from edited collections, television series episodes, and song titles: "Multimedia Narration: Constructing Possible Worlds"; "The One Where Chandler Can't Cry."

Short Quotations
If you are directly quoting from a work, you will need to include the author, year of publication, and the page number for the reference (preceded by "p."). Introduce the quotation with a signal phrase that includes the author's last name followed by the date of publication in parentheses.

According to Jones (1998), "Students often had difficulty using APA style, especially when it was their first time" (p. 199).Jones (1998) found "students often had the difficulty using APA style" (p. 199); what implications does this have for teachers? If the author is not named in a signal phrase, place the author's last name, the year of publication, and the page number in parentheses after the quotation. She stated, "Students often had difficulty using APA style," (Jones, 1998, p. 199), but she did not offer an explanation as to why.

Long Quotations
Place direct quotations longer than 40 words in a free-standing block of typewritten lines, and omit quotation marks. Start the quotation on a new line, indented five spaces from the left margin. Type the entire quotation on the new margin and indent the first line of any subsequent paragraph within the quotation five spaces from the new margin. Maintain double-spacing throughout. The parenthetical citation should come after closing punctuation mark.

Jones's (1998) study found the following:
Students often had difficulty using APA style, especially when it was their first time citing sources. This difficulty could be attributed to the fact that many students failed to purchase a style manual or to ask their teacher for help. (p. 199)

Summary or Paraphrase
If you are paraphrasing an idea from another work, you only have to make reference to the author and year of publication in your in-text reference, but APA guidelines encourage you to provide also the page number (although it is not required.)According to Jones (1998), APA style is a difficult citation format for first-time learners APA style is a difficult citation format for first-time learners (Jones, 1998, p. 199).

In-Text Citations: Author/Authors

APA style has a series of important rules on using author names as part of the author-date system. There are additional rules for citing indirect sources, electronic sources, and sources without page numbers.

Citing an Author or Authors

A Work by Two Authors: Name both authors in the signal phrase or in the parentheses each time you cite the work. Use the word "and" between the authors' names within the text and use "&" in the parentheses.

Research by Wegener and Petty (1994) showed...
(Wegener & Petty, 1994)

A Work by Three to Five Authors:

List all the authors in the signal phrase or in parentheses the first time you cite the source.
(Kernis, Cornell, Sun, Berry, & Harlow, 1993)
In subsequent citations, only use the first author's last name followed by "et al." in the signal phrase or in parentheses.
(Kernis et al., 1993)
In et al., et should not be followed by a period.

Six or More Authors:

Use the first author's name followed by et al. in the signal phrase or in parentheses.

Harris et al. (2001) argued...
(Harris et al., 2001)

Unknown Author:

If the work does not have an author, cite the source by its title in the signal phrase or use the first word or two in the parentheses. Titles of books and reports are italicized or underlined; titles of articles and chapters are in quotation marks. A similar study was done of students learning to format research papers ("Using APA," 2001).
Note: In the rare case the "Anonymous" is used for the author, treat it as the author's name (Anonymous, 2001). In the reference list, use the name Anonymous as the author.

Organization as an Author:

If the author is an organization or a government agency, mention the organization in the signal phrase or in the parenthetical citation the first time you cite the source. According to the American Psychological Association (2000),...If the organization has a well-known abbreviation, include the abbreviation in brackets the first time the source is cited and then use only the abbreviation in later citations. First citation: (Mothers Against Drunk Driving [MADD], 2000)

Second citation: (MADD, 2000)

Two or More Works in the Same Parentheses:

When your parenthetical citation includes two or more works, order them the same way they appear in the reference list, separated by a semi-colon.

(Berndt, 2002; Harlow, 1983)

Authors with the Same Last Name:

To prevent confusion, use first initials with the last names.

(E. Johnson, 2001; L. Johnson, 1998)

Two or More Works by the Same Author in the Same Year:

If you have two sources by the same author in the same year, use lower-case letters (a, b, c) with the year to order the entries in the reference list. Use the lower-case letters with the year in the in-text citation.

Research by Berndt (1981a) illustrated that...

Personal Communication:

For interviews, letters, e-mails, and other person-to-person communication, cite the communicator's name, the fact that it was personal communication, and the date of the communication. Do not include personal communication in the reference list.

(E. Robbins, personal communication, January 4, 2001).

A. P. Smith also claimed that many of her students had difficulties with APA style (personal communication, November 3, 2002).

Citing Indirect Sources

If you use a source that was cited in another source, name the original source in your signal phrase. List the secondary source in your reference list and include the secondary source in the parentheses.

Johnson argued that... (as cited in Smith, 2003, p.102).

Note: When citing material in parentheses, set off the citation with a comma, as above.

Electronic Sources

If possible, cite an electronic document the same as any other document by using the author-date style.

Kenneth (2000) explained...

Unknown Author and Unknown Date:

If no author or date is given, use the title in your signal phrase or the first word or two of the title in the parentheses and use the abbreviation "n.d." (for "no date").

Another study of students and research decisions discovered that students succeeded with tutoring ("Tutoring and APA," n.d.).

Sources without Page Numbers

When an electronic source lacks page numbers, you should try to include information that will help readers find the passage being cited. When an electronic document has numbered paragraphs; use the symbol, or the abbreviation "Para" followed by the paragraph number (Hall, 2001, 5) or (Hall, 2001, Para. 5). If the paragraphs are not numbered and the document includes headings, provide the appropriate heading and specify the paragraph under that heading. Note that in some electronic sources, like Web pages, people can use the Find function in their browser to locate any passages you cite.

According to Smith (1997), (Mind over Matter section, para. 6).

Note: Never use the page numbers of Web pages you print out; different computers print Web pages with different pagination.

Reference List: Author/Authors

The following rules for handling works by a single author or multiple authors apply to all APA-style references in your reference list, regardless of the type of work (book, article, electronic resource, etc.)

Single Author

Last name first, followed by author initials.

Berndt, T. J. (2002). Friendship quality and social development. Current Directions in Psychological Science, 11, 7-10.

Two Authors
List by their last names and initials. Use the "&" instead of "and."

Wegener, D. T., & Petty, R. E. (1994). Mood management across affective states: The hedonic contingency hypothesis. Journal of Personality & Social Psychology, 66, 1034-1048.

Three to Six Authors
List by last names and initials; commas separate author names, while the last author name is preceded again by "&"

Kernis, M. H., Cornell, D. P., Sun, C. R., Berry, A., & Harlow, T. (1993). There's more to self-esteem than whether it is high or low: The importance of stability of self-esteem. Journal of Personality and Social Psychology, 65, 1190-1204.

More Than Six Authors
If there are more than six authors, list the first six as above and then "et al.," which stands for "and others." Remember not to place a period after "et" in "et al."

Harris, M., Karper, E., Stacks, G., Hoffman, D., DeNiro, R., Cruz, P., et al. (2001). Writing labs and the Hollywood connection. Journal of Film and Writing, 44(3), 213-245.

Organization as Author
American Psychological Association (2003)

Unknown Author
Merriam-Webster's collegiate dictionary (10th ed.).(1993). Springfield, MA: Merriam-Webster.

NOTE: When your essay includes parenthetical citations of sources with no author named, use a shortened version of the source's title instead of an author's name. Use quotation marks and italics as appropriate. For example, parenthetical citations of the two sources above would appear as follows: (Merriam-Webster's, 1993) and ("New Drug," 1993).

Two or More Works by the Same Author
Use the author's name for all entries and list the entries by the year (earliest comes first).

Berndt, T.J. (1981).

Berndt, T.J. (1999).

When an author appears both as a sole author and, in another citation, as the first author of a group, list the one-author entries first.

Berndt, T. J. (1999). Friends' influence on students' adjustment to school. Educational Psychologist, 34, 15-28.

Berndt, T. J., & Keefe, K. (1995). Friends' influence on adolescents' adjustment to school. Child Development, 66, 1312-1329.

References that have the same first author and different second and/or third authors are arranged alphabetically by the last name of the second author or the last name of the third if the first and second authors are the same.

Wegener, D. T., Kerr, N. L., Fleming, M. A., & Petty, R. E. (2000). Flexible corrections of juror judgments: Implications for jury instructions. Psychology, Public Policy, & Law, 6, 629-654.

Wegener, D. T., Petty, R. E., & Klein, D. J. (1994). Effects of mood on high elaboration attitude change: The mediating role of likelihood judgments. European Journal of Social Psychology, 24, 25-43.

Two or More Works by the Same Author in the Same Year
If you are using more than one reference by the same author (or the same group of authors listed in the same order) published in the same year, organize them in the reference list alphabetically by the title of the article or chapter. Then assign letter suffixes to the year. Refer to these sources in your essay as they appear in your reference list, e.g.: "Berdnt (1981a) makes similar claims..."

Berndt, T. J. (1981a). Age changes and changes over time in pro-social intentions and behavior between friends. Developmental Psychology, 17, 408-416.

Berndt, T. J. (1981b). Effects of friendship on pro-social intentions and behavior. Child Development, 52, 636-643.

Reference List: Articles in Periodicals

Basic Form

APA style dictates that authors are named last name followed by initials; publication year goes between parentheses, followed by a period. The title of the article is in sentence-case, meaning only the first word and proper nouns in the title are capitalized. The periodical title is run in title case, and is followed by the volume number which, with the title, is also italicized or underlined.

Author, A. A., Author, B. B., & Author, C. C. (Year). Title of article. Title of Periodical, volume number (issue number), pages.

Article in Journal Paginated by Volume

Journals that are paginated by volume begin with page one in issue one, and continue numbering issue two where issue one ended, etc.

Harlow, H. F. (1983). Fundamentals for preparing psychology journal articles. Journal of Comparative and Physiological Psychology, 55, 893-896.

Article in Journal Paginated by Issue

Journals paginated by issue begin with page one every issue; therefore, the issue number gets indicated in parentheses after the volume. The parentheses and issue numbers are not italicized or underlined.

Scruton, R. (1996). The eclipse of listening. The New Criterion, 15(30), 5-13.

Article in a Magazine

Henry, W. A., III. (1990, April 9). Making the grade in today's schools. Time, 135, 28-31.

Article in a Newspaper

Unlike other periodicals, p. or pp. precedes page numbers for a newspaper reference in APA style. Single pages take p., e.g., p. B2; multiple pages take pp., e.g., pp. B2, B4 or pp. C1, C3-C4.

Article from a Database

When referencing material obtained from an online database (such as a database in the library), provide appropriate print citation information (formatted just like a "normal" print citation would be for that type of work). Then add information that gives the date of retrieval and the proper name of the database. This will allow people to retrieve the print version if they do not have access to the database from which you retrieved the article. You can also include the item number or accession number in parentheses at the end, but the APA manual says that this is not required. Lesson 23

Business Communication

Claim and Adjustment Requests

Countless aspects of business dealings can break down, but the most common causes for claims are:

1. An incorrect bill, invoice, or statement;
2. A bill for merchandise ordered but never received;
3. Delivery of unordered merchandise;
4. Delivery of incorrect merchandise;
5. Delivery of damaged or defective merchandise.

Claim and Adjustment Requests

The following direct organizational plan is used for writing claims.

Direct statement of the Request

1. Write a claim letter as soon as possible after the problem has been identified.
2. State the need for replacement, refund or correction of the problem.
3. Maintain a confident, factual, fair, unemotional tone.

Justification, Explanation, and Details

To gain the reader's understanding praise some aspect of the good or service or at least explain why the product was originally purchased.

1. Present facts honestly, clearly, and politely.
2. Eliminate threats, sarcasm, exaggeration, and hostility.
3. Specify the problem:
    - Product failed to live up to advertised standards;
    - Product failed to live up to sales representative's claims;
    - Product fell short of company's policy;
    - Product was defective;
    - Customer service was not up to the mark.

Justification, Explanation, and Details

4. Make no accusation against any person or company, unless you can back it up with facts.
5. Use a no argumentative tone to show your confidence in the reader's fairness.

Claim and Adjustment Requests

6. If necessary, refer to documentation (invoices, cancelled cheque, confirmation letters, etc., but mail only photocopies.
7. Ask the reader to propose fair adjustment, if appropriate.
8. If appropriate, clearly state what you expect as a fair settlement.
9. Do not return the defective merchandise until you have been asked to do so.
10. Avoid uncertainty or vagueness that might permit the adjusters to prolong the issue by additional correspondence or to propose a less-than-fair settlement.

Claim and Adjustment Requests

Courteous Close with Request for Specific Action

Summarize desired action briefly.

- Simplify compliance with your request by including your name, address, phone number and hours of availability.
- Note how complying with your request will benefit the reader.
- Consider another example that how the writer conveys his message of inconvenience in calm manner.

Claim and Adjustment Requests

Dear Sirs,

On March 1,we ordered and subsequently received one case of handsaws, model 99b. We paid for the order with our cheque no. 1234, a photocopy of which is enclosed.

When we decided to order these saws instead of model 91, it was at the urging of your sales representative, Mr. Ali Naeem. He assured us that the new saws were more durable and efficient than the older model.

However, we have now had the saws on our selling floor for three weeks, and already six have been returned with broken teeth by extremely dissatisfied customers.

We are therefore returning the entire order of 99b saws and would like to be refunded for their full purchase price plus shipping expenses.

Claim and Adjustment Requests

Gentlemen,

Please repair or replace my calculator watch, Model C863, and send it to me at the address above.

After six months of use, the musical alarm has quit working.

Enclosed is my watch, a copy of the sales receipt showing the date of purchase, and your warranty, which guarantees material and workmanship for one year.

Yours Sincerely,

Mr. Hassan,

We missed your input at last week's status meeting. I reported on developments from your division, but the information may not have been completely accurate.

Representation at the meeting by all areas is the best way I know to ensure a forum for timely discussion of information and alterations in the project plans–alterations that may affect more than one area.

Please be sure to have a representative from your division attend the July 8 meeting at 2 p.m. in room 10.

It has come to my attention customers have been told that we cannot take their service applications over the phone. Please correct this misunderstanding. We should most willingly take the application information over the phone and then, of course, ask them to complete (or verify) the written information when they come in for the first consultation.

This make-it-easy policy should be good news to our customers and should also increase our clerks' sales records. In other words, they can "sign up the live ones" before they change their minds or simply neglect to come in personally by our weekly deadlines.

I appreciate your help in clarifying this policy to all involved.

Sincerely,

Granting Requests for Adjustment

An adjustment letter is the reply to a complaint (called a claim letter).

Granting Requests for Adjustment

There Can be Three types of adjustment letters.

1. When the seller is at fault
2. When the buyer is at fault.
3. When the third party is at fault.

Granting Requests for Adjustment

1. Give the main idea or good news in the beginning.
2. Tell the reader that how the problem occurred.
3. Also tell the reader what measures you have taken that there would not be such situation in the future.
4. End your letter with a friendly close.

Granting Requests for Adjustment

Initial Statement of the Good News or Main Idea

1. State immediately your willingness to honor the reader's claim.
2. Accept your reader's account as entirely accurate unless good business reasons demand a different interpretation of some points.
3. Adopt a tone of consideration and courtesy; avoid being defensive.
4. Thank the reader for taking the time to write.

Granting Requests for Adjustment

Middle, Informational Section

1. Minimize or, if possible, omit any disagreements with your reader's interpretation of events.
2. Maintain a supportive tone through such phrases as "Thank you for," "May we ask," "Please let us know," and "We are glad to work with you."
3. Apologize only under extreme circumstances; then do so crisply and without an overly apologetic tone.
   - Admit your firm's faults carefully.
   - Avoid blaming any particular person or office.
   - Avoid implying general company inefficiency.
   - Avoid making unrealistic promises about the future.
   - Remind the reader of your firm's quality controls.

Granting Requests for Adjustment

Warm, Courteous Close

1. Clarify any necessary actions that your reader must take.
2. Remind the reader of how you have honored the claim.
3. Avoid negative information.
4. Encourage the customer to look favorably on your company and/or the product in question (resale information).
5. Encourage the customer to continue buying other goods from you (sales promotion), but avoid seeming greedy.

Writing Letters Granting Adjustments

Dear Mr. Ali,

Your new lawn umbrella is being shipped prepaid today. It should arrive in a few days.

Thank you for returning the torn one. Because a mended umbrella might not be water-resistant, we are sending you a new one, so that you can keep your new lawn table protected.

You will notice that the new umbrella is made of vinyl-coated nylon, which has proved superior to the polyester and cotton one you bought last year.

When you need lawn furniture and accessories, you will find everything from small tables to foundations in our latest catalog. You can rely on our guarantee of high quality and "satisfaction or your money back."

When The Buyer Is At Fault

Letters refusing adjustments have two purposes:

1. To say no.
2. To rebuild customer goodwill.

When The Buyer Is At Fault

1. Support the Reader's Point of View in Your Buffer Paragraph
2. Assure the Customer That the Request Is Appreciated and Has Received Individual Consideration.
3. Present the Explanation Before the Decision
4. Be Courteous Even When Answering an Angry or a Distorted Claim
   - Be friendly, rational, and professional.
5. Try to Leave the Reader in a Pleasant Frame of Mind

When The Buyer Is At Fault

Dear Hassan.

Thank you for your purchase of 10 Super Fax machines. You have recently returned four machines due to a malfunction in the paper feeder.

We are sorry that we are unable to comply with your request to credit your account for the full price of the machines. These items were sold at a special clearance rate, and we do not give credits or refunds on clearance items. However, we will be happy to honor the service and maintenance agreement. Your satisfaction is important to us.

If we can assist you in understanding the functions of your fax machine, please contact our customer service hotline at) 222-2111.

When The Buyer Is At Fault

Dear Mr. Shibly,

We are sorry that you are not completely satisfied with your vacuum cleaner. You are entirely justified in expecting more than four years of reliable use from an appliance, and we are always eager to service any product that does not for some reason live up to standard.

We appreciate your giving us the opportunity to examine the damaged vacuum cleaner. According to our service department, the filter had never been replaced although the owner's manual advises replacement every few months. As a result, the motor itself gradually became clogged with dust and dirt.

When The Buyer Is At Fault

The cost of repairing and cleaning the vacuum is estimated as Rs. 500. If you would like to have it repaired, please let us know. With regular cleaning and replacement of the filter and exhaust bag, you should receive several more years of service from your appliance.

Yours truly,

When the third Party is at Fault

(1) Honor the customer's claim with the standard good-news letter and no additional explanation;

(2) Honor the claim but explain that you were not really at fault;

(3) Take no action on the claim and suggest that your customer file against the firm that caused the defect or damage.

When the third Party is at Fault

Dear Sir,

We are sending by courier three TV sets to replace the ones damaged in shipment. They must reach you before September 7

We are sending our claim against the courier for the sets you received. Will you please leave the damaged ones in a convenient place till the inspector from courier service calls on you for a check-up .

Writing Credit Letters

1. Character
2. Capacity
3. Capital

Writing Credit Letters

Evaluating the Credit Information

Traditionally, the following three Cs of credit form the basis for extending credit privileges:

1. Character refers to a sense for honesty and ethical dealings with others. It means meeting obligations and is demonstrated by willingness to pay.
2. Capacity is the ability to pay. It is evidenced by income or potential income.
3. Capital refers to tangible assets in relation to debts. Capital also determines the ability to pay if the debtor does not pay willingly.

Writing Credit Letters

Extending Credit

1. Welcome the new customer, and express the wish for a pleasant association.
2. Outline special privileges that are available.
3. Explain the terms of payment.
4. Encourage the customer to use the new charge, account, and enclose promotional material.
5. Build goodwill by indicating your eagerness to serve the new customer well.

Letter Extending Credit

Dear Mr. Hassan,

we take pleasure in opening a charge account at bright's, with your name. I feel sure that this will be the start of a long and mutually pleasant association.

As a charge customer you will enjoy many privileges at bright's. For instances our charge customers receive advance notices of special sales. They may also use their cards at our terrace restaurants and book rental department.

By the first of each month you will receive and itemized statement of your purchases made through the 25th day of preceding month. Purchases made after the 25th appear on the following month bill. Payments are due by the 10th, and a monthly charge of 1.5% will be made on the balance remaining at that time.

we hope you will make regular use of charge accounts.

sincerely yours,

Writing Credit Letters

Refusing Credit

Every credit-refusal letter has two objectives:

1. To say no tactfully
2. To keep the goodwill of the customer

There are various reasons for refusing credit. The main ones are:

1. Lack of established credit.
2. Overextension of credit, which may result in an inability to pay bills on time.
3. Unwillingness to pay that which is owed according to credit reporting agencies.

BUFFER

- Eliminate apologies and negative-sounding words.
- Phrase the buffer to avoid misleading the reader.
- Limit the length of the buffer.
- Express appreciation for the credit request.
- Introduce resale information.
- Make a transition from the favourable to the unfavorable message.
- Make transition from the general to the specific.
- Avoid a condescending lecture about how credit is earned.
- Avoid negative words, such as, “we must decline your request”.
- Suggest positive alternatives, such as cash and layaway purchases.

Dear Mr. Ahsan,

Thank you very much for you order of April 7, we are glad that you are interested in our product because you will find them a source of profit and goodwill building.

Just now however, we are without sufficient information to permit us to ship this order on credit term. We feel sure that we can make shipment in this way after you have become more firmly established in business.

As in the case all those who apply for credit, we have made a careful investigation of your resources and credit obligations since you have number of Loan commitments may we suggest that you continue to allow us to send you on a cash basis until such time as you are able to reduce your personal obligations.

Lesson 25

Business Communication

Collection Letters

The purpose of collection letters is:

1. To get the money.
2. To keep the customer and future business.
3. To build goodwill.

Collection Letters

- The purpose of the collection process is to maintain Goodwill white collecting what is owed.
- Collection is a sensitive issue.
- The following practices may be avoided:
  - Falsely implying that a lawsuit has been filed.
  - Contact the debtor's employer or relatives about the debt.
  - Communication to the other persons that the person is in debt.
  - Harassing the debtor.
  - Using abusive or observe language.
  - Using defamatory language.

Collection Letters

- Intentionally causing mental stress.
- Threatening violence.

- Communicating by postcard (not confidential enough).
- Misrepresenting the legal status of the debt.
- Communicating in such a way as to make the receiver physically ill.
- Misrepresenting the message as a government or court document.

Collection Letters

Right attitude for successful collections

- Any emotional reaction on the part of the debtor may reduce the chances of recovery.
- Successful collection depends to on the following factors.
- Understanding of Human Nature.
- Knowledge of collection policies and laws.
- Using persuasive / positive appeals effectively.

  i) appeal to pride

  ii) Appeal to fairness & justice

  iii) Appeal to sympathy

  iv) Appeal to Goodwill

Collection Letters

Begin with assumption that most people will pay:

- Give no impression that you doubt the honesty of the debtor.
- Use a courteous, reasonable tone but become firmer.
- And more demanding during the later stages of the series.
- Remain with the law, don't harass.
- Show understanding and flexibility while writing delinquent accounts.
- Send collection notices quickly and regularly.
- Never imply in your messages that payment can be avoided or postponed.
- Retain goodwill throughout the series.
- Present you evidence and stick to the facts.
- Persuade the debtors of the benefit he will receive by paying.
- State clearly the specific action the debtor must take.

Collection Letters

Our records indicate that the balance of Rs. 4000/- on your account is now past due. Payment is requested.

(OR)

Our records show that your September payment is more than a week over-due. If you have recently mailed your cheque for Rs.1548700/- we thank you. If not, please send it in quickly.

Collection Letters

Dear Mr. Bilal,

Enclosed is a duplicate list of your credit charges from December – 200--. It is sent to you as a friendly reminder that the balance on your account with us is past due. Please take a few minutes today to send us your cheque for Rs. 224760.Use the postpaid addressed envelope provided for your use.

Yours truly,

Collection Letters

When a credit customer does not respond to personal reminder messages, you can assume that something is preventing the customer from paying. It may be that the customer is unhappy with the purchased merchandise or is facing financial difficulty. Whatever the reason may be for holding up payment, you want the customer to (1) explain why the payment hasn't been made or (2) settle the account.

Collection Letters

Dear Mr. Javed,

We are concerned about your overdue account. Several reminder notices have been mailed to you, and we expected to receive your Rs. 38400/- cheque in the mail. But so far we haven't.

There may be a circumstance beyond your control that prevents you from settling this account. If so, please write me about it. I'm certain we can work out a payment arrangement after we know what your situation is.

Just think how good you will feel, Mr. Javed, when your account with us has been paid in full.

Yours truly,

Collection Letters

Appeal(s) for Payment

Step 3

The next collection message is an appeal to the credit customer to pay. This is a stern letter, but calmly written. Typical appeals are to the customer's pride or sense of fair play.

Your appeal for payment should not threaten to take the debtor to court unless you actually plan to. Give the person another chance to save a good credit standing by sending payment before the deadline – usually 10 to 12 days from the date of the letter. The following letter is an example of a courteous request for payment which appeals to both the customer's pride and his sense of fair play.

This letter should stress the customer's self-interest by pointing out the importance of prompt payment and the dangers of losing credit standing. The letter should convey the urgency and seriousness of the situation.

'To:' (recipient's name or designation): 'Ref:' (for filing)
'From:' (author's name or designation) 'Date:' (in full)
'Subject:' (main theme of message)

The message of the memorandum is set out like that of a letter: good English in spaced paragraphs. Note, however, that no inside address, salutation or complimentary close are required.

'Copies to:' (recipient (s) of copies) 'signed:' (optional)
'Enc.:' to indicate accompanying material author signs/initials

Writing Memorandums

To:

From Date:

Subject

Main idea

Opening paragraph or sentence, the reason for writing and context of the message, including appropriate details.

Explanation

Necessary details to support the opening statements. Here the substance of message is set out logically and clearly. This may be less formal than a letter, so you can use numbered points.

Writing Memorandums

Closing

State clearly what is required of the recipient in response.

Organizational Plans

- You may find it necessary to write a persuasive or bad-news memo.
- You may like a step-by-step method to your request or bad news.
- Allow reader to complete reading the memo and come to the conclusion with you.
- Allow reader to see the reasoning that leads or supports to the idea you one conveying.
- Maintain goodwill.

Organizational Plans

Structure & Style (A5 memo)

- A memorandum, as the name suggest is an aid to memory of the reader.
- A5 meme is used for brief messages.

i) Providing confirmation and record of the various plan decision & activities of the organization.

Organizational Plans

A4 Memo

It may be used for:

i) Making informal reports.
ii) Outlining new policies.
iii) Giving briefing & instruction etc.

Why are memorandum written

Written records help to:

i) determine responsibility.
ii) clear up inconsistencies.
iii) record needed information.

Circular

Introduction

- Circular letters are used to send the same information to a number of people.
- Extensively used in:
  - sales campaigns.
  - announcing important developments in business.
- A circular letter is prepared once only and it may then be duplicated for distribution to the various recipients.

Circular

Writing Plan

Although circulars are being sent to many people, it is important to suggest an interest in the recipient by giving them a personal touch.

- Be brief – people will not read a long circular
- Make the letter as personal as possible by addressing each letter to a particularly person, by name if you know it.
- One recipient will read each individual letter.
- Create the impression of personal interest by using you.

Circular

- Explain why you are writing with more care than you would if you and your topic were already known to the recipient through previous specific contact.
- Express yourself in a way that will be understandable and congenial to everyone in a wide audience with varying backgrounds and abilities.
- Don't include detailed information or complex ideas.
- Make your letter more persuasive – not just to achieve its purposes, but to motivate the recipient to start reading it.
- Use word processing technology to personalize the circular to a very large extent.

Minutes of Formal Meetings

Minutes of meetings that follow parliamentary procedure are somewhat different in form from the informal minutes illustrated here. Formal minutes do not include discussions. Only motions, resolutions, committee assignments and reports, and other specific accomplishments are included. Topical headings are used for easy reference and how the recorder has briefly summarized a speaker's remarks.

Minutes of Formal Meetings

Program	Naeem Ahmad introduced Ms. Munir, an archaeologist at City University……
The meeting was adjourned at 5:15 pm.

Producing the Minutes

Resolution minutes

Meeting of boards of directions, for example – record only the decision reached, usually after a vote.

5 Liberty Branch

It was resolved that the company's liberty branch be closed with effect from 31 May 2006 and the premises, fixtures and fittings offered for sale

Producing the Minutes

Narrative Minutes(fuller picture & view)

Sometimes referred to as minutes of narration, narrative minutes tell more of the 'story of what happened and who said what at a meeting.

Narrative minutes are recorded in reported speech. This simply involves referring to committee members in the third person – either by their office – 'The chairman said..' or by name, 'Mr Naeem asked whether ….' When decisions are reached by a vote, expressions such as, 'it was generally agreed that….' 'It was therefore decided that….' Are used to introduce the details of the decision. Further, to keep the record objective and neutral, the passive is often used.

Producing the Minutes

Action Minutes

Busy committees sometimes like to introduce a right hand blank column beside the minutes in order to put a designated committee member's name against a particular task to be carried out:

6 Annual games

The secretary was asked to seek approval to use the company sports Ground again.

Action by: Secretary

Some rules of indirect speech)

'I'm sorry I'm late. I missed the bus.' DIRECT SPEECH

He said that he was sorry he was late. He had missed the bus.

He apologized for being late. He had missed the bus.

Some rules

Rule one: persons/pronouns
Rule two: the tenses of verbs
Rule three: the distancing effect
Rule four: conveying the tone of the direct speech

Model Business Reports

A Model Report

October 10, 2003

The General Manager,
Fit Garment Industries,
Multan Road Lahore.

Dear Sir,

Subject: Report on the strike of the workers in the factory.

Following your instructions, I have probed into the matter regarding the strike of all the workers in the factory. Here are my findings.

On Monday morning, in the production unit 2, two workers started a fight on a money matter. Ahmad had lent some money to Kareem, who made several promises but did not return a single penny.

Model Business Reports

On Monday morning Ahmad demanded an immediate return of his amount but instead of an apologetic behaviour, Kareem abused Ahmad. Hot remarks were exchanged. Kareem picked up a hammer and hit it hard on Ahmad's head. It started bleeding.

He was rushed to the hospital by the workers. Members of the labour union reached and all the workers took out a procession. The President of the union gave a call for strike. They raised slogans against the culprit. While addressing the mob, union leaders demanded a prompt termination of the culprit. They wanted to continue the strike till the acceptance of their demand.

However, on the assurance of the Production Manager, they agreed to call off their strike. Everything was done amicably.

Model Business Reports

Sir,

You have asked for my suggestions, so I recommend Mr. Kareem's termination. I do feel that a case of fraud and assault should be registered in the police station. Mr. Ahmad should be treated at the expenses of the company and should be granted paid leave for one month.

Yours truly,

A. Sheikh
Regional Manager

Definition

A Business Report is an impartial, objective, planned presentation of facts to one or more persons for a specific business purpose.

An orderly, objective message used to convey information from one organizational area to another or from one institution to another to assist in decision making or problem solving.

Purposes

Purpose of Report	Common Examples	Preparation & Distribution
To monitor and control operations	Plans, operating reports, personal activity reports	Internal reports move upward on recurring basis; external reports go to selected audiences.
To implement policies and procedures	Lasting guideline, position papers	Internal reports move downward or on a non-recurring basis
To comply with regulatory requirements	Reports IRS, SEC, EEOC, Human Rights Commission	External reports are sent on a recurring basis

Purposes

Purpose of Report	Common Examples	Reparation & Distribution
To obtain new business or findings	Sales and proposals	External reports are sent on non-recurring basis
To document client work	Interim progress reports, final reports	External reports are sent on a non-recurring basis
To guide decisions	Research reports, justification reports, trouble shooting reports	Internal reports move upward on a non-recurring basis

Classification of Report

Formal or Informal

Formal reports are carefully structured; they stress objectivity and organization, contain much detail, and are written in a style that tends to eliminate such elements as personal pronouns.

Informal reports are usually short messages with natural, casual use of language. The internal memorandum generally can be described as an informal report.

Classification of Report

Short or Long Reports?

"Short-or-long" can be a confusing classification for reports. A one-page memorandum is obviously short, and a term paper of twenty pages is obviously long. What about in-between lengths? One important distinction generally holds true: as a report becomes longer, it takes on more characteristics of formal reports. Thus, the formal-informal and short-long classifications are closely related.

What Makes A Good Business Report

The purpose of a business report is to convey essential information in an organized, useful format. And despite technological advances, the ability to accumulate data, organize facts, and compose a readable text remains a highly marketable skill.

A well-prepared business report will provide COMPLETE and ACCURATE information about an aspect of a company's operations. The subject of a report may vary from expenses to profits, production to sales, marketing trends to customer relations.

CLEAR, CONCISE, and READABLE.

Style

Informal:

I recommend that the spring campaign concentrate on newspaper and television advertising.

Formal:

It is recommended that the spring campaign concentrate on newspaper and television advertising.

Informal:

After discussing the matter with our department managers, we came up with the following information.

Formal:

The following report is based upon information provided by the managers of the Accounting, Marketing, Personnel and Advertising Departments.

Deciding on Format and Length

Preprinted form.

Basically for "fill in the blank" reports. Most are relatively short (five or fewer pages) and deal with routine information, often mainly numerical. Use this format when it is requested by the person authorizing the report.

Letter.

Common for reports of five or fewer pages that are directed to outsiders. These reports include all the normal parts of a letter, but they may also have headings, footnotes, tables and figures.

Memo.

Common for short (fewer than ten pages) informal reports distributed within an organization. Memos have headings at the top: To, From, Date, and Subject. In addition, like longer reports, they often have internal headings and sometimes have visual.

Types of Reports

A memo report is a cross between interoffice memo and a formal report.

Memo reports can be used to:

- Answer a request for information
- Report progress
- Make recommendations
- State facts
- Communicates ideas
- Send statistical data
- Explain trend within an organization

Two types of Memo Reports

1. Informational Memorandum Reports
2. Analytical memo Reports

Types of Reports

Informational Memorandum Reports

The central purpose of informational reports is to inform and to summarize information, similar to the speech to inform. Obviously, these reports vary widely in content, depending on type of business, purpose, topics discussed, and readers' needs. The following reports are often used in organizations:

Information Memo reports will:

- Inform
- To summarize some information requested
- Organize information objectively
- Make recommendation

Types of Reports

Conference Reports

Topics for conference reports range from summaries of personal sales called conferences to write-ups of meetings attended by hundreds of persons. For example, A credit or collection manager or account executive may make similar reports after conferences with clients. The text of such reports is usually organized by topics discussed or presented simply in a chronological order.

Types of Reports

Progress Reports

Progress reports show, "progress," accomplishments, or activity over time or at a given stage of a major assignment. The organizational plan is usually inductive.

1. Introduction (purpose, nature of project).
2. Description of accomplishments during the reporting period.
3. Unanticipated problems (if any).
4. Plans for the next reporting period.
5. Summary (overall appraisal of progress to date).

Types of Reports

Periodic Reports

They are routine reports prepared at regular time interval- daily, weekly, monthly quarterly or annually.

Examples of such reports are:

1. Sales Reports
2. Financial Reports

They reports are prepared on pre-printed form.

Analytical Memorandum Reports

This analytical memorandum report, seeks to analyze a situation or problem; it may end with or without a specific recommendation.

Such reports:

- On the causes of decline in Sales Volume.
- On the evaluation of a person before recruitment.
- On individual being considered for promotion.
- On the analysis of a particular book.

Analytical Memorandum Reports

Recommendation-Justification Reports

Many analytical reports will have a special purpose: to recommend a change or remain with the status quo (policy), support the idea that something is desirable or undesirable (value), or defend the accuracy of information (fact). Your report may be in response to a specific request, or it may be voluntary.

- Organizing memo reports
- Itemize the information.
- Present the fact with absolute fairness and accuracy.
- Be careful not to mix you opinion with the facts you report.
- Reserve your comments for your conclusions and recommendations.

Letters Reports

Letter reports are of two types:

1. Informational Letter Reports
2. Analytical Letter Reports

1. Informational Letter reports include:

- A staff report to financial officer regarding issues concerning personnel turnover in the certain department.
- A report in reply to inquiry about product and services provided by your Company.

2. Analytical Letter Reports

These include:

investigation of an issue or problem.

- Calculation of financial ratios of a company in order to command on its financial condition.

It includes:

1. Date
2. Inside Address
3. Salutation
4. Body (the heart of the report)
5. Complimentary close
6. Signature
7. Reference section

Often the letter report has a subject line, usually placed a line or two below the salutation.
Its length may range from two to five (seldom more) pages.
It may have two purposes: informational or analytical.

Seven Errors in Logic

1. Lack of objectivity. Seeing only the facts that support your views and ignoring any contradictory information.

   "Although half the survey population expressed dissatisfaction with our current product, a sizable portion finds it satisfactory."

Seven Errors in Logic

2. Hasty organization. Forming judgments on the basis of insufficient evidence.
   "Marketing strategy Z increased sales 15 percent in Lahore supermarkets. Let's try it in Karachi."
3. Hidden assumptions. Hiding a questionable major premise.
   "We are marketing product X in Print media because we marketed product Y in Print media."
4. Either or scenarios. Setting up two alternatives and not allowing for others.
   "We must open a new plant by spring, or we will go bankrupt."

Seven Errors in Logic

5. False causal relationships. Assuming that event A caused event B merely because A preceded B.

   "Sales increased 20 percent as soon as we hired the new sales director."

6. Begged questions. Assuming as proven what you are seeking to prove.

   "We need a standard procedure so that we will have standard results."

Seven Errors in Logic

7. Personal attacks or appeals to popular prejudice. Sinking people or ideas you don't like by chaining them to irrelevant but unpopular actions or ideas:

   "Mr Naeem mishandled the budget last years, so he can't be expected to motivate his staff."

Main Features of the Report

Following are main features of the report.

The Opening

A good opening accomplishes at least three things:

i) Introduces the subject of the report.
ii) Indicates why the subject is important.
iii) Previews the main ideas and the order in which they will be covered.

If you fail to provide readers with these clues to the structure of your report, they'll read aimlessly and miss important points, much like drivers trying to find their way through a strange city without a map.

Format for Informal Reports

1. For brief external reports, use letter format.
2. For brief internal reports, use memo or manuscript format.
3. Present all short informal reports properly.
    a. Single-space in the text.
    b. Double-space between paragraphs.
    c. Use headings where helpful, but try not to use more than three levels of headings.
    d. Call attention to significant information by setting it off visually with lists or indention.
    e. Include visual aids to emphasize and clarify the text.

Organizational Plan For Short Informal Reports

- Opening
- Body
- Closing

Organizational Plan For Short Informal Reports

Opening

1. For short, routine memos, use the subject line of the memo form and the first sentence or two of the text as the introduction.
2. For all other short reports, cover these topics in the introduction: purpose, scope, background, restrictions (in conducting the study), sources of information and methods of research, and organization of the report.
3. If using direct order, place conclusions and recommendations in the opening.

Organizational Plan For Short Informal Reports

Body (Findings and Supporting Details)

1. Use direct order for informational reports to receptive readers, developing idea around subtopics (chronologically, geographically and categorically).
2. Use direct order for analytical reports to receptive readers, developing points around conclusions or recommendations.
3. Use indirect order for analytical reports to skeptical or hostile readers, developing points around logical arguments.
4. Use an appropriate writing style.
   a. Use an informal style (I and We) for letter and memo reports, unless company custom calls for the impersonal third person.
   b. Use an impersonal style for more formal short reports.

Organizational Plan For Short Informal Reports

5. Maintain a consistent time frame by writing in either the present or the past tense.
6. Give each paragraph a topic sentence.
7. Link paragraphs by using transitional words and phrases.
8. Strive for readability by using short sentences, concrete words, and terminology that is appropriate for your readers.
9. Be accurate, through, and impartial in presenting the material.
10. Avoid including irrelevant and unnecessary details.
11. Include documentation for all material quoted or paraphrased from secondary sources, using a consistent format.

Organizational Plan For Short Informal Reports

Ending

1. In informational reports summarize major findings at the end, if you wish.
2. Summarize points in the same order in which they appear in the text.
3. In analytical reports using indirect order, list conclusions and recommendations at the end.
4. Be certain that conclusions and recommendations follow logically from facts presented in the text.
5. Consider using a list format for emphasis.
6. Avoid introducing new material in the summary, conclusions, or recommendations.

Report on the Law Admission Rate in a newly opened branch of a school

October 10, 2006

The Principal,
The School, Main Branch,
Lahore.

Dear Madam,

Subject: Causes of Low Admission Rate

This report is in response to your directive No. 123 September 20 which demands certain reasons of very poor admission rate in this branch. My findings are given below:

Model Business Reports

I. The location of our School building is not ideal.
II. The building itself is very old.
III. It does not appeal the visitors.
IV. We had been facing the problem of permanent faculty because direct conveyance is not yet available.
V. Parents lodged several complaints against the management, but we could not help it.

Considering these problems, I propose that:

1. The building of the school should be shifted to a main road.
2. Permanent faculty should be appointed.

Yours sincerely,

A Report On Slow Sales and Rising Complaints

TO: Rana Abid, Vice President of Marketing
FROM: Bashir Ahmad, National Sales Manager
DATE: September 12, 2006
SUBJECT: Major accounts sales problems

INTRODUCTION

This report outlines the results of my investigation into the recent slowdown in sales and the accompanying rise in sales-and service-related complaints from some of our largest customers.

As we discussed at last quarter's management meeting, major account sales dropped 12 percent over the last four quarters, whereas overall sales were up 7 percent. During the same time, we have noticed an increase in both formal and informal complaints from larger customers regarding how confusing and complicated it has become to do business with us.

My investigation started with in-depth discussions with the four regional sales managers, first as a group and then individually. The tension felt in the initial meeting eventually bubbled to the surface during my meetings with each manager. Staff members in each region are convinced that other regions are booking orders they don't deserve, with one region doing all the legwork only to see another region get credited with the sale and, naturally, the commission and quota credit.

I followed up the sales manager's discussions with informal talks and e-mail exchanges with several sales reps from each region. Virtually everyone who is involved with our major national accounts has a story to share. No one is happy with the situation, and I sense that some reps are walking away from major customers because the process is so frustrating.

Organizational Issues

When we divided the national sales force into four geographical regions last year, the idea was to focus our sales efforts and clarify responsibilities for each prospective and current customer. The regional managers have got to know their market territories very well, and sales have increased beyond even our most optimistic projections.

Unfortunately, while solving one problem, we seem to have created another. In the past 12 to 18 months, several regional customers have grown to national statuses. In addition, a few national retailers have taken on (or expressed interest in) our products. As a result, a significant portion of both our current sales and our future opportunities lie with these large national accounts.

Organizational Issues

I uncovered more than a dozen cases in which sales reps from two or more regions found themselves competing with each other by pursuing the same customer from different locations.

Moreover, the complaints from our major accounts about overlapping or nonexistent account coverage are a direct result of the regional organization.

Organizational Issues

Recommendations

In the light of the above findings I recommend:

(i) Areas may be reallocated.

(ii) A coordination cell may be set up in the head office to monitor the working of these regional offices.

(iii) A bulletin giving area wise sales achievements of every region may be circulated.

If there is anything else you would like to know, please call me.

Yours truly,

Part of a Formal Report

A formal reports manuscript format and impersonal tone convey an impression of professionalism. A format report can be either short (fewer than 10 pages) or long (10 pages or more). It is informational or analytical, direct or indirect. It may be targeted to readers inside or outside the organization.

There are three basic divisions of a formal report:

1. Prefatory Parts
2. Text Parts
3. Supplementary Parts

Lesson 31

Part of a Formal Report

There are three basic divisions of a formal report:

1. Prefatory Parts
2. Text Parts
3. Supplementary Parts

Part of a Formal Report

1 .Prefatory Parts are:

a) Cover
b) Title fly
c) Letter of authorization
d) Letter of acceptance
e) Letter of transmittal
f) Table of contents
g) List of illustrations
h) Synopsis or executive summer

Prefatory Parts

Cover

Use a cover only for long reports. Use a sturdy, plain, light cardboard with good page fasteners. With the cover on, the open pages should remain flat. Center the report title and your name three to four inches from the upper edge.

Title Fly

It is a plain sheet of paper with the title of the report on it.

Title Page

1. The title of the report.

2. The name, title and address of the person/group that authorized the report prepared for/submitted to.

3. The name, title and address of the person, group etc. that prepared the report, prepared by, submitted by.

4. The date on which the report was submitted.

Prefatory Parts

The title page signals the readers by giving the report title, author's name, name of person or organization to whom the report is addressed, and date of submission. Choose title information but not long, A Report of, A Study of, or A Survey of

Your title promises what your report will deliver by stating the report's purpose and content. A title in order to be effective must be clear, accurate, comprehensive, specific, concise and appropriately phrases.

Prefatory Parts

Place of Title Page Items

Do not number your title page, but count it as page (I) of your prefatory pages. Centre the title horizontally on the page, three to four inches below the upper edge, using all capital letters. If the title is longer than six or eight words, centre it on two or more lines.

Letter of Authorization and Letter of Acceptance

If you received written authorization (a letter or memo) you may want to include. It usually has direct request plan. Letter of Acceptance (or memo of acceptance) acknowledges the assignment. It follows good- news plan confirming time and money restriction and other pertinent detail.

Prefatory Parts

Letter of Transmittal (or memo of transmittal)

It conveys your report to the audience. It says what you'd say if you were handing the report to the person who authorized you. It has less formal tone.

Depending on the situation, your letter might:

- Acknowledge those who helped with the report.
- Refer readers to sections of special interest.
- Discuss the need and approaches for follow-up investigations.
- Suggest some special uses of the information.
- Urge the reader to take immediate action.
- Use good news plan.

Prefatory Parts

Table of Contents

This table outlines the text and list Prefatory Parts.

1. List preliminary items (transmittal letter, abstract) in your table of contents, numbering the pages with small roman numerals. (List items that appear at the end of the report, such as glossary, appendix, notes and bibliography section; number these pages with Arabic numerals, continuing the page sequence of the report proper, where page no. 1ist the first page of your report text.
2. Include no heading in the table of contents not listed as headings or subheadings in the report; your report text may, however, contain certain sub-headings.
3. Use different types of styles and indentations to show the various levels of heads.

Prefatory Parts

List of Illustrations

For simplicity sake, some reports prefer to include all visual aid as illustration or exhibits.

Put the list of figures and table on separate page if they won't fit on one page with the table of content.

Prefatory Parts

Synopsis or Executive Summary

A synopsis is a brief overview (one page or less) of report's most important point. It is also called abstract. Executive summary is a fully developed mini version of the report and is comprehensive.

1. Make your summary able to stand alone in meaning – a mini-report.
2. Make it intelligible to the general reader. Readers of summaries will vary widely in expertise, perhaps much more than those who read the report itself. So translate all technical data into plain English.
3. Add no new information. Simply summarize the report.
4. Stick to the order of your report.
5. Emphasize only major points.

Text of the Report

Proposal

Certain analytical reports are called proposals which include bids to perform work under a contract and plea for financial support from outsiders. Such bids and pleas are almost always format. It matters a little weather your proposal is a memo or a full document. What does matter is the structure you apply to writing good proposals.

i. Professors submit proposal to companies stating that they can help solve problems within a company.
ii. Advertising agencies bid on being the agency of record in publicizing a product or idea for a client.
iii. Companies submit proposal to foreign government to do project.

Proposal

Purposes of Proposals

Numerous groups solicit proposals Governments are the foremost requesters. These requests appear in newspapers trade publications. Request for Proposal (RFP) is directed towards a company with specific expertise. Proposal topic are varied such as:

- To sell property , machines, etc.
- To construct building bridges, highways.
- To survey water area for possible oil fields.

Proposal

Smaller Projects are also made own to individual and corporation.

Improving engineering and just-in-time (JIT) performance within a company.

Preparing managerial staff for work within or outside the country.

Planning and basic research before developing any new project.

Thus the proposal is similar to that of a recommendation justification report. Both aim to solve problem, alter a procedure, find answer to question, offer advice and training.

Proposal

Kinds of Proposal

- Research Proposal
- Business Proposal

i) Research Proposal

A research proposal is usually academic in nature, professors as school for which they work, desire to obtain grant in response to a request or an announcement from the government or other agency. Academic institutions submit most research reports.

Proposal

ii) Business Proposal

In length, proposal may be similar to other report, short or long, formal or informal. Like reports proposal may be solicited or unsolicited while writing a solicited business proposal remember you most likely to have many competitors also bidding for that contract.

Writing an unsolicited proposal, you need to convince the reader or review committee that you understand the organization's problem and that your firm or you are qualified to solve it successfully.

Parts of Proposal

Parts of Proposal

SUBJECT: Activity Plan, 2006

Our primary objective for 2006 is to introduce computers to the three branches, Sialkot, Gujranwala and Jung. Trips are planned to all these locations within the next month so we may see what each has accomplished toward this objective. In addition, I have planned to meet Mr. Hassan Ahmed, who has written three computer books and he will, I'm sure, have valuable ideas for us.

Specifically, I've outlined six objectives in order of priority:

- Introduce computers to three of our branches.
- Complete the programming there in our corporate office.
- Reduce property taxes by Rs. 160, 000.

Parts of Proposal

- Employ a national management-consulting firm by September.
- Establish controls on report reproduction and reduce costs by Rs. 5,000.
- Improve the format and detail of financial analysis provided to corporate each month.

I look forward to the upcoming year and progress toward these goals.

Parts of Proposal

- SUBJECT: Supervisory Skills Training Program Proposal

- Employee Development has been conducting an in-house supervisory course that focuses primarily on theory and information about management concepts and company policies. We would like to propose additional training for first- and second-line supervisors, focusing on skills only–specific behavioral guidance in supervising and motivating employees to increase productivity.
- The program would be administered with the help of ABC Consulting, Agency. The total cost of Rs 52,000 will cover customized behavior models, CD-ROM introductory and practice sessions, six line managers and/or staff certified by ABC as qualified trainers, two classes (20 participants each) of trained supervisors, and trainer manual and participant workbook for reproduction.

Market Report

Definition

A market report describes the condition of a commodity in the market on a certain date for a specific period. It points out the business conditions in a market at a given time.

Market Report may be of a day, a week, a month, a year or even a number of years.

Daily Market Report shows the price of goods on a mentioned date. It also describes the closing rates of the previous day, the opening rates of that day, the highest and the lowest rates and the demand and supply of the commodities on that particular day.

Daily newspapers, television, radio and internet give this information. Consumers take more interest in daily market report than traders.

Market Report

It contains closing rates of the last week, the opening rates of that week, the highest and lowest rates and the closing rates of that week. This report also determines the causes of variation in price and the expected price movement in the coming week. Business communities show a keen interest in such reports.

Monthly Market Report is an analysis of business done during the whole month. This report describes the closing rate of the commodities in the previous month, the opening rate of the month, highest and lowest and closing rate of the month. Newspapers, trade journals and monthly bulletins publish these reports.

Market Report

Value of Reading a Market Report

The Market Report makes us aware of the volume and nature of business in the market. Traders become aware of different conditions of the market. They can know something about the demand and supply of a commodity.

Market Reports help people guess the future movements of price. The market condition is exposed to everybody as a result of which prices become stable. These prices can be compared at different markets.

Market Report

Qualities Of A Good Market Report

1. Normally a Market Report is not personal. It should be written using third person and the past tense.
2. General readers should be able to understand the technical terms used in the report.
3. Words should be used economically. Unnecessary details must be avoided. It should not be so short that misses the essential information.
4. There should be a good analysis of changes of prices and demand and supply relationship.
5. Market Report should be based upon the facts. Events should be written in the minute details. Any writer of Market Report should be unbiased while concluding his report.

Market Report

How to read a Market Report

To comprehend a Market Report fully, it is necessary to read it carefully. Sometimes even an educated person faces difficulties to understand it. More practice is required to understand a market report. One should specially note the nature of report (daily, weekly, monthly or annual) the nature of commodity, volume of business and the trend of the market.

Market Report

How to explain a Market Report

Sometimes a market report is reproduced and sometimes it is explained. While reproducing a Market Report technical terms should concentrate on the given matter. Do not try to add or omit anything.

While explaining a Market Report try to extract the hidden meaning. First of all explain all the technical terms separately, then mention the price clearly.

After following the above instructions explain the subject matter (of the report) clearly.

Market Report

Stock Exchange Report

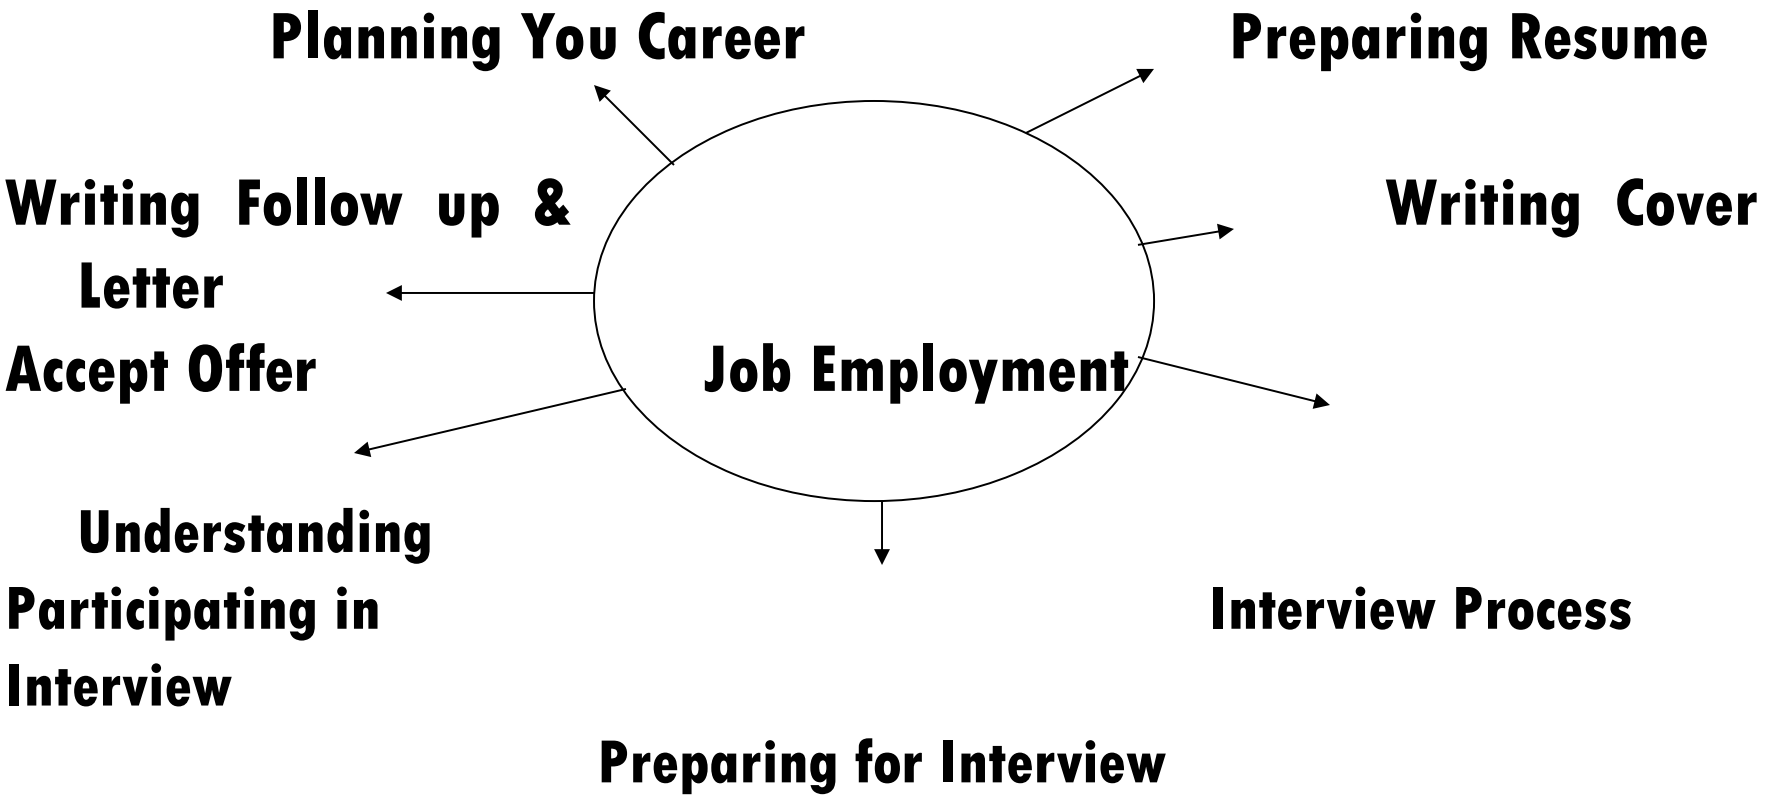

The KSE 100-share index managed to finish above the coveted level of 2,000 points after four previous abortive bids, indicating that it could maintain its forward thrust in the coming weeks also, boosted by some positive corporate developments.

Above the market dividend and bonus shares pouring in each day have altogether changed the investor's future perceptions about the size of capital gains and price appreciation on selected counters and no one is inclined to miss the rising market at this stage.

Analyze your Purpose & Audience

- Study your purpose and your audience to tailor your message for maximum effect.
- Gather relevant information.
- Establish a good relationship by highlighting those skills and qualifications that match each employer.

Writing Resumes & Application Letters

Analyze your purpose and audience

A resume is a structured, written summary of a person's education, employment background, and job qualifications. Resume is a form of advertising. It is intended to stimulate an employer's interest in your.

Writing Resumes & Application Letters

Fallacy	Fact
Don't think of a resume is to list all your skills and abilities	A resume will kindle employer interest and generate an interview
Get you the job you want	Get you in the door
Read carefully and thoroughly by an interested employer	In fact your resume probably has less than 45 seconds to make an impression.

A Good Resume

A good resume is a flexible and can be customized for various situations and employers.

Seven Qualities that Employer Seek

1. Think in term of result.
2. Know how to get things done.
3. Qualifications are well rounded.
4. You show signs of progress
5. You have personal standards of excellence
6. You are flexible and willing to try new things
7. You possess strong communication skills.

Appropriate Organizational Approach

Appropriate Organizational Approach

To focus attention on your strongest points, adopt the appropriate organizational approach – make your resume chronological, functional, or a combination of the two.

The Chronological Resume

In a chronological resume, the work-experience section dominates, immediately after the name and address and the objective. You develop this section by listing your jobs sequentially in reverse order, beginning with the most recent position and working backward toward earlier jobs. Under each listing, describe your responsibility and accomplishments, giving the most space to the most recent positions. If you're just graduating from college, you can vary this chronological approach by putting your educational qualifications before your experience.

The Chronological Resume

This approach has three key advantages:

(1) Employers are familiar with it & can easily find information
(2) it highlights growth and career progression
(3) it highlights employment continuity and stability

The chronological approach is especially appropriate if you have a strong employment history and are aiming for a job that builds on your current career path.

Business Communication

The Chronological Resume

The chorological approach is the most common way to organize a resume, and many employers prefer it. This approach has three key advantages:

(1) Employers are familiar with it & can easily find information.
(2) it highlights growth and career progression.
(3) it highlights employment continuity and stability.

The chronological approach is especially appropriate if you have a strong employment history and are aiming for a job that builds on your current career path.

The Chronological Resume

June 2006 to present
Chief Accountant / Financial Analyst. AZ Corporation

- Prepare accounting reports for wholesale giftware importer (Rs. 75 million annual sales).
- Audit financial transactions with suppliers.
- Created a computerized model to adjust account for fluctuations in currency exchange rates.
- Negotiated joint-venture agreements with major suppliers.
- Implemented electronic funds transfer for vendor disbursements, improving cash flow and eliminating payables clerk position.

The Functional Resume

A functional resume emphasizes a list of skills and accomplishments.

Advantages

(1) without having to read through job descriptions, employers can see what you can do for them.

(2) you can emphasize earlier job experience.

(3) you can de-emphasize any lack of career progress or lengthy unemployment.

The Functional Resume

Relevant Skills

Personal Selling/Retailing

- Led house wares department in employee sales for spring 2006.
- Created shelf displays for special housewares promotions.
- Sold the most benefit tickets during college fund-raising drive for local community center.

Public Interaction

- Commended by housewares manager for resolving customer complaints amicably.
- Was captain college xi and participated in many University Fixture.

The Functional Resume

Managing

- Training part-time housewares employees in cash register operation and customer service.
- Reworked housewares employee schedules as assistant manager.
- Organized summer activities for children 6-12 years old for city of Karachi – including reading programs, sports activities, etc.

The Combination Resume

A combination resume includes the best features of the chronological and functional approaches. Nevertheless, it is not commonly used, and it has two major disadvantages:

(1) it tends to be longer.
(2) it can be repetitious.

The Combination Resume

Skills and capabilities

- Plan and coordinate large-scale public events.
- Develop community support for concerts, festivals, and the arts.
- Manage publicity for major events.
- Coordinate activities of diverse community groups.
- Establish and maintain financial controls for public events.
- Negotiate contracts with performers, carpenters, electricians and suppliers.

Avoid Weak Statements

Responsible for developing a new branch.

Developed a new branch.

I was in charge of customer complaints.

Handled all customer complaints.

Won a cash prize of 100,000 for openings the most new customer accounts in my department.

Generated the highest number of new customer accounts in my department.

In addition to listing your accomplishments, include your name and address, academic credentials, employment history, activities and achievement, and relevant personal data.

Name and address

Name: an employer needs to know

who you are

where you can be reached: phone number/ e-email address contact information at school and at home both. cell phone.

No need to include the word resume.

Career Objective or Summary of Qualification

A marketing position in a growing company requiring international education.

Summary of qualifications: ten years of experience in international banking with track record.

The career objective or summary may be the only section read fully by the employer, so if you include either one, make it strong, concise, and convincing.

Present your educational background in depth, choosing facts that support your "theme".

Give heading such as "Education", "Professional College Training", or "Academic Preparation".

List the education section, the work-experience section focuses on your overall theme.

Show relationship between your previous responsibilities and your target field.

Call attention to skills you've developed and your progression from jobs of lesser to greater responsibility.

Describe your work experience, list your jobs in chronological order.

Include any part-time, even if unrelated to your current career objective. It shows your ability to get and hold a job – an important qualification in itself. If you have worked your way through school, say so. Employers interpret this as a sign of character.

Work Experience, Skills & Accomplishments

The work experience section lists all the related job you've had:

- Name and location of employer.
- What the organization does.
- Your functional title.
- How long you worked.
- Your duties and responsibilities.
- Your significant achievements or contributions.

Resume Deception

The most frequent forms of deception include the following:

- Claiming nonexistent educational credits.
- Inflating grade-point averages.
- Stretching dates of employment to cover gaps.
- Claiming to be self-employed.
- Claiming to have worked for companies that are out of business.
- Omitting jobs that might cause embarrassment.
- Exaggerating expertise or experience.

Personal Data

Leave personal interest off your resume-unless including them enhances the employer's understanding of why you would be the best candidate for the job.

Experts also recommend excluding salary information, reasons for leaving jobs, names of previous supervisors etc.

Revise your Resume

The key to writing a successful resume

Adopt the "you" attitude and focus on your audience.

Too long: The resume is not concise, relevant, and to the point.

To short or sketchy. The resume does not give enough information. for a proper evaluation of the application.

Hard to read. A lack of "write space" and of deceives such as indentions and boldfacing makes the reader's job more difficult.

Revise your Resume

Wordy. Descriptions are verbose, with numerous words used for what could be said more simply.

Too slick. The resume appears to have been written by someone other than the applicant.

Amateurish. The applicant appears to have little understanding of the business world.

Poorly reproduced. The print is faint and difficult to read.

Misspelled and ungrammatical throughout

Revise your Resume

Boastful. The overconfident tone makes the reader wonder whether the application's self-evaluation is realize.

Dishonest. The applicant claims to have expertise or work experience or work experience that he or she does not possess.

Applications Letters

Application Letters

- Why you submit your resume
- What you're sending
- How can employer benefit from reading it.

Applications Letters

Send you resume and application letter together, because each has a unique job to perform. The purpose of your resume is to get employers interested enough to contact you for an interview. The purpose of your application letter is to get employers interested enough to read your resume.

Drafting the cover Letter

- Focus on your audience.
- Be Specific.
- Avoid general objectives.
- Be as clear as possible.

Make-email cover even shorter. When sending a cover letter by e-mail, make it a bit shorter than traditional application letters.

Carefully check your spelling, mechanics, and grammar.

Applications Letters

- Two Types of Job Letters
  - Solicited Letters
  - Unsolicited Letters

Applications Letters

Two Types of Job Letters

Solicited application letter is in response to an announced job Opening.

- I would like to apply for the position of Accountant advertised is Sunday's newspaper.
- Please consider me a candidate for the Account Assistants position advertised in Yesterday's newspaper.

Applications Letters

In the October 31 issues of the Daily newspaper, your ad mentioned "proven skills". I believe I have what you are looking for in an administrative assistant. In addition to experience in a variety of office settings, I am familiar with the computer software used in your office.

Applications Letters

If there is a vacancy in your organization for a competent Accountant, I may please be considered a candidate.

Mr. Ahmed, the head of your marketing department tells me that you have an opening in your office for an experienced computer programmer I would like to apply for this position.

I understand that you are looking for an experienced computer programmer.

Both solicited and unsolicited letters present your qualifications similarly. The main difference is in the opening paragraph. In a solicited letter, you need no special attention-getter because you have been invited to apply.

Applications Letters

Getting Attention

Follow the AIDA approach when writing you application letter: attention, interest, desire, action.

Use the AIDA approach,
Focus on your audience,
Emphasize reader benefits.
Make sure your style project confidence.

An Unsolicited Confident Opening

The opening of an application letter captures attention, gives the reason you're writing, and states which job you're applying for.

Open a solicited application letter by mentioning how you found out about the position.

Applications Letters

Building Interest and Increasing Desire

- Emphasized your accomplishments
  - Suggests desirable personal qualities
  - Justifier's salary requirements
  - Refers to your resume

Applications Letters

Solicited Application Letters

Spell out a few of your key qualification, and back up your assertions with some convincing evidence of your ability to perform:

Poor: I completed three college courses in business communication, earning an A in each course, and have worked for the past year at Imperial Construction

Applications Letters

Improved: Using the skills gained from three semesters of college training in business communication, I developed a collection system for Imperial Construction that reduced its 2001 bad-debt losses by 3-7 percent or Rs. 90,000, over those of 2000. instead of using timeworn terminology, the new system's collection letters offered discount incentives for speedy payment.

The middle of your application letter also demonstrates a few significant job-related qualities, such as your diligence or your ability to work hard, learn quickly, handle responsibility, or get along with people:

Applications Letters

Another matter you might bring up in this section in your salary requirement – but only if the organization has asked you to state them.

Applications Letters

Toward the end of this section, refer the reader to your resume by citing a specific fact or general point covered there:

Motivating Action

The final paragraph of your application letter has two important functions:

To ask the reader for a specific action to make a reply easy.

Guideline for Writing Applications Letters

A. Attention (opening paragraph)

1. Open the letter by capturing the reader's attention in a businesslike way.
2. Use a summary, name, source, question, news, personalized, or creative opening.
3. State that you are applying for a job, and identify the position or the type of work you seek.

B. Interest and desire, or evidence of qualifications (next several paragraphs)

1. Present your key qualifications for the job, highlighting what is on your resume: job-related education and training; relevant work experience; and related activities, interests, and qualities.

Guideline for Writing Applications Letters

2. Adopt a mature, businesslike tone.
3. Eliminate boasting and exaggeration.
4. Back up your claims by citing specific, achievements in educational, work, and outside settings.
5. Demonstrate your knowledge of the organization by citing its operations or trends in the industry.
6. Link your education, experience, and personal qualities to the job requirements.
7. Relate aspects of your training or work experience to those of the target position.
8. Outline your educational preparation for the job.
9. Provide evidence that you can learn quickly, work hard, handle responsibility, and get along with others.

Guideline for Writing Applications Letters

10. Show that you possess personal qualities and work attitudes that are desirable for job performance.

Guideline for Writing Applications Letters

C. Action (Closing Paragraph)

1. Request an interview at the reader's convenience.
2. Request a screening interview with the nearest regional representative, if company headquarters is some distance away.
3. Make it easy to comply with your request.
4. Express your appreciation for an opportunity.
5. Repeat your strongest qualification.

If company does not recruit on your campus, call the person in charge of department, explain your situation, and ask for advice on best way to get an interview	Check with campus placement office; try to make direct personal contact with owner/manager or department head; get names and addresses from chamber head

Understanding the Interview Process

An employment interview is a formal meeting in which both employer and applicant ask questions and exchange information to learn more about each other.

Dual purpose

1. The organization's main objective is to find the best person
2. The applicant's main objective is to find the job test suited to his or her goals and capabilities.

Understanding the Interview Process

Organizations hundreds of new employees every years take a more systematic approach to the recruiting and interviewing process

Adjust your job search according to the company's size and hiring practices.

Start seeking jobs well in advance of the date you want to start work.

Understanding the Interview Process

The typical Sequence of Interviews

Most organization interview an applicant several times before extending a job offer:

- Screening stage
- Selection stage
- Final stage

The Typical Sequence of Interviews

Best approach during this selection stage on interviews is to show interest in the job.

During the final stage, the interview may try to sell your on working for the firm.

Types of Interview

Open-ended Interview
Stress Interview
Situational Interview
Group Interview
Video Interview

A structured interview is generally used in the screening stage. Structural interview is controlled by the interviewer to gather facts. Here the employer controls the interview by asking a series of prepared questions in a set order. Working form a checklist, the interviewer asks candidates each question, staying within an allotted time period.

Types of Interview

Open-ended interview is less formal and unstructured. In an open-ended interview, the recruiter encourages the candidate to speak freely.

To strike a delicate balance between being friendly and remembering that you're in a business situation.

Types of Interview

It tells how candidates relate to one another. Do they smile? Are they supportive of one another's comments? Do they try to score points at each other's expense?

Stress interviews help recruiters see how you handle yourself under pressure.

Types of Interview

Video interviews require some special preparation.

As employers try to cut travel costs, the video interview is becoming more popular. Companies use videoconferencing systems to screen middle-management candidates or to interview new recruits at universities. Experts recommend that candidates prepare a big differently for a video interview than for an in-person meeting:

- Ask for a preliminary phone conversation to establish rapport with the interviewer.
- Arrive early enough to get used to the equipment and setting.
- During the interview, speak clearly but not more slowly than normal.

Types of Interview

- Sit straight.
- Look up but not down.
- Try to show some animation, but not too much.

Situational interview. In situational interviews, candidates must explain how they would handle a specific set of circumstances. "

So the situational interview is a hands-on, at-work meeting between an employer who needs a job done and a worker who must be fully prepared to do the work.

Types of Interview

Regardless of the type of interview you may face, a personal interview is vital because your resume can't show whether you're lively and outgoing or subdued and low key, able to take direction or able to take charge. Each job requires a different mix of personality traits.

What Employers Look For

Employees who are self-motivated, enthusiastic, not afraid to make decisions, willing to take risks, intelligent, good communicators, and considerate of others.

What Employers Look For

Good impulse control, persistence, confidence, self-motivation, and empathy.

What's your IQ?

- Think clearly and stay focused on the task at hand while under pressure.
- Admit to your own mistakes.
- Meeting commitments and keep promises.
- Hold yourself accountable for meeting your goals.
- Seek new ideas for a variety of sources.
- Handle multiple demands and changing priorities.
- Make sacrifices to meet an important organizational goal.
- Cut through red tape and bend outdated rules when necessary.

Compatibility

Interviewers try to decide whether a candidate will be compatible with the other people in the organization.

They might ask about your interests, hobbies, awareness of world events, and so forth. You can expand your potential along these lines by reading widely, making an effort to meet new people, and participating in discussion groups, seminars, and workshops.

If you have no alternative, thank the interviewer by phone (in less than five minutes).
In the opening, express thanks and identify the job and the time and place of the interview.
Use the middle section for supporting details.
Express your enthusiasm about the organization and the job.
Add any new facts that may help your chances.
Try to repair any negative impression s you may have left during the interview.
Use an action ending.

B. Inquiries

1. Make an inquiry-by letter, phone, or mail-if you aren't informed of the decision by the promised date.
2. Follow the plan for direct request: main idea, necessary details, specific request.

Thank-you Messages

C. Requests for a time extension

D. Letters accepting a job offer

1. Send this message within five days of receiving the offer.
2. State clearly that you accept the offer, identify the job you're accepting, and include vital details.
3. Conclude with a statement that you look forward to reporting for work.

E. Letters rejecting job offer.

1. Open a letter of rejection warmly.
2. Explain why you are refusing the offer, and express your appreciation.
3. End on a sincere, positive note.

Completing oral presentation

- Evaluate the content of your presentation
- For clarity and conciseness
- Develop visual aid and coordinate them with your delivery
- Besides four areas:
  - Mastering the art of delivery
  - Preparing to speak
  - overcoming anxiety
  - Handling question responsively

Mastering the art of delivering

Memorization

Few speakers today memorize complete speeches. However, it can be useful for short speeches. In case of a long speech, often the first few words of a statement can be memorized.

Extemporaneous

This method of delivery is very carefully planned and practiced. In it, the speaker, makes a presentation with the help of an outline, note cards, or visual aid.

Mastering the art of delivering

Reading
In this method the whole presentation is read aloud.

Impromptu

It means a speech made without any preparation or made on the spur of the moment.

Preparing to Speak

- Knowing your material and practicing your delivery can build your confidence.
- Make sure you know the location and have everything you need(projector, microphone chalkboard etc.).
- If addressing audience that doesn't speak your language consider using an interpreter.
- Important to take into account any cultural differences in appearance mannerism or other custom.

Overcoming Anxiety

Overcoming anxiety

- If you are nervous about facing audience and experience stage fright
- Prepare more material
- Rehearse
- Think positively

Delivery

Body Language

- Stand rather than sit when you are delivering your presentation.
- Be aware of any repetitive hand gestures or awkward mannerisms that might irritate your audience.

Voice Quality

- You must be clearly audible at all times – don't let your voice drop at the end of sentences. If you vary your intonation, your voice will be more interesting to listen to and you will be able to make your points more effectively.

Visual aids

- You your visual aids confidently, making sure you allow your audience time to absorb information from flipcharts and transparencies.

Language

Simplicity: use short words and sentences that you are comfortable with. There is no benefit in using difficult language.

Clarity: Active verbs and concrete words are much clearer and easier to understand than passive verbs and abstract concepts.

Signaling: Indicate when you've completed one point or section in your presentation and are moving on the text. Give your audience clear signals as to the direction your presentation is taking.

Handling question responsively

- Question and answer period is very important.
- Give chance to obtain impotent information.
- To emphasize your main idea and supporting points.
- Treat hostile question as legitimate request for information.
- Maintain professionalism to improve your credibility.
- Focus on the questioner using body language to emphasize the fact that you are listening to him.
- keep your answer short and to the point.
- Maintain control by stating some ground rules in the beginning of the question and answer session.
- Respond unemotionally.
- Motivate question.
- Conclude your presentation on time.

Presentation on cell phone

- Welcome everyone.
- Mention handouts /graphics.
- Introduce the subject of the presentation.
- Outline the purpose and structure of the presentation.
- Present some statistics.
- Tell a personal anecdote.
- Sum up the statistics and their significance.
- Comment on market trends.
- Outline the major benefits of the new cell phone models.
- Invite questions.
- Sum up the main benefits of the new cell phone machines.
- Thank and conclude.

Presentation

'Good afternoon, everybody. I'd like to thank you all for being here'.

'My purpose today is to tell you about our corporate strategy for the next decade, and more specifically to bring you up to date with our plans for Quetta.'

To start with I'd like to describe briefly our current marketing policy in the Punjab. Then I'll illustrate some of the problems we're having over market share. After that I'll quickly outline the opportunities, we see for further progress in the 21st century. Finally I'll quickly sum up before concluding with some recommendations.

Presentation

Please feel free to interrupt me, if you have any questions at any time.

Now I'd like to draw your attention to chart B showing our sales revenue and pre-tax profits over the last ten years. You will notice that although turnover has risen, our profits have not increased at the same rate.

I've talked about our current position in the Punjab and I've pointed out some of the problems we are facing. Well, what option are open to us now? Where do we go form here?

Presentation

‘As I have already indicated, I think our first priority must be to build on the excellent, results we have achieved in certain markets in Sindh . I’m referring of course, to Karachi and Haidrabad. Let me quickly expand on those successes before we move on.

‘We should not forget the Peshawar market. Admittedly, our results have been poor so far, but there are signs the market is changing and we can learn a lot from our mistakes. On balance, though, I think we stand to gain most from concentrating on southern areas and I strongly recommend we put all our efforts into further expansion in these areas.

Presentation

In conclusion, may I thank you all for being such an attentive and responsive audience. Thank you also for your pertinent questions. Are there any final questions?

Negotiating Skills

- Negotiation is a process in which two or more parties try to resolve differences, solve problems and reach agreement.
- Good negotiation meets at as many interests as possible with an agreement that is durable.

Successful negotiators

- Collaborate with another party (or parties) to reach a mutually beneficial agreement.
- Use empathy
- Put themselves in the other person's position to show them that they fully understand their needs and concerns.
- Show Understanding

- Respond with honesty.
- Positive regard for yourself and the others involved will communicate your warmth and acceptance of them.
- Negotiators who have respect for themselves are also likely to show respect for others.
- Good negotiator's verbal and nonverbal communication is open, confident and oriented to the needs and concerns of both parties.

Negotiation Strategies

- Although negotiation has a specific purpose – to reach agreement – it does not always achieve this aim.
- Before attempting to negotiate, consider the differences between the following four strategies.
- 1. Win-win strategy
- 2. Win-lose strategy
- 3. Lose-win strategy
- 4. Lose-Lose strategy

VU GLOBAL BY AARISH ALI
(+96569002641)

Win-win strategies:

- Both parties are satisfied with the settlement negotiated.
- Aims to meet the needs of both parties.
- Not to win position or gain victories at one party's expense.
- Result is hard to achieve.
- Good verbal and nonverbal communication and careful listening all help to achieve it.
- Succeeds only if both parties concentrate on problem solving strategies and on communicating well.
- Each party is then more likely to be committed to the outcome.
- Even as you reach a win-win conclusion that suits both parties, circumstances can change. After successfully negotiating a difficult or important issue, take the time to follow up to check that the other party also considers that the result is win-win.

Win-lose strategies

•Result in the party who initiates the conflict being satisfied and the other dissatisfied. This strategy focuses on the initiator's problem to the exclusion of the other's.

•The initiator wins.

• Many people who adopt this strategy use a confusing presentation or a dominating style of speech and body movement. This invites the other side to be just as difficult, or to withdraw from conflict.

Lose-win strategies

• A situation in which the initiator is dissatisfied and the other is satisfied.

•The losing party usually makes too many concessions. In an extreme case, the win-lose style of negotiation and the lose-win style of negotiation can lead to a deadlock. Deadlocks can occur when neither party is satisfied by the negotiations.

Lose-lose strategies

- Result form a situation in which the objectives of both parties are too rigid.
- Both parties walk away from the negotiation dissatisfied.
- When agreement cannot be reached, a third party may mediate to help them reach a solution.
- In any negotiation, be aware of your own and the other person's objectives and expectations. Keep your objectives reasonable and try to avoid the lose-lose outcome.

Personal Styles in Negotiation

•Whenever people come together to negotiate, they bring their own personal styles, and these affect the way they communicate and handle the conflict.

Self-denying

•People difficult to negotiate.

•Are introverted and reticent with information (feedback).

•Hide their their feelings.

Self-protecting

•People use divisionary tactics,discussing other people or side tracking to other issues hide their true feelings.

Self-exposing

•People wish to be centre of attention, demand this attention by speaking loudly,speak over other use attention-seeking body movement or by ignoring feedback and other's view.

•Self-bargaining

•People show feeling if you show yours.wait until you lead them in negotiation open up when others initiate the process.

•Self-actualizing

•People, ideal negotiators, want information and feedback from others, present information constructively to aid the negotiation process.

Negotiation Skills

Psychological barriers

•When you are negotiating, psychological barriers may raise.

Psychological barriers to negotiation may include:

•Fear of being taken for a ride
•Wanting to be liked
•Guilt about wanting to be assertive
•Wanting to be 'nice'
•Feeling intimidated by so-called powerful people
•Fear of conflict or confrontation
•Fear of losing face with the boss or colleagues
•Lack of self-confidence

Power in Negotiation

•When an organization delegates people to get the job done, it gives them power to act. Power may be used to influence and, in some cases, to control people.

•It can also be used to bring about change. Power can be exerted over one person or a group by another person or group.

•Power used well achieves good communication and results.

•If you use it properly, you will make an impact on workplace.

•Power is a useful tool in the negotiation process.

Negotiation Skills

- Legitimate power
- Expertise power
- Reward power
- Coercive power
- Consultative power

Five types of workplace power .

•Legitimate power bases on a persons position or role in an organization.their authority and control over resources gives them power that is acknowledged.

•Expertise power people with more skill and strength than others.

•Reward power is exerted by someone who has control over resources desired by others.Such as person can influence and manipulate behavior.

•Coercive power is exerted by those who use their authority or any force, emotional or physical, against the interest of the other party.

•Consultative power is exerted by someone who seeks information, considers other's advice and make plans with others.

•They operate in any workplace, either singly or in combination. Perception of what power is and how it should be used varies between people and organizations. Acknowledgement of, and deference to, power depends on others' perception.

Use of Power

•A person who has power, particularly over the allocation and use of resources, must be willing and able to use that power to make decisions and take action.

• Don't depend solely on your workplace power source or your personal power, develop strategies that achieve results.

Five-step approach to negotiation

•Negotiating is a process in which two or more people (or parties) with common or conflict interests decide on a specific issue or business transaction. This may at times produce win-win, win-lose, lose-win or lose-lose outcome.

•The five-step approach is more suited to a situation where the issue is more important than the relationship.

•Plan for Negotiation

•Careful and thoughtful planning is essential before you negotiate. First, create a set of clear objectives to steer you towards the results you want. Prepared objectives allow you to progress through the five stages of negotiation.

Gather information that helps you:
•Give the other party relevant information.
•Make sure that this information is accurate and objective.
•Develop and maintain good relationships with the other party.
•Consider the other party's point of view.

Negotiation Skills

•Organize all the relevant information as this provides the ideal starting-point for your discussion. Plan your approach and the sequence of issues you wish to raise.

•Assess the other party's objectives.

•Identify links and common ground. Anticipate the party's likely response to each of your issues, and prepare answers.

• Discuss

•Set the communication climate by exchanging greetings;

•aim to establish trust and confidence.

•By being sociable you are able to establish a tension-free atmosphere.

• Confirm both parties' broad objectives and feelings.

•Listen carefully.

•Your intention is to establish common ground before moving into areas of difference.

Negotiation Skills

Propose

- Define the issues and specify in detail what you wish to resolve.
- Deal with one issue at a time.
- Try to keep to the point and avoid generalizing.

Negotiate the Issue

- Start by asking for what you want.
- Collaborate your intention.
- Try to generate as many options as possible.
- Throughout the discussion keep summarizing .

- Confirm Take the time to confirm what you have negotiated so far. Unless agreement is fully understood by both parties, the settlement may not last.
- Once the agreement is concluded, confirm that each party is committed to it.
- The five-step approach to negotiation will help you negotiate more effectively.
- Good negotiation strategies enable you to solve the problem in such a way that both parties win.

Negotiation Skills

Principled Bargaining

•Fisher and Ury (1991) developed a concept known as principled bargaining. This works well when a group of stakeholders have a common interest.

•An acknowledgement to work together for mutual outcomes is the essence of the principled bargaining approach.

•It acknowledges the Australian ethic of a 'fair go'. Everyone is treated equitably.

•In Fisher and Ury's view, each negotiated agreement should satisfy the following three criteria.

- It should a wise agreement, if possible.
- It should be efficient.
- It should improve,or at least not damage relationship.

•The principled negotiation method takes time, energy and commitment.

Negotiation Skills

- People
- Interest
- Option
- Criteria

Negotiation Skills

This method has four elements:

- People: To separate the people from the problem.
- Interest: To focus on interest rather than the position.
- Option: To generate a range of possibilities before choosing one.
- Criteria: To ensure that results are based on some objective standard.

Negotiation Skills

To implement the principled negotiation method you need to:

- State your case clearly and persuasively.
- Organize your facts well.
- Be aware of the timing and speed of the talks.
- Assess the others needs properly.
- Be sensitive to those needs.
- Not be unduly worried by conflict.
- Be committed to a win-win philosophy.
- Have patience.
- Some time you settle less than your goal.

BATNA stands for the 'best alternative to a negotiated agreement.' If the person you are negotiating with is your manager or supervisor you may have WATNA.

WATNA stand for 'worst alternative to a negotiated agreement.

Negotiation Skills

Negotiating methods

1. Compromise
2. collaboration
3. competition
4. accommodation
5. withdrawal or avoidance

Negotiating methods

- Compromise means to settle differences through concessions made by one or both parties.
- Collaboration involves people cooperating to produce a solution satisfactory to both parties (win-win).
- Competition often leads to one party gaining advantage over the other.
- Accommodation means that only one party is willing to oblige or adapt to meet the needs of the other. It produces a win-lose outcome.
- Withdrawal (avoidance) is a negotiation method that makes both parties lose.

Skills in conflict resolution and negotiation

In your organization several negotiating styles and strategies are likely to be demonstrated. Some achieve acceptable responses, others hinder negotiation and conflict resolution. Some solutions may be simple and practical. Others may be complex and difficult and may even require attitude changes and commitment from each party.

Personal Qualities

Ability to plan
Capacity to think clearly under stress
Ability to be practical
Capacity to communicate well
Ability to act assertively and with integrity
Ability to identify the interest of each party
Capacity to identify standards
Willingness to follow up

Listening Skills

- Difference between hearing and listening
- Hearing is a physical process. The ear receive stimuli or sensations and transmit them to brain
- Listening refers to the interpretive process that takes place when we hear something. When we listen, tore ,classify and label information.
- Listening is the most important of all the communication skills.

Listening Skills

What is exactly listening

- Listening is an active process of receiving aural stimulus Listening is an active rather than a passive process.
- Listening does not just happen, we must make it happen.
- A great time is spent listening and talking.

Listening serve two purposes in its process

1. As the sender of the message, listening to your receiver tells you how the other person has interpreted your message
2. As the receiver of a message listening to the other person allows you to understand their meaning

Listening Skills

- A variety of listening skills can be learned and developed with practice The following skills are worth practicing:
  - Attending listening
  - Encouraging listening
  - Reflecting listening
  - Active listening
- In attending listening, you focus on speaker by giving them your physical attention. You use whole body, eye contact, posture and personal space in short complete feedback.
- Encouraging listening
- It invites speaker to say more without pressurizing them to disclose their feelings, though it is their choice.
- Minimal and brief responses.
- Brief spoken responses let speaker know, you are listening and encouraging them to talk.

Listening Skills

Pause

•Brief pause allows speaker time to consider reflect and decide whether to continue speaking.

•Allow silence

•Use encouraging questions.

Reflecting listening

Restate the speakers feeling and contents.

Active Listening

An active listener has empathy with the speaker that shows that you understand the issue from other person point of view.

Faults in listening

- An average person remembers only half of what is said during a 10-minute conversation and forgets half of that within 48 hours.
- Studies agree that listening efficiency is no better than 28 to 30 percent.

Causes of Listening Pit Falls

- Prejudice
- Distraction
  - Not only the verbal messages, but also the nonverbal cues of the speaker affect our listening.
  - Among the negative factors, are noisy fan, poor light, distracting background music, bang of a horn, extreme weather.
  - Among the speaker's nonverbal cues are his clothes, his voice quality, his wearing of a certain perfume, reek of sweat, excessive gestures, etc.

Causes of Listening Pit Falls

Semantic barrier

Meaning of words also create problem in listening, as meaning of words vary from person to person influenced by prejudices. Sometimes the way a speaker utters a word annoys us.

Preshrinking

The average thinking capacity of a person is up to 800 words per minute while the average speaker utters 80 to 160 words per minute. This difference sometimes make listeners deviate from the speaker's words and they shift to something else. On the other hand people fill this gap by premature evaluation of what they are listening to. They arrive at the concluding thought quickly. This premature evaluation poses us our effective listening is impaired.

Causes of Listening Pit Falls

- .Borden or lack of interest

- Listener's opinion that the speaker lacks credibility Ways to improve listening:

(1) Be prepared. By knowing the speaker and the topic beforehand, you can prepare yourself for better understanding of the topic.

(2) Show positive attitude. Don't make premature assumptions before listening to a certain speaker. Always be ready to learn new ideas or facts.

Causes of Listening Pit Falls

(3) Listen to learn, not to refute. While listening, try to understand the points. Don't let them mix up with your biases.

(4) Concentrate. Pay attention to what is said.

Business Communication

Thinking about it

- Be inclusive with your thinking.
- Don't try to eliminate ideas too quickly.
- Build on your ideas and see how many different research projects you can identify.
- Try to be creative.
- Write down your ideas.
- This will allow you to revisit an idea later on.
- You can modify and change an idea.

Try not to be overly influenced at this time by what you feel others expect from you.

Thinking about it

- Be realistic about the time that you're willing to commit to your research project.

- It can be most helpful at this early stage to try a very small preliminary research study.

PREPARING THE PROPOSAL

- Read through someone else's research proposal.
  - How has the other proposal been organized?
  - What are the headings that have been used?
  - Does the other proposal seem clear?
  - Does it seem to suggest that the writer knows the subject area?

Make sure your proposal has a comprehensive review of the literature.

1) This research is needed.
2) The methodology I have chosen is most appropriate for the question that is being asked.

- A good proposal should consist of the first three chapters of the dissertation. It should begin with a statement of the problem/background information.
- Then move on to a review of the literature.
- Conclude with a defining of the research methodology.

"This is what I would like to do" to "This is what I did").

- Focus your research very specifically. Don't try to have your research cover too broad an area.
- Often the researcher finds that what he/she originally thought to be a good research project turns out to really be a group of research projects.
- Do one project for your dissertation and save the other projects for later in your career.
- Don't try to solve all of the problems in this one research project.

- Include a title on your proposal.
- A good proposal has a good title and it is the first thing to help the reader begin to understand the nature of your work.
- Work on your title early in the process and revisit it often. It's easy for a reader to identify those proposals where the title has been focused upon by the student.

What is Research

You need to select a topic, identify the objectives of your study plan and design a suitable methodology,devise research instrument, negotiate access to institutions material and people, collect,analysis and present information and finally, provides a well-written repot or dissertation.

We all learn how to to do research by actually doing it but a great deal of time can be wasted and goodwill dissipated by inadequate preparation.

What is Research

A formal document.
Knowing a subject thoroughly.
Expression of ones undertaking About the topic.
Result of ones intellectual curiosity.
Analysis and syntheses of different resources.
Reasonable bias free conclusion.

Howard and Sharp(1983)

Seeking through methodical processes to add to one's own body of knowing and hopefully, to that of other , by discovery of non-trivial facts and insight.

Drew (1980)

Research is conducted to solve problems and expand knowledge.
Research is a systematic way of asking questions, a systematic method of enquiry.

We find the word research being used in two senses:

1. The outcome of research is the establishment, publicizing or utilization of something that somebody-not the researcher or the person commissioning it- already knows.
2. The outcome of knowledge that nobody had before.

;Fiction

For many novelists, it is essential to prepare for their writing by researching the background in which they wish to set their narrative for accuracy of description, sensitivity to atmosphere, history of the period in which their fiction takes place and authenticity of the language.

Journalism

For journalist, especially in investigative journalism, long periods of time are spent researching their stories to uncover facts and secrets which their editorial policy judges to be in the public interest, and in cross-checking, what they are told or discover to establish its truth. This is not usually new truth, but information otherwise not public or deliberately withheld by another person. For them, the final criterion of truth may be bound up with legalities: The law of libel and slander, or The Official Secret Act.

Police work

Here again the criterion of validity of the research is circumscribed by the law: laws of evidence.

Medical research

This is research in the second sense: to find out things nobody knew before. The final criterion is the discovery of new truths, but also the translation of the new truths into practical treatments. Here ethical considerations receive a great deal of attention, both in terms of the human patients and the animals which are used for trials.

Science and technology

Everyone naturally associates research with science and technology, white coats and laboratories, but is should be remembered in this context that advances in the sciences are not restricted to the discovery of new facts: advances in theory development and in research methods and approaches occur in parallel.

Business Communication

- Avoid dead end topics those unsuitable for your interest or research.
- Avoid scattered, superficial research topics.

- Avoid topics that are too broader and narrow and has nothing new to offer.
- Pick a topic that shows your individuality, ability and interests.
- Continue refining and narrowing it to make it significantly specific.
- Ensure that your topic conveys what you want to convey.

Sections of a Thesis (Format)

The following are sections that most theses should contain:

Introduction
Describes the background to the research
Explains the reasons for doing the research
Outlines the aims of the research by presenting research questions or hypotheses.

First grab the attention and interest of your readers.

Introduce the problem to be studied.

Be careful of any generalizations.

Statement of the Problem

- Clearly state the problem that your thesis is going to address. Present relevant information about why this is an important problem.

- Describe what precisely you intend to show/argue and why.
- Is your research problem addressing a significant social problem, or is it testing some theoretical hypothesis?

- The issues raised ideally are timely, relevant to the problems or trends of the present time, and have broad applicability.

- Good questions are those allowing theories to be tested or, as when two theories make opposing predictions, be compared.

Background and Need. You should present relevant literature that supports the need for your project. Research articles, books, educational and government statistics are just a few sources that should be used here.
This section can include brief overviews of articles covered in the literature review that support the need for your project.

Rationale The rationale should define the larger problem being investigated, summarize what is known about the problem, define the gap(s) in the knowledge, and state what needs to be done to address the gap(s).

Purpose of the Project Based on the above background information, explain the purpose of the study. Explain what you hope the study will accomplish and why you chose to do this particular study. This should be supported with citations and specific information related to the study,

Research Questions/Hypotheses. Given the background above, you carefully state the hypothesis (ses) that will be tested in your thesis.

The hypothesis is the central question being researched. It should be expressed in straight-forward terms. A good hypothesis is comparative, measurable, and falsifiable.

Hypotheses are usually defined in "cause -effect" relationships. Any corollary hypotheses or secondary research questions should also be stated. Any supplemental definitions or discussion necessary to explain the hypothesis should be offered.

A thesis statement is what you'll PROVE, it is the ARGUMENT. It is the SCOPE, it is the MAIN IDEA and the PURPOSE of your paper and that you intend to develop, prove, defend or explore with evidence and therefore has an argumentative or informational edge and must not state the obvious.

- Hypothesis is a guide or a sign post to the researcher that keeps one on the track.
- The researcher tests the initial presupposition or hypothesis as works along.
- Hypothesis is formulated in such a way that it enables the researcher to test it.
- Hypothesis depicts and describes the method that follows during the study.
- Hypothesis is a kind of hunch that the researcher has about the topic.
- Hypothesis establishes the precise focus of the research study.
- Hypothesis helps decide the aims and objectives of the study.
- Hypothesis is of speculative nature, an imaginative preconception of"what might be true".
- Hypothesis is a welt established research question that can be in form of a descriptive statement or a question.

A thesis statement must emphasize Intention. So use a clause that will put your answer into the future, such as: I will… I hope to … I plan to …. I intend to … prove that, refute that… argue that… show that… establish that…. Demonstrate.

A good writer can assert the main ideas in a short sentence.
Revise your thesis statement as your develop your paper.
Few writers finish writing about the exact topic they begin with
It is ok to start with a vague or tentative thesis statement in your first draft.

Remember the less complicated and verbose you are in writing your statement the more readers will follow you.

Examples of General to Specific Thesis Statements:
Notice the transition...from General to Specific
Men and women are different.
Men and women communicate differently.
Men and women communicate differently. Men tend to focus on the literal aspect of what is being said in a conversation, women often "read between the lines* and focus more on intonation and body language.

Limitations: Provide a background for any limitations to this study. Be very specific for example the population to which your findings will be limited.

Literature Review

The literature review should discuss all of the research that has been done on the subject, since the purpose of the literature review is to concisely demonstrate your level of understanding of the research related to your project. You should not discuss all of the literature in-depth. Rather you should group your literature according to some general topics and only discuss specific studies, if they are "landmark".

Studies for your area of research (there should be 6-10 of these). A general baseline in 75 to 100 references (although many topics will appropriately have many more than this). The literature review should end with a discussion of how the literature relates to your study. What have others found regarding your research question? From their findings, coupled with your theory, develop a logical argument that leads to the statement of your hypothesis (this is your theoretical hypothesis expressed in terms of concepts). Your hypothesis/hypotheses should be the conclusion of this "Review" section.

Methodology

Describe data collection procedure to be used whether they be experiment, survey, questionnaires, observations, participatory methods, case studies document collection or other method.

The method must reliable that can be repeated same time and internally and externally valid Describe the sample employed and the variable used to test your hypothesis. One should give just enough information here so that you do not confuse the topic.

Methodology

External validity means that the results are general sable to a wide range of situations. It if often necessary to present evidence in this section that they study is actually achievable. This section or a separate section should also describe the data analysis methods to be used.

Describe the sample employed and the variable used to test your hypothesis.

Others can replicate your procedures (and hopefully come up with the same findings and conclusion as you did).

If you are using statistical analyses, explain the statistical methods. What do they mean? How are they used? Why are they more applicable here than other similar methods?

Data collection and Analysis Plan

It is not uncommon for novice researchers to collect a considerable amount of data and then realize that they don't know what to do with it. Will you use tables, spreadsheets or data bases to aggregate and analyze the data? Will computers be used to store, manipulate or evaluate it? How will this to done? Who will do it? How long will it take? Will it require special hardware, software, budge accounts, or personnel (such as technical assistant)? What kinds of analysis will be done? How will it be accomplished? How will the findings be presented for interpretation?

Discussion

This chapter should begin with a concise restatement of your study's purpose along with any needed background information. You should restate each of your hypotheses. Now that you have presented the results in the previous section, discuss them in this section. What, specifically, do the results mean? How can they be interpreted? Can they be interpreted in multiple ways? What do the findings tell you about your hypothesis? Do not claim more for your results than the data really shows. Avoid speculation.

Conclusions

This should summarize your results and discussion. You should include a list of the most important findings of your study in descending order of important. You should also provide a statement about the possibility of future study. What needs to be done and what does this study contribute? Since this is too often the only part of a paper that some individuals read it is important to reiterate what you intended to discover and what, in fact, you found.

Bibliography

Appendices

If you have material that is too long to include in a table (raw data, field notes, etc.) or not appropriate to a particular section it should be included as an appendix.

Tables and Figures

Tables and figures should appear in the text after they are first mentioned.

Research Perspectives

i) Quantitative Research

ii) Qualitative Research

Research Perspectives

The quantitative perspective holds that there is an objective reality that can be expressed numerically. As a consequence the quantitative perspective emphasizes studies that are experimental in nature, emphasize measurement, and search for relationships. If a study uses language such as this it probably has used a quantitative perspective: variable, controls, validity, reliability, hypothesis, statically significant.

Research Perspectives

A qualitative perspective emphasizes a phenomenological view in which reality inheres in the perceptions of individuals. Studies deriving from this perspective focus on meaning and understanding, and take place in naturally occurring situations. If a study uses language such as the following, it probably has used a qualitative perspective: naturalistic, field study, case study, context, situational, constructivism, meaning, multiple realities.

Research Perspectives

Four general ways of combining the two are based upon two factors: which one is primary and which, secondary; and which one is used first and which, second.

1. Quantitative primary, qualitative first. The research begins with a qualitative approach as the secondary method, using the qualitative data as a basis for collecting and interpreting the quantitative data (the primary method).
2. Quantitative primary, quantitative first. The researcher begins with a quantitative approach as the primary method, using qualitative follow-up to evaluate and interpret the quantitative results.

Research Perspectives

3. Qualitative primary, quantitative first. The researcher begins by collecting quantitative preliminary data as a basis for collecting and interpreting the primary qualitative data.
4. Qualitative primary, qualitative first. The researcher begins with the primary qualitative data, using quantitative follow up to interpret the qualitative data.

Research Types

To simplify the discussion, these are divided into whether they tend to use a quantitative or a qualitative perspective, although there is much overlapping in many of the types.

Research Types

Studies Primarily Quantitative in Nature

The following types of research are primarily quantitative in nature.

Experimental Research

Experimental research uses methods originally applied in the physical and biological sciences. In most experiments the following procedures are used: a sample of subjects is selected; they are assigned randomly to experimental and control groups; a treatment is administrated to the experimental group only. The two groups are then evaluated on the basis of the dependent variable, the consequence of the independent variable. The latter is the presumed cause of the dependent variable.

Research Types

Quasi-Experimental Research

A quasi-experimental design is one that follows the general procedures of experimental research, without the use of control group or without random assignment, since random assignment or the use of control groups is often not feasible in educational settings.

Causal-Comparative Research

Causal comparative studies are designed to determine the possible causes of a phenomenon. Sometimes these studies are called ex post facto research.

Research Types

Correlation Research

Correlation studies are designed to analyze the relationships between two or more variables, ordinarily through the use of correlation coefficients.

Descriptive Research

As the term implies, the purpose of descriptive research is to describe a phenomenon. Descriptive studies report frequencies, averages, and percentages.

Research Types

Evaluation Research

Evaluation research makes judgments about the merit or worth of educational programs, products, and organizations. It is typically undertaken in order to aid administrators in making professional decisions. Evaluation studies are usually described as either formative or summative. Formative studies are made while a new program or product is being developed; summative studies, when it has been completed.

Research Types

Studies Primarily Qualitative in Nature

The following types of research tend to take a qualitative perspective.

Case Study Research

A case study is an empirical inquiry that investigates a contemporary phenomenon within its real life context; when the boundaries between phenomenon and context are not clearly evident; and in which multiple source of evidence are used. Qualitative perspective, is concerned with exploring, describing, and explaining a phenomenon.

Research Types

Ethnographic research

Ethnographic research is a special types of case study research. It is distinguished from other types of case studies because it uses the theories and methods of anthropology to study the culture of schools and classrooms.

Action Research

Most action research documents how an educational problem was identified, understood, and solved by practitioners.

Research Methods

- Tests and measurements
- Interviews
- Observations
- Surveys
- Documents

Research Methods

Research methods, as the term is used here, are the specific techniques used to collect data with respect to the research problem. In general, five methods are typically used in educational research.

1. Tests and measurements. Tests are administered and measurements made to determine the extent of change.
2. Interviews. Interviews are conducted with individuals or groups to ascertain their perceptions.
3. Observations. Observations are made to determine what is occurring and what individuals are doing.
4. Surveys. Surveys are administered to assess opinions, perceptions, and attitudes.
5. Documents. Documents are analyzed to establish the record.

General APA Guidelines

Your essay should be typed, double-spaced on standard-sized paper (8.5 X 11 inches) with margins of 1 inch on all sides. Your final essay should include, in the order indicated below, as many of the following sections as are applicable, each of which should begin on a separate page:

Title page: includes a running head for publication, title, and byline and affiliation.

General APA Guidelines

Page numbers and running head: in the upper right-hand corner of each page, include a 1-2 word version of your title. Follow with five spaces and then the page number.

Abstract: If your instructor requires an abstract, write a 75-100 word overview of your essay, which should include your main idea and your major points. You also may want to mention any implications of your research. Place the abstract on its own page immediately after the title page. Center the word Abstract and then follow with the paragraph.

General APA Guidelines

Headings: Although not absolutely necessary, headings can be helpful. For undergraduate papers, only one level of heading is necessary. Major headings should be centered. Capitalize every word in the heading except articles (a, the), short prepositions (in, by, for), and coordinating conjunctions (and, but, or).

Visuals: Visuals such as tables and figures include graphs, charts, drawings, and photographs. Try to keep the visuals as simple as possible and clearly label each visual with an Arabic numeral (ex: Table 1, Table 2, etc.) and include the title of the visual. The label and the title should appear on separate lines above the table, flush left. Below the table, provide the source. A sample Figure treatment is shown below.

General APA Guidelines

General APA Guidelines

List of References:

Create your list of references on its own page after the last page of your text. Center the title References one inch from the top of the page. Double space. Alphabetize the list of references by the last name of the authors. If the work has no author or editor, alphabetize the work by the first word of the title (excluding A, An, or The).

In-Text Citations: The Basics

Reference citations in text are covered on pages 207-214 of the Publication Manual. What follows are some general guidelines for referring to the works of others in your essay.

Note: APA style requires authors to use the past tense or present perfect tense when using signal phrases to describe earlier research. E.g., Jones (1998) found or Jones (1998) has found...

In-Text Citations: The Basics

APA Citation Basics

When using APA format, follow the author-date method of in-text citation. This means that the author's last name and the year of publication for the source should appear in the text, E.g., (Jones, 1998), and a complete reference should appear in the reference list at the end of the paper.

If you are referring to an idea from another work but NOT directly quoting the material, or making reference to an entire book, article or other work, you only have to make reference to the author and year of publication in your in-text reference.

In-Text Citations: The Basics

In-Text Citation Capitalization, Quotes, and Italics/Underlining

Always capitalize proper nouns, including author names and initials: D. Jones.

If you refer to the title of a source within your paper, capitalize all words that are four letters long or greater within the title of a source: Permanence and Change. Exceptions apply to short words that are verbs, nouns, pronouns, adjectives, and adverbs: Writing New Media, There Is Nothing Left to Lose. (Note that in your References list, only the first word of a title will be capitalized: Writing new media.)

In-Text Citations: The Basics

When capitalizing titles, capitalize both words in a hyphenated compound word: Natural-Born Cyborgs.

Capitalize the first word after a dash or colon: "Defining Film Rhetoric: The Case of Hitchcock's Vertigo."

Italicize or underline the titles of longer works such as books, edited collections, movies, television series, documentaries, or albums: The Closing of the American Mind; The Wizard of Oz; Friends.

Put quotation marks around the titles of shorter works such as journal articles, articles from edited collections, television series episodes, and song titles: "Multimedia Narration: Constructing Possible Worlds"; "The One Where Chandler Can't Cry."

Short Quotations

If you are directly quoting from a work, you will need to include the author, year of publication, and the page number for the reference (preceded by "p."). Introduce the quotation with a signal phrase that includes the author's last name followed by the date of publication in parentheses.

According to Jones (1998), "Students often had difficulty using APA style, especially when it was their first time" (p. 199).

Jones (1998) found "students often had difficulty using APA style" (p. 199); what implications does this have for teachers?

Short Quotations

If the author is not named in a signal phrase, place the author's last name, the year of publication, and the page number in parentheses after the quotation.

She stated, "Students often had difficulty using APA style," (Jones, 1998, p. 199), but she did not offer an explanation as to why.

Long Quotations

Place direct quotations longer than 40 words in a free-standing block of typewritten lines, and omit quotation marks. Start the quotation on a new line, indented five spaces from the left margin. Type the entire quotation on the new margin, and indent the first line of any subsequent paragraph within the quotation five spaces from the new margin. Maintain double-spacing throughout. The parenthetical citation should come after closing punctuation mark.

Jones's (1998) study found the following:

Students often had difficulty using APA style, especially when it was their first time citing sources. This difficulty could be attributed to the fact that many students failed to purchase a style manual or to ask their teacher for help. (p. 199)

SUGGESTED BY MARISH ALI
(+96569002641)

Summary or Paraphrase

If you are paraphrasing an idea from another work, you only have to make reference to the author and year of publication in your in-text reference, but APA guidelines encourage you to also provide the page number (although it is not required.)

According to Jones (1998), APA style is a difficult citation format for first-time learners.

APA style is a difficult citation format for first-time learners (Jones, 1998, p. 199).

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

APA style has a series of important rules on using author names as part of the author-date system. There are additional rules for citing indirect sources, electronic sources, and sources without page numbers.

Citing an Author or Authors

A Work by Two Authors: Name both authors in the signal phrase or in the parentheses each time you cite the work. Use the word "and" between the authors' names within the text and use "&" in the parentheses.

Research by Wegener and Petty (1994) showed...
(Wegener & Petty, 1994)

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

A Work by Three to Five Authors: List all the authors in the signal phrase or in parentheses the first time you cite the source.

(Kernis, Cornell, Sun, Berry, & Harlow, 1993)

In subsequent citations, only use the first author's last name followed by "et al." in the signal phrase or in parentheses.

(Kernis et al., 1993)

In et al., et should not be followed by a period.

Six or More Authors: Use the first author's name followed by et al. in the signal phrase or in parentheses.

Harris et al. (2001) argued...

(Harris et al., 2001)

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

Unknown Author: If the work does not have an author, cite the source by its title in the signal phrase or use the first word or two in the parentheses. Titles of books and reports are italicized or underlined; titles of articles and chapters are in quotation marks.

A similar study was done of students learning to format research papers ("Using APA," 2001).

Note: In the rare case the "Anonymous" is used for the author, treat it as the author's name (Anonymous, 2001). In the reference list, use the name Anonymous as the author.

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

Organization as an Author: If the author is an organization or a government agency, mention the organization in the signal phrase or in the parenthetical citation the first time you cite the source.

According to the American Psychological Association (2000),...

If the organization has a well-known abbreviation, include the abbreviation in brackets the first time the source is cited and then use only the abbreviation in later citations.

First citation: (Mothers Against Drunk Driving [MADD], 2000)
Second citation: (MADD, 2000)

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

Two or More Works in the Same Parentheses: When your parenthetical citation includes two or more works, order them the same way they appear in the reference list, separated by a semi-colon.
(Berndt, 2002; Harlow, 1983)

Authors With the Same Last Name: To prevent confusion, use first initials with the last names.
(E. Johnson, 2001; L. Johnson, 1998)

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

Two or More Works by the Same Author in the Same Year: If you have two sources by the same author in the same year, use lower-case letters (a, b, c) with the year to order the entries in the reference list. Use the lower-case letters with the year in the in-text citation.

Research by Berndt (1981a) illustrated that…

Personal Communication: For interviews, letters, e-mails, and other person-to-person communication, cite the communicators name, the fact that it was personal communication, and the date of the communication. Do not include personal communication in the reference list.

(E. Robbins, personal communication, January 4, 2001).

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

A. P. Smith also claimed that many of her students had difficulties with APA style (personal communication, November 3, 2002).

Citing Indirect Sources

If you use a source that was cited in another source, name the original source in your signal phrase. List the secondary source in your reference list and include the secondary source in the parentheses.

Johnson argued that...(as cited in Smith, 2003, p.102).

Note: When citing material in parantheses, set off the citation with a comma, as above.

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

Electronic Sources

If possible, cite an electronic document the same as any other document by using the author-date style.

Kenneth (2000) explained...

Unknown Author and Unknown Date: If no author or date is given, use the title in your signal phrase or the first word or two of the title in the parentheses and use the abbreviation "n.d." (for "no date").

Another study of students and research decisions discovered that students succeeded with tutoring ("Tutoring and APA," n.d.).

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

Sources Without Page Numbers

When an electronic source lacks page numbers, you should try to include information that will help readers find the passage being cited. When an electronic document has numbered paragraphs, use the ¶ symbol, or the abbreviation "para." followed by the paragraph number (Hall, 2001, ¶ 5) or (Hall, 2001, para. 5). If the paragraphs are not numbered and the document includes headings, provide the appropriate heading and specify the paragraph under that heading. Note that in some electronic sources, like Web pages, people can use the Find function in their browser to locate any passages you cite.

In-Text Citations: Author//Authors

According to Smith (1997), ... (Mind over Matter section, para. 6).

Note: Never use the page numbers of Web pages you print out; different computers print Web pages with different pagination.
