Define Development Communication?

It is the art and science of human communication to facilitate speedy social development and transforming of a country from poverty to dynamic modern state. Art & Science means the creative use of human communication by research and applying scientific methods to solve development problems

Development Communication is done at macro level, whereas, Development Support Communication is practiced at micro-level. Explain this difference with the help of one example.

Development Communication is the art and science of human communication to bring speedy change in their society, transforming its people from poverty to dynamic economic state and promote social development.

Development Support Communication is a process to share information about development and social change agenda and its implementation. It creates links between beneficiaries, planners, donors and stake holders. It is target specific and limited.

Family planning program was introduced in Pakistan to control the rapid increase in population. It is only possible through dialogue and communication, listening people concerns and answering their questions . Development Communication takes place vertically from top to bottom (sender to receiver). It requires the use of technology. Women rights, Health Awareness, Child protection and right to cast vote all are examples of Development Communication.

To implement, it requires proper planning, including policy making, bringing stake holders to link with each other, supervising the program, arranging finance, managing its operation manpower, their training, visiting locations, preparing marketing, setting targets and measuring results. It will be at micro level because the people who will carry out this program will be limited and target oriented. It takes place at grass root level. Polio campaign in polio effected areas of country, effective use of pesticide at right time for better crops in agricultural areas of country.

What are the differences between DSC and DC

Development Communication (DC)

- It is used in project and programs that are at large scale (Macro Level).
- It requires the use of technology and depend upon technical mass media.
- It's target is general people and not for specific community.
- It is used to make development in any sector.
- It's is time bound, source oriented and has general goals.
- The message moves from sender to receiver and travel vertically, from top to bottom.

Development Support Communication (DSC)

- It is applicable at Micro-Level projects because of its small scale.
- It is for specific people or community therefore based on interpersonal communication.
- It's goals are clearly defined with specific measures.
- It is receiver oriented and importance given to the receiver before starting communication.
- It's has limits in each project and finished after achieving its goals.
- It is applicable at grass root levels and requires audiance participation.

Discuss some important social and economic factors that are causing urbanization in Pakistan.

Urbanization is a process in which more and more people leave villages and countryside and move to the cities and towns. It began during the industrial revolution, when people moved to cities in search of better jobs and work in the in the industries due to lack of opportunities in agriculture filed. Urbanization in Pakistan increased at an annual rate of 3% which is the fastest in South Asia. Currently one third of Pakistan's population is living in cities and it will become 50% in 2025. Following social and economic factors which are causing urbanization in Pakistan.

- Rapid Population Growth
- Employment Opportunities
- Quality Education
- Better livelihood
- Modernization (Services & Infrastructure)
- Stability and Security
- Natural Disasters

Rapid urbanization is one of the hurdle in the economic growth in emerging cities. It creates many challenges in tackling population, allocating resources and manage sustainability. Cities suffer from insufficient infrastructure, less availability of basic public services, social insecurity, environment and health issues. Crime rates increase in the cities. Govt needs to develop rural areas and provides more services at people's doorstep to stop rapid urbanization.

Write a brief note on environmental hazards caused by urbanization in Pakistan.

As more and more people are moving to the cities and towns, it creates environmental issue also. The agriculture land around cities is used to accommodate new housing societies and set up industries. Greenery is becoming less and new tress are not planted. Air is polluted due to the burning of organic compounds in factories and industries, diesel and petrol vehicles. People breathe that polluted air at home, office and outdoor. We see now a day's people cover their face and nose with filter to avoid dust going into their lungs. Water is also get polluted with chemical biological substances used for pesticides in residential and commercial areas. Liquid and industrial wastes along with domestic sewage contaminate normal water. The noise level is another environmental issue which is created by personal and commercial vehicles. It risks their physical and psychological health. Garbage, and overflowing of sewerage water make land pollution. Climate is changing and global warming is increasing due to greenhouse effect, de-freezing of glaciers and rise in temperature. People eat unhealthy food and more prone to the diseases in the cities. At the end all these things effect human health and their dream to have better and healthy life does not full filled.

What are the Principal ways of conveying public information

Development programs are based on public welfare. The success of these programs is based on that how successfully and efectively required information is passed to its public. There are four principal ways to be used:

- News and information distribution through radio, television, newspapers and educational programs supported by audios and visuals.
- Informatics: Access to database and digitally stored information, archives and cultural centre.
- Telecommunications: Through telephone, fax, telex, email and data transmission.
- Postal Services: Using mail, parcel and telegram services.

Define Modernization Theory?

A theory which explains the process of transformation from traditional or underdeveloped societies to modern societies. It has been one of the major perspective in sociology of national development. Its main focus is how premodern societies have transofrmed themselves into modern socities when gone through the process of economic growth and change in their cultural, social and political structures. It also focus on the adaption of new technologies due to the change in social and cultural structures. There are also opposing views of communist and capital parties, globalizationa and dependency thories.

What is Propaganda Model?

It was developed during World War II. It explains how to control the mind of public through manipulated spoken, written and pictorial representation in mass media. Mass media has a "Magic Bullet" effects to change peoples attitudes and behaviours.

Propaganda model explains that the news which audiance received go thorugh five filters that change the shape of the news. The corporate-owned news media will produce that news only which will server the interest of the powerfull.

Explain Development Journalism?

The term Development Joutnalism was first used in 1960 at the Press Foundation of Asia. It is the Mass media contribution in the social and development change in the society. It works at local level to promote change in society by providing information to the people. Usage of Mass media through news paper, radio and TV is effective and creating disruption to the traditional social structure.

Development Journalism is used to refer two types of journalism. 1st is the new school of journalism appeared in 1960. Its focus on improving conditions in developing countries and tell them how to improve. It also looks at proposed government projects to improve the situation in the country and inform different ways to improve them socially and economically.

In the 2nd type of Development Journalism, where other developed governments put heavy influence for the development of the nation. It is very usefull to promote education and empowerment in the society. It can also be used to restrict journalists and stop information going to the people. Journalist was told not to report on certain issues on the name of "development" and as a result people will not get the right information.

Explain Diffusion of innovations and its five stages?

Diffusion of Innovation is the book written by Everett M. Rogers whcih explains the process of adopting new innovations. It defines "the process in which innovation is communicated over time through different stages among the members of a society". These stages are: Knowledge, Persuasion, Decision, Implementation and Confirmation.

It is a process through which an individual or decision maker passes. Getting first knowledge about innovation, and showing an attitude towrads the innovation, making decision to adopt or reject, implementing innovation and decision confirmation.

Explain the five verbal communication skills according to Berlo?

According to Berlo, there are five verbal communication skills:

Encoding Skills:

Two are encoding skills (Speaking & Writing)

Decoding SKills:

Two are decoding skills (Listening and Reading).

The fifth skills is thought or reasoning which is very critical for both encoding and decoding. You could be going to object due to some reasons or think intellectual skils which is harmful to emotions or feelings is unreasonable because our communication skills affect our communication.

Dominant Paradigm? (3 Marks)

The main task of the Development Theory is to explain why some countries are underdeveloped and how they can develop themsleves. A paradigm is the framework of knowledge and beliefs that explain the different reasons in development theory. These theories can be devided on the basis of certain approaches.

In early days of development communication was dominated by modernization theory. It says that the lack of information and rigid cultural values are the core of development problems and could not be solved through economic assitance. In third world countries the culture (attitudes and behaviour of people) was the "bottleneck" in the adoption of modernaization. People have low self-esteem, showing resistance to innovation. It focus on moden values and information to transform people culture towards technology and adopting innovating ways of life.

Elements of Berlo in the role of communication

David Berlo model of communication has four components which explains communication process and it is called Sender-Message-Channel-Receiver (SMCR) model of communication. He focus more on the relationship between sender and receiver which is very important in communication process

Sender (Source)

Sender is the source of the message who originates the message and than it is sends it to a receiver. The following factors are very important in Sender and Receiver.
Communication Skills, Attitude, Knowledge, Social Systems and Culture.

Message

The message is the actual physical product from the source. It could be verbal (speaking and writing) or non verbal (gesture, symbols). The key factors affecting the message are: Content, Elements, Treatment, Structure and Code.

Channel

Channel is the medium which is used to send the message. In human communication, the five senses of a human being are used as channel in human communication and it affects the communication.
Hearing, Seeing, Touching, Smelling, Tasting.

Receiver

Receiver is the person who gets the message. To make communication effective it is believed that all elements of communication must by sync togather. The message will not be received in the same sense if the sender and receiver are not similar in the elements explained above. The receiver must be a good listener. Other important factors are:
Communication Skills, Attitude, Knowledge, Social Systems and Culture.

Explain Industrial Revolution?

In Britain when magor changes happened in the field of agriculture, manufacturing and transporatation from late 18th and early 19th centuries is called Industrial revolution. The rural societies in Europe, North America became industrail and urban and than it spread in the whole world. It was a magor turning point in human society and has a large impact on social, economic and cultural conditions of the societies.

Technology was the main factor of Industrail Revolution because it brough invention and improvement in human life. First, Industrialization transform the agriculture and raw production of natural resources into manufacturing and industries. Second the shift from rural areas to the urban areas where industries are setup with the use fo technology and allows people to earn wages for the imporvement in their lifes.

Explain the term mobilization?

Basically Mobilization means organizing and encouraging group of people for their collective efforts to achieve a particular objective. It means awareness of community member of a problem, identifying it on priority bases and take steps to solve it. The first step is to assess the problem at community level and take action to solve it with the support of community members.

Mobilization is a process through which community members become aware of a problem, identify the problem as a high priority for community action, and decide steps to take action (Thompson and Pertschuk 1992). It starts with problem assessment and analysis at the community level and moves to action on chosen courses, involving many strategic allies at all levels in a wide range of support activities.

What is Social Mobilization

Socail Mobilization is a term used by United Nations. It is a process which raise awareness , engage, motivate people and wide range of partners to demand for a social change in the society through dialogue. It is also known as Mass mobilization or Popular mobilization. It starts from grass root levels and take place in a large gatherings. It is also used by government to achieve national goals. A social mobilzation becomes successful it it is built on the basis of mutal benefits of all the partners and having decentralized structure. Partenrs interest is the main key which gives long life to the project.

Example:

1. Mobilation of massess in election to bring change in the government.
2. Government uses rallies and demonstration in their favour before taking national or international level decisions.

What is entertainment-education strategy?

The term Entertainment Education (EE) is the combination of two words entertainment and education. It is the process of designing messages to entertain and educate people on various social problems such as HIV prevention, maternal and child health. The messages disseminated through the media. The first EE was a Soap Opera on television that aired in 1969 in Peru and has been used in amy countries including India, Pakistan, Turkey and Philipines. The purpose of this strategy is to educate people on family planning, sexual relations and health issues. It has been also used for Literacy and agricultural development. It is a strategy whic is used to reach and maximise messages through entertainment and education.

What is meant by Visioning Session?

It is one of the Interpersonal Communication Tool used in the Participatory Development Communication. Visioning Session is a one - two hour public meeting used to support a group of people in developing a shared vision. First visioning sessions of a film or video take place. After this the source talk on particular issue and have discussion with the participants. It is a very effective tool to change people behaviour, raise awareness and motivate on particular issue. Its effectiveness is linked to the other activities of the oranization because only doing this will not bring noticable change in small or focused groups.

Interpersonal Communication

Interpersonal communication occurs when two (or a few) people talk face to face. An activity where we exchange views with each other's. Conversation, dialogue, interviews or group discussion are called Interpersonal Communication.

Each person also operates Intra-personally during the exchange.
An exchange with just two people involves at least three communication elements – the unique thinking done by each person and the overriding process created by the interpersonal exchange.

Behaviors determine the quality of interpersonal relationship. Behavior is the reflection of our thoughts, feelings and emotions. Motive controls our behavior.

Discuss the use of Video in Participatory Approach.

Make videos are very easy and handy now a days. Thanks to the digital video cameras or smart phones with high defination cameras. They can fit in pocket and their battery lifes goes upto 7-8 hours. The best advantage is that as soon as your record video, you can preview it on the spot or show to the small number of people. Operating is very easy and every member of the community knows how to record and send through social media. Video is more efffective to highlight a problem and record its causes without providing solutions. After watching the participants suggest the workable solution in discussion.

It was firt used in "Fogo Process" (A Canadian Island). The vide was shot to highlight an issues, shown to community members followed by community discussion. All this process was recorded which triggers other discussion to look for suitable solution.

Identify communication needs, objectives and activities?

If communication strategy is going to focus on broad problem as a starting point and plan communication activities often, the target will be missed even after doing lot of activities and hard work. The key to success is to identified the core issue at local level, identified communication objectives before proceeding further.

Material and Communication needs

First we have to look at the material resources required to solve the problem along with communication for sharing information, creating awareness, influencing policy makers and avoiding conflicts and support decision making. These two can taken care with systematic approach to reach towards solution.

Finding a drinking water in remote area? Search the best area and educate people to do water management and need tools and resources to cut tree and dig out well.

Communication Objectives

Comminication objectives are based on communication needs of a specific group. Once identified it needs to prioritise based on its urgency. These objectives could be achieved by raising awareness, educating people, influencing decision makers. Must ensure to meet the objectives management plan to be developed and setting up a committee to monitor the process and resolve conflicts. One thing we need to make sure to find out each group expectation. What will be the outcome in terms of attitude, behaviour and knowledge for the group.

Women on water use, how to secure their access to clean water, needs husband and wives general meeting, information about issue, and its solution and what will be the affect of their life and how to resolve conflict if arise.

According to Lazarsfeld two step flow information from media to opinion leaders and from leaders to masses?

Media is very important in creating awareness and educating people to adopt innovation but the interpersonal communication and personal sources are very curicial in makeing decisions. Katz and Lazarsfeld says that there are two ways on which the information flows Media to Openion leaders and Openion Leaders to masses. People always discuss othe community members before taking decision and they do not only rely on media. Media effects model emphasize on direct realtion between media and masses but Lazarsfled says the interpersonal communication is very curicial in shaping opinion. The change will take effect when both mass media and face to face interaction with society members will take palce.

Motivation to change is due to the communication and culture not because of economics and clearly explained that how farmers adopted new methods. People listen to the field workers more before adopting new technologies.

Participatory theories and approaches?

It is a term used to explain the theory and practices of communication used in the development process by involving people in decision making. It is said that the development communication is based on the Western Vision of progress by producing effective messages. Unfortunatley these messages did not bring remarkable change in peoples poverty and changing other structural problems in the third world. There must be some faulty and flaws in it that needs to be addressed.

Participatory theory says to amend the defination of development communication. It means the systematic approach to utilize communication channels and increase people participation in development to educate people at grass root levels. Commication is the key to socail relations and people shouyld not be forced to adopt technologies how much benificial it is for them.

It also critise to bring development changes in the cities by local elites with the help and support of foreigners specialists. Local people were not involved in the devvelopment initiatives. Government do what is best for agricultural people without getting on board and giving the sense of ownership. The top down approach believes that the government and developmet agencies has the correct information but it is not concieved by the local population and have incorrect beliefs. People believe these innovations came from outside and they do not own them and as a result either they reject innovation methods or look for modifications.

Development is not making bridges, roads and distributing electrical lines. Many of the agricultural projects faild because the farmers were hesitating to leave tradition methods and do not trust on the news one. Also the local people were not educated proplery on the use of resources. In case of availability of drinking water, it must be use for drinking but people wasted on washing cloths and dishes.

What is the role of media in development?

There was a strong belief in 1960 that the mass media easily change peoples perception on ideas anc can bring social change. When UN general Assembly said that 70% of the world polulation does not have adequate access to information the developing countries started to improve the communication system.

A man needs to communicate besides his basic requirement of food and shelter. Without communication no society can exist and survice. The media is also important for human being because it provides means of communication, support human development, educating people, informing healthy ways of life. Eploring new methods of agriculture in developing countries are depends on media and mobilisation of people. It has been realised that the effective use of Radio, Television and print media can bring significant change in the way of agriculture is cultivated.

The success of agricultural development programmes in developing countries largely depends on the nature and extent of use of mass media in mobilisation of people for development. The planners in developing countries realise that the development of agriculture could be hastened with the effective use of mass media. Radio, Television has been acclaimed to be the most effective media for diffusing the scientific knowledge to the masses. Educating people on social issues like women's rights, child labour, sexual harassment is all due to the media.

Explain Media Advocacy?

Media advocay is the strategic use of media to get advancement on social and public policies. It promte debate and highlight the health issues community face. It is dependent on mobilization of resources and manpower to change public opinion on certain issues. The information is disseminate through face to face interaction andmedia channels to get acceptance on political and social issues.

It also reject this concept that the media is the source of anti social messages and encourages that socially relevent thems should be added in the entertainment and education. It promotes social change in peoples behaviour instead of changing individuals attitude. That's why it treat health issues not personal issue but social issue.

What is Social marketing?

It is one of the influential stratigies in the field of development communication. It is one of the appraches which explains diffusion of innovation and behaviour cahnge models. It was a product of political and academic developments in the USA. It implements the standard techniques of commercail marketing to promote pro-social behavior in the sahep of consumer behavior. To do the anaylisis of the consumer you need to understand the cultrual complexities and conflicts that influnece the consumer behavior. It includes receiving information and processing it for decision making.

Social marketing came out of marketing and advertising. It deals communication as a tool for persuasion and flow from top to down. It highlight that more attention is required on behavioral changes rather than creating new ideas. Behavioral change is the social marketing bottom line. It has been used heavily in underdeveloping countires sucah as usage of condoms, breast-feeding and getting vacination for children.

What do you uvdmrtand by the rem Quantification? Briefly explain.

Quantification means reliance on per capita income as a mesurement main index. The expression "quality life" was not very famous until 1960s. Quantification depends on a very short range idea and perspective of the past 10-20 years maximum. Usually growth was the only factor people looked at if they wanted to quantity development on per capita basis. They never paid enough attention to the equality of life during the development phase. They had mentality set that equality could be discussed later on and the development was the only main focus.

In what situations role playing is used as an effective technique for community development? Discuss with example

Role playing is interesting to stimulate and allow people participation in smaller groups in order to gather their views, ideas and how they perceive certain things. Two to five members are choosen to pay certain character and their interaction with other members.

An example of this could be that one member takes the role of a police officer and the other member acts as a comundy member. Their conversation would be of How a police officer and a community member would talk and react to each other's actions.

After the whole play finish, the community will sit together and discuss the characteres and their role played and what it teaches other members of the community. They will also look for its objectives that are met or not.

What do you know about Neo Marxist Social Theory?

Neo Marxist Social theory was the result of modernization and it started in 1950 in Latin America. This theory reflects the analysis of the problems third work] faced due to the development of the capitalistic society. The countries were underdeveloped becaue pith. relationship with developed countries according to Marxist.

A capitalist system was created when a less developed country formed an alliance with the developed and rich country. The richer country used the resources of the poor country and exploded their weeknesses .

However modernised people and theories believed that the problems related to underdeveloped countries could not be balme of anything but rather were the result of

Discuss World Bank's key elements of empowerment to reduce poverty and to empower the poor people.

Poverty is one of the main issues the who world is facing. World Bank's trying to implement policies and take initiatives all over the workl to eliminate poverty and make people empowered.

The key elements of empowerment are:

1 Easy access to information could be made possible for all the people. All the key elements of development rely on the access to information.

2 People inclusion and there participation is required by discussing core issues at community level and also to give them the ownership of the development Projects.

3 To increase the capacity of the local organization to carry on the social and economic developments.

4 There must be some mechanism which make sure the accountability process. Everyone should be responsible and held accountable for their actions.

Enlist the main factors which help dominant paradigm to measure the development.
