Genesis of Two Nation Theory: The Foundational Phase

Introduction

Core Themes

- Concepts: Nation & Two-Nation Theory
- Role of Sir Syed Ahmad Khan: Reformer & Pioneer of ‘Two Nation Theory’
- Key Political Developments: Urdu Hindi Controversy, Indian National Congress and Partition of Bengal

Micro Learning Outcomes (MLOs)

By the end of this lecture, students will understand to:

- Define ‘Two Nation Theory’ and explain the historical background that contributed to the early development of the idea of ‘Two-Nation’ in the Subcontinent.
- Assess how Syed Ahmad Khan’s defense of Urdu emphasized Muslim cultural identity and helped in shaping the early concept of the Two-Nation Theory.
- Critically examine the impact of the Indian National Congress and the Partition of Bengal in reinforcing the idea of Muslims as a separate nation.

Definition & Notion of ‘Two Nation Theory’

➤ What is a ‘Nation’?

➤ Concept of ‘Two Nation Theory’

Muslims and Hindus of the Subcontinent were two separate and distinct nations because their civilizational foundations were fundamentally different. The difference was not only religious; it involved law, social organization, moral philosophy, culture, and political vision.

➤ Two Nation Theory: Keystone of Pakistan’s Ideology

Evolution of ‘Two Nation Theory’: Historical Perspective

Phase / Figure	Period	Core Idea Related to Two-Nation Concept
Qur’anic Interpretation	7th Century	The Qur’an distinguishes between Believers and Non-believers, emphasizing faith as the basis of community and identity.
Muhammad bin Qasim	8th Century	Introduced Islamic governance in Sindh, beginning Muslim political presence in the Subcontinent.
Abu Rayhan Al-Biruni	11th Century	Observed clear religious, cultural, and social differences between Muslims and Hindus.
Sheikh Ahmad Sirhindi (Mujaddid Alf-i-Thani)	16th–17th Century	Opposed religious syncretism of Akbar Emphasized revival of Islamic identity
Shah Waliullah	18th Century	Advocated Muslim unity and revival of Islamic political strength in the Subcontinent.
Syed Ahmad Shaheed	19th Century	Led religious and military efforts to protect Islam, reinforcing the idea of Muslims as a distinct community.
Sir Syed Ahmad Khan	19th Century	Clearly articulated that Hindus and Muslims are two distinct nations with separate religion, culture, and interests.

Rise of British Rule: Necessity of a Separate Muslim Political Identity

- Decline of the Mughal Empire and Muslims' Vulnerability
- British Administration: Marginalization of Muslims
- Need for a Separate Identity

Syed Ahmad Khan: Reconstruction and Revival of Muslim Identity

- Emerged as a Reformer & Visionary Political Leader
- Three Principles of Sir Syed Ahmad's Political Approach
 1. Devote your self for education
 2. Show loyalty to the British
 3. Aloofness from politics
- Restored Lost Muslim Identity

Urdu–Hindi Controversy (1867): Emergence of ‘Two Nation’ Idea

Role of Sir Syed Ahmad

- Initially Advocated Hindu Muslim Unity

“The two eyes of the beautiful bride, Hindustan”

- Beginning of Political Consciousness: Language a Marker of Identity
- Anti-Urdu Movement → Demand to Replace Urdu with Hindi
- Navigated the idea of ‘Two Nation’

“I am now convinced that the two nations will not join wholeheartedly in anything.”

Urdu–Hindi Controversy (1867): Emergence of ‘Two Nation’ Idea

- First asserted Muslims as a ‘Qaum’ (Nation)
- Pioneer of ‘Two Nation Theory’
- Separate Entity
- Protection & Defense of Urdu: Role of Mohsin-ul-Mulk, A Close Associate of Syed Ahmad
- Foundation of Urdu Defence Association

Indian National Congress: Muslims Aloofness from Politics

- Formation of Indian National Congress (1885)
- Fear of Hindu Majoritarianism
- Sir Syed Ahmad Khan's Advice: The Policy of Political Aloofness

Majoritarianism (“One Man, One Vote”) Vs. Separate Electorates

- Majoritarianism: One Man, One Vote
- Risk of Political Domination by Majority (Hindus)
- Indian Councils Act of 1892: The Formation of Legislative Council
- Muslims’ Demand for Separate Electorates for Safeguards

Muslim Community: Elect Their Own Representatives

Partition of Bengal (1905): Demographic Recognition

- Administrative Division by Lord Curzon
- Recognition of Muslim Majority Rule
- Muslim Support vs Hindu Opposition
- Reversal of Decision: Partition of Bengal (1911)

Lahore Resolution (1940) and Role of Muhammad Ali Jinnah

Micro Learning Outcomes (MILOs)

Students will be able to:

- Describe the background of the Lahore Resolution (1940).
- Explain the features of the Lahore Resolution (1940).
- Analyze the role of Muhammad Ali Jinnah in the Lahore Resolution (1940).

Need for Lahore Resolution

- Muslim League's weak performance in 1937 elections
- Congress Ministries rule 1937-1939
- Imposition of cultural symbols (language, songs) increased tensions
- Muslims fears under Hindu majority rule
- Demand shifted from safeguards to a separate homeland

Lahore Resolution 1940

- The session (March 1940) timeline
- Who attended (Leadership of Muslim League)
- Detailed discussions addressed Muslim political grievances
- Jinnah's address defined Muslims as a separate nation
- The resolution's adoption reflected a unified political decision

Text of Lahore Resolution

- The resolution rejected any constitution unacceptable to Muslims
- It proposed territorial reorganization based on Muslim-majority regions
- It demanded autonomous and sovereign political units
- It included safeguards for minorities within these regions
- “Pakistan” was not mentioned

Objectives of Lahore Resolution

- To establish independent political units for Muslims' survival
- To ensure full sovereignty in governance and decision-making
- To recognize Muslims as a separate nation, not a minority
- To protect religious, cultural, and economic identity
- To guarantee minority rights within Muslim-majority states

Features of Lahore Resolution

- It was based on the Two-Nation Theory separating Muslims and Hindus
- It proposed autonomous units rather than a centralized state
- The term “independent states” allowed flexibility in structure
- It identified Muslim-majority areas as the territorial base
- It ensured minority protection alongside majority rule
- It used a constitutional and legal approach, not emotional appeal

Role of Muhammad Ali Jinnah

- Jinnah reorganized the Muslim League into a disciplined political force
- He strongly advocated the Two-Nation Theory with logical arguments
- He rejected the idea of coexistence under a Hindu-majority system
- His address transformed ideology into a clear political demand
- He ensured unity and successful adoption of the resolution

Reactions to Lahore Resolution

- Congress rejected it as a threat to Indian unity
- Hindu press criticized and labeled it as the “Pakistan Resolution”
- The British adopted a cautious and strategic neutral position
- Muslims widely supported it, strengthening the League’s influence

Impact of Lahore Resolution

- Muslim politics: from safeguards to independence demand
- The Muslim League: sole representative of Muslims
- Hindu-Muslim political divide
- Strengthened Muslim identity
- Muslim question on international attention

Concluding Remarks

- The resolution marked a turning point in Muslim political struggle
- It unified Muslims under the goal of an independent state
- Jinnah's leadership played a decisive role in its success
- It laid the foundation for the creation of Pakistan in 1947
