

Topics no 159 to 161

Topic no 159

- What is Reflection on Professional Roles and Reflecting on Notions of Professionalism?

Reflecting on professional roles means we need to think for ourselves, what we really mean by professionalism. It's true to say that professionalism for a teacher is not simply a matter of having expertise of a subject that's clearly insufficient. There are other things for the reflective practitioner, for the teaching professional which are equally important. One of those is the ability to work with their subject knowledge that the content of what they're teaching, in innovative and imaginative ways. There's another consideration and that's the pedagogy of the subject.

- Define professionalism

Professionalism is made up of certain areas, that we need to consider in terms of development, there's intellectual development in other words the knowledge of our subject. Professionalism is made up of our values and beliefs about teaching and learning. In terms of these development areas for professionalism there are certain areas of change that we can look at, change in terms of the knowledge

- Functional Development

Functional development there the ability that we have to pass on that knowledge to others. Then there's also attitudinal development.

Topic no 160

- Define Relations with Pupils?

Reflecting on professional roles leads us to consider our professional relationships with pupils. What is regarded as professional must therefore be linked with the responsibilities that we have the in-action responsibilities that we have as teachers as reflective practitioners in the classroom. Reflective practitioners must be seen to treat pupils with respect and fairness. This underlies the professional relationship that we have. This requires the reflective practitioner to operate with a working knowledge of students backgrounds their social and cultural backgrounds, as well as their interests and needs for learning and the experiences.

- Define Teacher as a mentor?

One particular role is the teacher as a mentor. A mentor is somebody who is working alongside students in the classroom, supporting and encouraging whilst challenging and cheerleading the successes of the students. The teacher is also within a professional role taking on some responsibilities as a parent in the classroom. There a teacher with students in the school environment must realize and also reflect on their responsibilities of care and nurture and support, that they have within that parental role in the classroom.

- What are the Teacher as a professional in there in action professionalism?

The teacher as a professional in there in action professionalism, in action responsibilities in the classroom need also to work as a participant observer of their own practice. In this way their professionalism can grow and their objectivity about their professional role can support the professional relationships that they have with students, also there's the teacher as career in the classroom.

Topic no 161

- Define Reflection on Professional Roles?

Reflecting on professional roles leads us to a consideration of reflecting on our professional relationships with colleagues. When your inner school as a teacher of course you're not working in isolation. You're working as part of a group of professionals ideally as part of a team in the school. What you need to reflect on is how you are regarded within the team by the team members. Are you a productive and contributing member of the team? Your professional relationships with colleagues are a real opportunity for you to develop as a professional provide a real opportunity for you to extend your thinking.

- Define Relations with Colleagues?

In a school environment working with colleagues sharing with colleagues and working with others. We can also think of contributing to the school, a contributing to our colleague through things like working together.

- Define Professionally with colleagues?

We can see that there are many different ways that we can engage professionally with colleagues and with other professionals in the school. Reflecting with colleagues is very important for us because it really does not only help us integrate into the school and feel with other professionals in the school but it really is an opportunity, to grow professionally with support and encouragement from others.

REHMANI