Final-Term (Solved)

ABSTRACT

This comprehensive collection of notes is accurately crafted to empower students to excel academically, ensuring they achieve a minimum of 80% marks in their examinations. The content is organized with clarity and precision, focusing on key concepts, critical analyses, and practical applications tailored to the syllabus. These notes serve as a reliable resource for both thorough preparation and last-minute revision. Designed to inspire confidence and mastery, this guide is an essential tool for students striving for academic excellence.

CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

(03 Marks Questions)

Q. Define Context

Context refers to the circumstances surrounding a discourse, including the linguistic, situational, social, and cultural background that influences meaning and interpretation.

Q. Define Conventional Implicature and Particularized Implicature

- Conventional Implicature: These do not require specific context and are derived from the conventional meaning of words. Examples include 'but' (contrast), 'even' (unexpectedness), and 'yet' (future change).
- Particularized Implicature: These depend on the context of the conversation. The meaning is inferred based on situational factors and relevance.

Q. Objectives of English-Urdu Newspapers

- To explore the significance of headlines in discourse and society.
- To investigate how headlines represent the same event differently.
- To analyze how headlines influence ideological construction.
- To identify linguistic similarities and differences among various newspapers.

Q. Three Important Areas of Media CDA Under Research

- Structural conventions of media texts and language
- Representation and normalization of ideologies in media
- Sociological implications of media discourses, including capitalism, neoliberalism, and racism.

Q. How Ethnographic Discourse Analysis Contributes to CDA

Ethnographic discourse analysis provides a contextualized understanding of discourse by analyzing how language is used in specific social and cultural contexts. It helps in revealing power dynamics and ideological structures in discourse.

Q. The Discursive Study of Imran Khan's Speech

A critical discourse analysis of Imran Khan's 2013 election speech showed that:

- He used ideologically loaded discourse.
- His language strategically framed political objectives.
- His speech contained repetition, positive self-representation, and negative other-representation.

Q. Foucault's Theory of Power (in 4-5 lines)

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

Foucault's theory of power suggests that power is not only centralized but also widely dispersed across social institutions and practices. It operates through discourse and knowledge, shaping individuals' behavior. Power is both restrictive and productive, influencing norms and self-regulation. Resistance and counter-resistance are inherent in power relations.

Q. Cook's View on Advertising and CDA

Cook views advertising as a persuasive discourse that shapes consumer behavior and ideologies. CDA examines how advertisements use linguistic and visual strategies to create implicit meanings and influence public perceptions.

Q. Three Characteristics of Corpus Analysis

- It involves analyzing large text corpora.
- It uses computational tools to examine linguistic patterns.
- It helps in identifying discourse trends over time.

Q. Four Analytical Types of Media Studies in CDA

- Structural analysis of media language
- Representation of social identities
- Ideological functions of media discourse
- Sociological implications of media messages

Q. Key Topics in Television and Discourse Studies

- Representation of gender, race, and class
- Ideological construction in news and entertainment
- Media framing and audience interpretation

Q. Positioning and Subjectivity in Media Studies and CDA

Positioning refers to how individuals are placed within discourse, influencing their identity and perspectives. Subjectivity is the way media constructs individual identities through discourse, shaping public perceptions and ideological stances

Q. Border Politics in Discourse Studies

Border politics in discourse studies examine how language constructs national, cultural, and ideological boundaries. It includes issues like migration, identity, and power relations between nations.

Q. Three Grice's Maxims

- Maxim of Quantity: Provide the right amount of information.

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

- Maxim of Quality: Be truthful.
- Maxim of Relation: Be relevant

Q. What is terrorism

Terrorism refers to the use of violence and intimidation, especially against civilians, in the pursuit of political aims. It is characterized by its deliberate targeting of non-combatants and its intent to create fear and coerce governments or societies to achieve specific ideological goals.

Terrorism was conceptualised as “savage acts of violence” which strive to “stop the advance of freedom” (Bush, 28/6/05). As such terrorism came to represent the metaphorical divide between the “return of tyranny and the death of democracy” (Bush, 24/5/04).

Q. Class talk by different linguists

Class talk refers to the way language is used in classroom settings, often analyzed by different linguists to understand how teachers and students interact, how knowledge is constructed, and how power dynamics play out in educational environments.

Turgeon, Taylor and Niehaus (2014) provide a good example of how public policy talk can construct class and class relations, as they critically analyse how welfare-to-work programme managers in the United States talk about welfare recipients, using what they call ‘classtalk’. The ‘classtalk’, may invoke a ‘culture of poverty’ ideology and ignores structural conditions and causes of poverty” (Turgeon et al. 2014)

Q. Three strands which are similar when the project is media CDA

When the project is media CDA, the three strands that are often similar include:

- ✚ Analysis of representation: How different groups, events, and issues are portrayed in the media.
- ✚ Analysis of media production: How media content is created, including the role of journalists, editors, and media organizations.
- ✚ Analysis of audience reception: How media messages are interpreted and understood by different audiences.

Q. Framework for Analysis of Media Discourse

- ✚ Textual analysis: Layout and structural organization Objects and Actors Language, grammar and rhetoric Discursive strategies Ideological standpoints
- ✚ Contextual analysis: Comparative-synchronic analysis Historical-diachronic analysis

Q. DHA is three-dimensional

- ✚ Specific contents or topics of a specific discourse are identified;
- ✚ discursive strategies are investigated;

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

- ✚ linguistic means are examined as types, and the specific, context-dependent linguistic realizations are examined as tokens.

Q. discursive construction of national identities comprised three dimensions

- ✚ content,
- ✚ strategies and
- ✚ realisations

Q. Write two strengths of textbook discourse analysis

Two strengths of critical discourse analyses of textbooks are: first, their insistence on a research aesthetic of 'smallness' and 'slowness' (cf. Silverman 1999). Semantic, argumentation and lexicogrammatical patterns construct knowledges and address readers as particular student-subjects. Second, they draw on textbook discourse to trouble core conceptual issues such as the politics of visibility, the role of individual human agency in combating environmental destruction, or the apparent closure of (dominant) discourse.

Q. How is the relation between action and structure perceived?

In CDA and CDS, the relation between action and structure is often seen as dialectical. Structures are not merely encompassing individuals and pushing them in certain directions; rather, individuals both shape and are shaped by these structures. Structures provide the context and constraints within which actions occur, but individuals have the agency to act and potentially transform these structures through their practices and interactions.

Q. What is the relation between the discursive and extra-discursive?

The discursive refers to language and communication practices, while the extra-discursive encompasses social, economic, political, and cultural structures and practices outside of language. In CDA, the discursive and extra-discursive are interrelated; discourse shapes and is shaped by social reality. Discourse constructs social identities, relationships, and systems of knowledge, while extra-discursive factors influence and constrain discourse practices.

Q. Write objective of female critical discourse analysis

The objective of FCDA is to examine how gender inequalities and power imbalances are constructed and perpetuated through language. It aims to uncover and challenge sexist and patriarchal discourses, promote gender equity, and empower women by analyzing how language shapes and reflects gender relations in various contexts, including media, politics, education, and everyday interactions.

Q. 'Marx as Critical Discourse Analyst', Fairclough and Graham (2002) argue that:

- ✚ Language has become ever more central in late capitalism.

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

- ✚ Also argue that Marx was well aware of the link between language and other dimensions of the social – that is, the dialectics between the discursive and the material dimension of social life.

Q. What is Perpetrator mitigation?

Perpetrator mitigation involves strategies and discourse used to downplay or justify the actions of those who commit offenses or harmful acts. It seeks to lessen the perceived severity of the perpetrator's actions.

Perpetrator mitigation Even when the perpetrators' culpability is acknowledged, it gets mitigated in a number of ways, which is consistent with Clark's (1992) and Ehrlich's (2001) findings. E.g., the horrific crimes of rape and murder, in this case, get reframed as a "tragedy", an "error" or an "accident".

Q. What is reality TV?

Reality TV is a genre of television programming that documents unscripted real-life situations and often features unknown individuals rather than professional actors. Examples include shows like "Survivor" and "Big Brother." Reality TV is 'the most exorbitantly "noticed" form of programming in television history' (Turner, 2010). It has faced massive criticism from media commentators who associate reality TV with humiliation and bullying and who see it as morally degrading. Reality TV has been discussed as low-culture, a form of cheap, trivial and empty entertainment.

Q. Television and discourse

Television discourse involves the study of how television programs construct meaning through language, visuals, and narrative. It includes analyzing genres, scripts, audience reception, and the socio-cultural impact of television content.

Q. Positive Discourse Analysis

Positive Discourse Analysis (PDA) focuses on the constructive and empowering uses of language. Instead of critiquing negative discourses, PDA examines how language is used to build solidarity, foster social justice, and create positive social change. (this much answer would also be enough)

Martin (2004) referred to this approach as positive discourse analysis which can provide a focus on how people get together and make room for themselves in the world in ways that redistribute power without necessarily struggling against it. The term positive discourse analysis (PDA) was used to signal a shift in analytic focus to the study of constructive forces. Bartlett (2012) wrote that PDA might be viewed as a critical approach to discourse analysis that focuses on solutions rather than problems.

Q. Three Forms of Critique (Only mentioning the name would also be enough)

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

✚ the text or discourse immanent critique

Text or discourse immanent critique is primarily knowledge-related. It assesses conflicts, contradictions and inconsistencies in the text. e.g. with respect to cohesion, presuppositions, argumentation and turn-taking structures. This form of critique relies on rhetorical, textlinguistic, pragmatic, politico-linguistic and argumentation theoretical norms.

✚ the socio-diagnostic critique

Socio-diagnostic critique is both epistemic and deontic. It aims at exposing manipulation in and by discourse, at revealing ethically problematic aspects of discursive practices. It focusses on discrepancies between discursive and other social practices and functions as a form of social control. It relies on social, historical and political background knowledge.

✚ the prospective critique

Prospective critique is strongly application-oriented. It is practical, aimed at reducing dysfunctional communication and language barriers, at improving communication within public institutions by elaborating proposals and guidelines on the basis of careful fieldwork.

Q. Three Components of Stance

- ✚ Stance-taker
- ✚ Stance-object (i.e. topic under discussion)
- ✚ Resources (e.g. evaluative lexis, modal verbs, punctuation, typography, different languages)
- ✚ Addressee/s (Barton & Lee, 2013)
- ✚ Stance-takers.

Q. Name the kind of stance?

- ✚ Epistemic stance
- ✚ Alignment stance

Q. Race and ethnicity

Race refers to a person's physical characteristics, such as bone structure and skin, hair, or eye color. Ethnicity, however, refers to cultural factors, including nationality, regional culture, ancestry, and language. An example of race is brown, white, or black skin (all from various parts of the world). An example of ethnicity is German or Spanish ancestry (regardless of race) or Han Chinese.

Q. The stance triangle/ Key components

(05 Marks Questions)

Q. CDA begins from the perception of a problem in society

Chouliaraki and Fairclough (1999) argue that CDA begins from the perception of a problem in society. Many social problems, such as a war or public resistance to genetically modified organisms, have temporal markers and identifying them is the first step to start collecting media(ted) texts on such issues. The constitution of a corpus of news texts depends on a variety of factors and on research goals. Once this is done, starting with an open-ended reading of texts without very specific questions or hypotheses constraining the analysis. Critical thinking is crucial at this phase. A “spirit of scepticism” should be adopted, leading to the “suspension of belief in the taken for granted” and “render[ing] the familiar strange”.

Q. Discourse structuration AND Discourse institutionalization

Discourse structuration refers to the process of domination of the terms of the debate. This may be intended but does not only depend on an actor’s construction of an issue and its realization involves more than one text. E.g. the discourse of the American administration clearly had an effect of structuration of the discourse of many media outlets after 9/11.

Discourse institutionalization is the transformation of institutional structures and/or practices in a way that embodies a certain discourse. Although the process of discourse institutionalization may result from, and originate in certain texts, it usually also has an extratextual dimension

Q. Social media CDA

Social media CDA involves analyzing the content and interactions on social media platforms to understand how discourse is shaped and how it influences social and political opinions. It includes studying hashtags, posts, comments, and the network of interactions among users to identify patterns and implications of online communication.

Social Media Communication is viewed as electronically mediated communication across any platforms, spaces, sites, and technologies in which users can:

- ✚ work together in producing and compiling content;
- ✚ perform interpersonal communication and mass communication simultaneously or separately – sometimes mass performance of interpersonal communication and;
- ✚ have access to see and respond to institutionally (e.g., newspaper articles) and user-generated content/texts.

Q. Social media as a communicative paradigm

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

According to KhosraviNik (2014), the nature, location, and dynamics of discursive power in Social Media, or broadly speaking the participatory web, is fluid, changeable, and non-static. Social Media refers to the use of web-based and mobile technologies to turn communication into an interactive dialogue. Social Networking Sites (SNSs) include Facebook, Instagram, Tumblr, Twitter; and Instant Messaging Apps. The new communication protocol breaks away from the traditional clear-cut separation between producers and consumers of texts. The traditional unidirectional, one-to many interface of mass media is replaced with what appears to be a (potential for) many-to-many dynamic of discursive practice. In order to maintain discursive power, most of the content has been replaced by a new form of participatory communication, i.e. social media communication.

Q. Trading users' information

Trading users' information for advertising purposes is the most common practice which has helped the rise of individually targeted advertising strategies through mechanisms. To optimize this aim, Social Media architecture constantly works to increase the degree (in terms of amount of time, space, and types of activities) and intensity (more details, more multimodal, more releases of personal information) of ordinary users' engagement with the platforms. This leads to creation of: (a) more audience for various advertising strategies – users as consumers and (b.) higher potential for, and precision of, targeted personalized advertising and algorithms – users as text coproducers; hence the more(potential for) accumulation of wealth for the corporations. Overall, as compared to electronic or print media, Social Media can and have provided new spaces of power for citizenry engagement, grass-root access, and use of symbolic resources – albeit differently in different socio-political contexts.

Q. 5 discourse historical strategies by Wodak

The five discourse historical strategies by Wodak include:

- ✚ Nomination: How actors, objects, and events are named and referred to.
- ✚ Predication: Attributing qualities, characteristics, or features to social actors, objects, and events.
- ✚ Argumentation: The construction and justification of arguments.
- ✚ Perspectivization: Positioning the speaker's or writer's point of view.
- ✚ Intensification and mitigation: Modifying the intensity or tone of statements.

Q. Research description on Dawn and New York editorial

This paper attempts to critically analyze the editorials of two renowned newspapers, namely the Dawn of Pakistan and The New York Times of America for the portrayal of the Army Public School, Peshawar attack. The aim of this work is to analyze the construction, reproduction and perpetuation of ideology through language used by the two newspapers. This objective was accomplished drawing on the use of lexical choices and syntactic structures employed in the editorials. It was also seen whether a particular text deals with the issue in an overt and explicit manner or express things in a more implicit and covert way. The editorials selected for analysis were published the next day after the Army Public School attack. Selection of Newspapers The daily Dawn of Pakistan was selected because it was believed to be more neutral and unbiased in the expression of even controversial matters. On the other hand, The New York Times is a prominent newspaper in American settings. Qualitative research design was adopted for this paper to explore: How the editorials construct and portray the actors? E.g. Taliban vs. those killed and injured. How the same issue has been taken up by two different papers in two different cultural settings? The ideological square model of Van Dijk was employed as the theoretical framework for the study. The schema of “Us versus them” was used to identify how the Taliban are depicted as ‘them’ and the victims as ‘us’. This was done through the examination of the lexical choices and syntactic structures. Results reveal that The New York Times has dealt with the issue in a more impartial manner than Dawn. The attackers are clearly identified as Taliban and the ‘us’ sentiment is as clear as the ‘them’ sentiment. Dawn on the other hand hardly mentions the attackers as Taliban but often terms them as militants. The ‘us’ sentiment is more prominent here in comparison to ‘them’.

Q. 5 components by Jessop

Jessop outlines five components for examining neoliberalism, including:

- ✚ ideology emerged
- ✚ political project
- ✚ economic policies
- ✚ the form taken by a capitalist offensive against organised labour after the crisis of the post-war mode of growth
- ✚ specific hegemonic rise in its material practices and policies

Q. Five content-related areas were investigated BY Wodak

- ✚ The construction of the Homo Austriacus,
- ✚ The narration and construction of a shared political past,
- ✚ The discursive construction of a shared culture,
- ✚ The discursive construction of a shared political present and future,
- ✚ The discursive construction of a “national body”

Q. Discursive strategies

Discursive strategies are forms of discursive manipulation/ Intervention of reality by social actors, including journalists, in order to achieve a certain effect or goal. This intervention and the procured aim can be more or less conscious. The notion of discursive strategies helps us perceive the link between “source strategies” and media representations.

Important Discursive Strategies

- ✚ Framing: the selection of an angle of the (complex) reality.

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

- ✚ Positioning: involves constructing social actors into a certain relationship with others, that may entitle them to do certain things
- ✚ Legitimation: consists in justifying and sanctioning a certain action or power, on the basis of normative or other reasons.
- ✚ Politicization: attribution of a political nature or status to a certain reality, such as climate change.

Q. comparative-synchronic analysis and a historical- diachronic analysis.

Comparative-synchronic analysis: A comparative- synchronic analysis means looking at various representations of an issue at the time of the writing of one specific news text. More specifically, we compare one text with other representations of the issue: texts published on the same day (or another time unit) by different authors, both in the same news outlet and in others. The comparison of different media depictions of reality involves attempting to reconstitute the original events.

Historical-diachronic Analysis: The historical-diachronic analysis takes place at two levels. At the first level, the historical approach involves examining the course of social matters and their wider political, social and economic context (Wodak et al., 1999). The historical conditions and the context of production of mediated discourse have to be accounted for. Bringing the contributions of disciplines such as political science, sociology and psychology to the analysis of media(ted) discourses on Islamophobia, for example, may be very productive. At a second level, it is important to examine the temporal evolution of media(ted) discourses and to produce a history of media constructions of a given social issue.

Q. How Labor Party different from Conservative Party?

The Labour Party and the Conservative Party differ significantly in terms of their identity and branding. The Labour Party places a strong emphasis on its identity and unity, particularly since the reforms of Blair and Brown in the mid-1990s, presenting itself as a new political brand. The term "Labour" can function as both a noun and a pre-nominal modifier, while "Conservative" is primarily an adjective that can also be a noun. The term "Conservatism" refers specifically to political principles rather than the party itself. Additionally, the alternative terms "Tory/Tories" are more commonly used by opponents of the Conservative Party. This analysis suggests that the Labour Party's identity is central to its strategy, distinguishing it from the more principle-focused identity of the Conservative Party..

Q. CDA from a historiographical approach needs to

1. contextualize representations of the past in social practices \2. locate the context of production of historical discourse.
3. investigate the context of reception of discourse about the past.
4. explore varying scales and indexical meanings of discourses about the past.

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

5. consider claims to legitimacy, valuing and social distribution of discourse about the past. CDA studies have considered these principles when exploring contested discourses about the past.

Q. Five principles of FCDA

Five principles of Feminist Critical Discourse Analysis (FCDA) include:

- ✚ The first is the ideological character of 'gender'. Takes a critical perspective on ideologies as group-based socio-cognitive representations of practices in the service of power.
- ✚ Secondly, power is a central focus in critical investigations of gender identities and relations. Broadly, two conceptions of power have been valuable to FCDA.
- ✚ Thirdly, FCDA shares with CDA and feminist approaches a constitutive view of discourse.
- ✚ Fourthly, FCDA is interested in critical reflexivity as a practice.
- ✚ Fifthly, FCDA scholarship is considered analytical activism.

CDS being deployed in applied linguistics:

- ✚ studies of textbooks and school curricula,
- ✚ school leadership and student identities
- ✚ public-media discourse.

Q. Define political discourse analysis

It focuses on the ways language is used in political contexts. It examines how political actors construct and convey their messages, how political ideologies are embedded in language, and how power relations are established and maintained through discourse. PDA often involves analyzing speeches, debates, policies, and media coverage to understand the rhetorical strategies and the impact of political communication.

Approaches of Political Discourse

- ✚ Political discourse operates indexically
- ✚ Interaction functions to negotiate representations
- ✚ Recursive properties of language sub serve political interaction
- ✚ Modal properties of language promote political interaction
- ✚ Binary conceptualizations and political discourse

Q. Write new directions for critical discourse analysis

This field needs to remain “open to new forms of writing and to beware of its own linguistic orthodoxies”. Rees-Miller thinks that there is a lack of reciprocity between language scholars and other language workers. Further directions of CDS can be seen in relation to advertising, as Cook (2008) states: “Advertising is one of the most prominent, powerful, and ubiquitous contemporary uses of language. Advertising’s creative use of language makes it a particularly rich site for language and discourse analysis.” Workplace discourse analysis leads us to know a lot about what linguists and discourse analysts think about advertising, but we know nothing about the way advertisers think about language themselves.

Final-Term (Solved)

Incorporating insights from fields like cognitive science, psychology, and sociology to deepen the understanding of how discourse shapes and is shaped by human cognition and social interactions. Analyzing new forms of communication emerging from digital media, including social media platforms, blogs, and multimedia content, to understand how they influence public discourse and social behavior. Examining how globalization and cross-cultural interactions affect discourse practices, leading to the emergence of new hybrid forms of communication and the negotiation of meaning across different cultural contexts.

Let's address the questions with information inferred from the context of critical discourse analysis (CDA) and critical discourse studies (CDS):

Q. How do we understand central notions in CDS like critique and emancipation, demystification and ideology, power and hegemony?

- ✚ Critique and Emancipation: Critique in CDS involves analyzing and challenging power structures and ideologies embedded in discourse to uncover hidden power dynamics and inequalities. Emancipation refers to the process of freeing individuals and groups from oppressive structures and practices, often through raising awareness and promoting social change.
- ✚ Demystification and Ideology: Demystification is the process of revealing the underlying assumptions, beliefs, and power relations that are obscured by dominant ideologies. Ideology refers to the systems of beliefs and values that shape how individuals perceive and interpret the world, often serving to legitimize and maintain existing power structures.
- ✚ Power and Hegemony: Power in CDS is understood as the ability to influence and control discourse and social practices. Hegemony refers to the dominance of particular ideologies and discourses that become accepted as 'common sense' and shape social reality. Hegemonic discourses maintain power by marginalizing alternative perspectives and normalizing certain practices and beliefs.

Q. Write note on covert and overt racism

The paragraph addresses both covert and overt forms of racism:

Covert Racism: This form of racism has become more prevalent, especially in Western societies where direct expressions of prejudice are culturally unacceptable. Inclusive-sounding keywords like multiculturalism and diversity are used to mask racial differences while still reinforcing them indirectly. Covert racism is pervasive and defended as part of democratic values. It includes subtle practices such as linguistic monitoring that uphold norms and marginalize others without direct accusations or denials. This indirect racism still perpetuates privilege and stigmatizes certain groups through normalized practices and ideologies.

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

Overt Racism: In contrast, overt racism is associated with direct expressions of prejudice, such as slurs or generalizations about particular groups. It is linked to individual ignorance and backwardness, resulting in obvious, stereotypical beliefs about certain groups. Overt racism is more easily recognized and criticized, but the paragraph emphasizes the need to address the less visible, systemic forms of racism that continue to operate beneath the surface.

Q. Jessop has outlined 5 approaches examining neoliberalism

Jessop's five approaches to examining neoliberalism include:

- ✚ Economic restructuring.
- ✚ Political reorganization.
- ✚ Social policy changes.
- ✚ Ideological shifts.
- ✚ Globalization impacts.

Q. Multimodal Critical Discourse Analysis (MCDA)

an approach useful for critically examining reality TV and how it can provoke feelings. This methodology is based on the collections of methods called Multimodal Critical Discourse Analysis (MCDA) theorizing on discourse as recontextualized social practice. A basic assumption is to view actions and artefacts used in communication as semiotic resources. This approach focuses on how reality TV can reproduce ideologies detailed analyses of how all the involved semiotic resources (talk, music, audio effects, graphics, camera work, editing, etc.) are combined to portray participants and their actions is necessary.

Q. De-constructivist and Constructivist turn

Luke (1995) emphasized on the potential of CDA to operate both de-constructively and constructively. In their deconstructive turn, analysts illustrate how systematic asymmetries of power and resources between speakers and listeners can be linked to the production and reproduction of political and economic interests. In its constructive turn, CDA sets out to “generate agency among students, teachers and others by giving them the tools to see how texts position them and generate the very relations of institutional power at work in classrooms, staff rooms and policy”.

Q. Meta-discourse

Meta-discourse refers to the linguistic devices used to organize and structure a text, guiding the reader through the argument. It includes markers like transitions, hedges, emphatics, and engagement elements that help clarify the writer's intentions and the structure of the discourse.

(this much answer would also be enough)

The term meta-discourse was first coined by the linguist Zellig Harris (1959) to describe the way in which a writer or speaker tries to guide their audience's perception of their text (Hyland,

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

2005). According to Hyland (1998), meta-discourse includes interactive rhetorical features which reflect the writer's awareness of their audience, its interests and expectations and interactional rhetorical features which include the ways in which authors convey judgements and align themselves with their readers (Hyland 2005).

Interactive meta-discourse resources further guide the readers how to understand ways of expressing relations between clauses, the stages of the text, information that is in other parts of the text, information that has been drawn from other texts and ways of elaborating on meanings in the text (Paltridge, 2002).

Interactional metadiscourse resources further include the ways in which writers express their stance towards what they are saying as well as how they explicitly engage with or address their readers in their texts (Hyland, 2005).

Q. Stance and Engagement

Stance is the ways in which writers present themselves and convey their judgements, opinions and commitments to their own and other people's work. In doing this, a writer may either 'intrude to stamp their personal authority onto their arguments, or step back and disguise their involvement'.

Engagement is the strategy writers use to acknowledge and recognize the presence of their readers, 'pulling them along with their argument, focusing their attention, acknowledging their uncertainties, including them as discourse participants and guiding them to interpretations'

Q. Write Note on CDA Films

Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA) of films involves examining how films use language, visuals, and narrative techniques to convey messages and ideologies. It explores the portrayal of characters, themes, and social issues, and how these elements influence audience perceptions and reinforce or challenge societal norms. (this much answer would also be enough)

For film analysis, both written and spoken language are focused. Even apparently spontaneous spoken language, with all its 'paraverbal' dimensions of performance and social, regional and ethnic variation, becomes in the context of film just another representational resource. Such language choices can then naturally be seen as targets of CDA. According to Androutsopoulos (2012), the employment of code switching in films depicting ethnically diverse situations and several similar phenomena have all received critical consideration. The 'filmic' construction of a broad range of social groups has been addressed.

Q. Modes of Class (Five Categories)

This model, in a constant state of revision, consists of five general categories which are then subdivided into dimensions as follows:

ENG524_CRITICAL DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Final-Term (Solved)

- ✚ Economic resources Property: land and housing Property: other material possessions, such as electronic goods, clothing, books, art, etc. Income: salary and wages Accumulated wealth: savings and investments
- ✚ Sociocultural resources Occupation: manual labour, unskilled service jobs, low-level information-based jobs, professional labour, etc. Education: level of formal education attained and the corresponding cultural capital acquired. Technological knowhow: familiarity and ability to use evolving technologies.
- ✚ Behaviour Consumption patterns: choice of shops, buying brands or not, ecological/organic consumption, etc. Symbolic behaviour (e.g., how one moves one's body, the clothes one wears, the way one speaks, how one eats) Pastimes: golfing, skiing, cockfighting, watching television
- ✚ Life conditions Political life: one's relative position in hierarchies of power in society Quality of life: in terms of physical and psychological comfort and health Type of neighbourhood: a working class neighbourhood, a middle class neighbourhood, an area in the process of gentrification
- ✚ Spatial conditions Mobility: physical movement (from highly local to global) Proximity to other people during a range of day-to-day activities Dimensions and size of space occupied: layout of dwelling or place of work, size of bedroom, size of office, etc. Type of dwelling: trailer, house, flat (studio, small, large), etc.

Q. Importance of Journalistic Media

Journalistic media play a crucial role in informing the public, shaping public opinion, holding power to account, and providing a platform for public discourse. They contribute to transparency, democracy, and social awareness by reporting on current events, issues, and diverse perspectives.

Media discourse has not yet been examined in detail in this way. Besides tracing the history of public issues (the sequence of texts appearing in the media and the evolution of their meaning), a time-sensitive discourse analysis also means considering the particular context of a given period, from specific events and developments related to the issue under examination to wider aspects of the social environment.

Q. What is Race with example?

Race is a social construct that categorizes people based on physical characteristics like skin color, facial features, and hair texture. It has no biological basis but has significant social implications, often leading to systemic inequalities and discrimination. For example, the concept of "Black" and "White" races in the United States.

Race and racism can be important sites of theoretical and practical intervention for a critical project invested in highlighting how discursive practices (re)create social inequalities. Research on both institutional and everyday contexts reveals patterned ways in which speakers index and reproduce ideologies about different groups. Some of these include: Essentializing discursive moves. Strategic use of narratives “us” versus “them” polarizations.

Final-Term (Solved)

Q. Textbook Production Practices includes the following specifics:

- ✚ Curriculum: Each of the 16 federal states in Germany has its own education system, including its own curricula. His research shows that content is being controlled while textbook production. Because curricula in Germany are currently, as in much of the world, orienting away from required content and towards required competencies.
- ✚ Secondly, most federal states in Germany require textbooks for politics to go through a formal approval process, including anonymized reviews from teachers and a final review from the federal state’s Ministry of Education.
- ✚ Thirdly, publishing houses follow previous versions of the books during textbook production, i.e. in the production of Politics I, 70% of the material was to be taken from previous versions. For the remaining 30% they could write their own texts and select their own materials. The authors’ task was primarily to select content from other books and adapt it for their state curricular guidelines, i.e., to put the pages in a new order to meet the curriculum topics, reformulate tasks and headings, update out-of-date information, etc.
- ✚ Fourth step in the textbook production is: Out-sourcing which means the book’s editor was self employed. He was not paid for his hours, but received a fixed sum for finalizing Politics I. Outsourcing editing goes hand in hand with other cost-cutting initiatives and expectations of increased efficiency.
