    - Acts on behalf of the client to secure essential services.

Topic 40-41: Process of Social Case Work – I & II

Mir's Notes

Six Phases of Social Case Work:

1. Intake (First Interview) – Rapport Building:
    - Establish a professional relationship with the client.
    - Understand the client's needs and respect their individuality.
    - Areas to probe include:
        - Stage and nature of the problem.
        - Physical and mental health.
        - Social adjustments in job, family, etc.
2. Psycho-Social Study (Exploration/Investigation):
    - Assess the client's current, past, and potential future adaptation to challenges.
    - Focus on the nature, causes, and significance of the problem.
    - Evaluate efforts made by the client to solve the problem.
3. Psycho-Social Diagnosis (Assessment):
    - Involves identifying psychological and environmental factors contributing to the client's problem.
    - Process includes:
        - Differentiating relevant from irrelevant data.
        - Organizing and interpreting facts.
        - Understanding how factors interrelate to define the problem.
4. Intervention/Treatment (Problem-Solving Process):
    - Aim to relieve immediate issues and address root causes where feasible.
    - Methods of treatment:
        - Concrete Services: Financial aid, medical care, scholarships, etc.
        - Indirect Treatment: Environmental modification (e.g., training programs).
        - Direct Treatment: Counseling, therapeutic interviewing, resource utilization.
5. Monitoring and Evaluation:
    - Provides feedback to assess if treatment is working.
    - Evaluates whether goals are achieved and if modifications are required.
6. Follow-Up and Termination:
    - Gradually reduce contact while ensuring the client sustains improvement.
    - Discuss progress, obstacles, and strategies for maintaining success.
    - Address emotional responses to the end of the helping process

PRIMARY METHODS: SOCIAL CASE WORK - IV

Topic 42: Recording of Social Case Work

Significance of Recording:

1. Improves professional skills and techniques.
2. Helps evaluate and improve one's own methods.
3. Strengthens worker-client relationships.
4. Contributes to the body of knowledge in social work and aids in research.
5. Simplifies supervision and teaching.
6. Provides continuity when transitioning workers.
7. Acts as a reference for future cases.
8. Ensures systematic service delivery.

MA Notes

Topic 43: Techniques of Social Case Work

Key Techniques:

1. Purpose and Concern for the Client System:
   - Focus on solving internal problems and providing individualized services.
   - Establish rapport based on mutual respect and understanding.

Topic 44: Components of Social Case Work

Four Core Components:

1. Person (Client):
   - An individual under stress, unable to adjust due to lack of motivation or emotional stability.
   - Past experiences, present situations, and future expectations influence behavior.
2. Problem:
   - Issues affecting social functioning (e.g., illness, disabilities, unmet needs, stress).
   - Problems are multifaceted and can trigger chain reactions.
   - Requires selective focus based on:
     - Client's needs and preferences.
     - Professional judgment.
     - Agency's capacity.
3. Place (Agency):
   - A structured institution offering welfare services.
   - Effectiveness depends on resources, staff competence, and community support.
   - Agencies can be private/public, primary/secondary, local/provincial/national, or open/closed.
4. Process:
   - Involves artful execution of the case work phases.
   - First Contact: Establish a supportive relationship.
   - Social History: Gather client information for a constructive solution.

Mrs Notes

Topic 45: Similarities & Differences between Social Case Work (SCW) and Counseling

Similarities:

1. Both aim to help individuals in distress.
2. Serve similar types of clients and issues (social-emotional problems).
3. Emphasize relationships and the client's dignity.
4. Principles include acceptance and self-determination.

Differences:

Social Case Work	Counseling
Focus on client as a whole.	Focus on the problem itself.
Uses social services as a treatment strategy.	Does not involve social services.
Always practiced within an agency setting.	May not require an agency.
Broad scope of issues (holistic approach).	Often limited to specific problems.
Services are agency-driven.	Counselor operates independently.

Principles of Social Group Work (Topics 53-55)

Principle of Planned Group Formation:

- The group is the core unit for providing services.
- Workers/agencies must form or work with pre-existing groups with a focus on fostering individual growth and meeting collective needs.

Mr's Notes

Principle of Specific Objectives:

- Workers must consciously set clear objectives for individual and group development.
- Goals should align with group desires, capacities, and agency functions.

Principle of Purposeful Worker-Group Relationship:

- Workers establish intentional relationships based on mutual trust and respect.
- Workers accept members as they are, fostering confidence in the worker and the agency.

Principle of Continuous Individualization:

- Recognize the uniqueness of each group and its members.
- Workers adapt to evolving individual and group needs.

Principle of Guided Group Interaction:

- Change and growth stem from group interactions and reciprocal responses.
- Workers influence these interactions through active and purposeful participation.

Principle of Democratic Group Self-Determination:

- Encourage groups to make their own decisions and take responsibility for their actions.
- Control over the group primarily resides within the group itself.

Principle of Flexible Functional Organization:

- Establish an organizational structure to meet group needs.
- Structures should be flexible and adapt as the group evolves.

Principle of Progressive Program Experiences:

- Begin group activities at the members' current level of interest, need, and competence.
- Progress activities in line with the group's developing abilities and experiences.

Principle of Resource Utilization:

- Leverage resources from the agency and community to enrich group experiences.
- Ensure resources serve both individual and group goals effectively.

Principle of Evaluation:

- Continuously evaluate group processes and outcomes.
- Workers, groups, and agencies collaboratively assess progress to ensure fulfillment and improvement.
