LECTURE # 19

Main Idea:

Which statement does not express the main idea of the text?

Core memory was the first type of computer memory developed.

There are at least three different kinds of memory used in computers.

Bubble memory is the latest development in computer memory.

Understanding the Passage:

Decide whether the following statements are true or false (T/F) by referring to the information in the text. Then make the necessary changes so that the false statements become true.

The most important function of a computer is to hold information in its memory in order to process it. (T)

Minicomputers, microcomputers, and mainframes all have the same kind of memory. (T)

Semiconductor memory was developed before core memory and after bubble memory. (F - Change to: Semiconductor memory was developed after core memory and before bubble memory.)

Core memory uses small metal rings which can be magnetized or unmagnetized. (T)

The state of the core can be represented by either 0 or 1. (T)

Early computer memories had less storage capacity than newer ones. (T)

A transistor and a chip are the same kind of device. (T)

The development of chips makes it possible for minicomputers and microcomputers to be invented. (T)

Bubble memory is smaller than a chip. (T)

Bubble memory doesn't have very many advantages. (F - Change to: Bubble memory has many advantages.)

Locating Information:

Find the passages in the text where the following ideas are expressed. Give the line references.

First, there is core memory. (p1)

Further to this development, chips evolved. (p3)

There are three types of memory board. (p1)

This consists of producing a thin film over a memory board. (p4)

Then semiconductor memory was developed. (p4)

There is still a lot to learn about this process. (p4)

This is made up of thin wires and rings. (p2)

Finally, bubble memory was invented. (p4)

Contextual Reference:

Look back at the text and find out what the words in bold typeface refer to.

Long enough to process it (1.3) - refers to storing information in the computer's memory.

Where the wires crossed (1.7) - refers to intersections of fine vertical and horizontal wires.

Which was capable of being (1.9) - refers to the ferrite ring.

By their respective addresses (1.12) - refers to the unique addresses of magnetized and unmagnetized cores.

This has been made possible (1.6) - refers to advancements in miniaturized circuitry.

Which revolutionized the computer field (1.21) - refers to the ability to etch integrated circuits onto a chip.

Each one capable of storing one bit (1.25) - refers to circuits on a chip.

Of the circuits etched on it (1.26) - refers to the chip.

It produces magnetic bubbles (1.37) - refers to the metallic alloys film.

Of which represents one bit (1.38) - refers to the presence or absence of magnetic bubbles.

Understanding Words:

Refer back to the text and find synonyms for the following words.

Said (1.1) - mentioned

Own (1.2) - respective

Progress (1.17) - advances

Keeping (1.33) - retaining

Appropriate (1.42) - suitable

Now refer back to the text and find antonyms for the following words.

6. Neither ... nor (1.1) - either or

Bypassed (1.2) - passed through

Increased (1.17) - reduced

Not producing (1.33) - creating

Don't use up (1.42) - consume

Words Forms:

First, choose the appropriate form of the words to complete the sentences. Then check the differences of meaning in your dictionary.

Alteration, alter, altered

- When a program doesn't work properly, it is often necessary to make alterations to it.
- The omission of data from a program can alter its results drastically.
- The use of the computer in business has altered the workload of many people.

Electricity, electric, electrical, electrically

- A lot of electricity is needed to operate large computer systems.

- b. Alexander Graham Bell invented the electric light bulb.
c. Many students today are studying to become electrical engineers.

Reduction, reduce, reduced

- a. The introduction of the computer in the workplace has reduced the workload of many people.
b. There will probably be a great reduction in the consumption of oil in the next decade due to the use of computer technology.

Creation, create, created, creative

- a. A programmer usually has a creative as well as a logical mind.
b. It takes a lot of inspiration and hard work to come up with a new creation in computer technology.
c. Computers have certainly created few opportunities for fraud.

Content Review:

Use the information in the text on 'Types of Memory' to complete the table.

Type	Developed	Size	Composition
1. Core Memory	Large	80,000 bits	Grid of fine wires and ferrite rings
2. Semiconductor Memory			Integrated circuits on silicon
3. Bubble Memory			Thin film of metallic alloys

Focus Review:

Focus G: Time sequence

Complete the following table by referring back to the text on 'Types of Memory'.

Para	Time Sequence Marker	Information
[2]	The computer had memories made up of a kind of grid of fine vertical and horizontal wires	[2] Computers had a capacity of around 80,000 bits
[2]	Whereas it is not surprising to hear about computers with a memory capacity of millions of bits	[2] Core memory dominated the market
[3]	There was further development which revolutionized the computer field	[3] Introduction of etching thousands of integrated circuits onto a tiny piece of silicon (chip)
[3a]	Moreover, the size of the components containing the circuitry can be considerably reduced	[3a] Introduction of minis and micros due to the advances in chip technology
[4]	Another development in the field of computer memories is bubble memory	[4] Concept of creating magnetic bubbles on a thin film of metallic alloys over the memory board

[4a]	Finally, bubble memory was invented	[4a] Magnetic bubble memory can store information at a greater density than existing memories
------	-------------------------------------	---

Focus Review:

Focus I: Adding information

Complete the following sentences by referring back to the text on ‘Types of Memory’.

In the 1970s, there was a further development which revolutionized the computer field. (Para. 3)

Moreover, the size of the components containing the circuitry can be considerably reduced... (Para. 3)

...another development in the field of computer memories is bubble memory. (Para. 4)

Focus Review:

Focus J: Giving an explanation or a definition

In texts similar to those in this book, authors often give definitions to new or unfamiliar terms, or vocabulary items and concepts, or ideas specific to the subject being discussed.

Some expressions or markers used to define or explain a statement explicitly are:

‘Means’ by, We mean*, ‘Is taken to be’ by, Is meant*, ‘Denotes’, In other words, ‘Refers’ to, is defined as, That is (to say) *

Examples:

- The term computer refers to the processor plus the internal memory.
- A chip is defined as a tiny square piece of silicon upon which several layers of an integrated circuit are etched or imprinted, after which the circuit is encapsulated in plastic, ceramic, or metal.
- By peripherals we mean those devices that are attached to the computer.

There are other methods used to define or explain, depending on the style. One very common method is to give the term being defined and say what it is without repeating the term, i.e. X is/are Y.

Examples:

- A computer is an electronic device.
- Tapes and disks are memory devices.
- Printers are output devices.

Another very common method is to use the same pattern as in 2 above and also give some distinguishing characteristics.

Examples:

- A computer is an electronic device which/that processes information.
- Tapes and disks are memory devices which/that can be stored away for future use.
- A programmer is a person who prepares programs to solve problems.
- N.B. The relative pronouns used in this type of definition will be who or that for people, when for a period of time, where for place or location, and that or which for things.

One of the most frequent forms of definition or explanation is to use two nouns (or noun phrases) in apposition, separated by commas.

Examples:

- Computers, electronic devices for processing information, are now used in practically every aspect of life.
- Systems software, programs, directs the computer to perform tasks.
- Turnkey systems, complete hardware/software products, may be provided along with the hardware by a systems supplier.

Note: Asterisks () indicate where additional information may be required to complete the sentences or explanations.

LECTURE # 20

1. Main Idea:

Which statement best expresses the main idea of the text? Why did you eliminate the other choices?

Constructing an algorithm is the basic step in solving a problem.

Solving problems becomes easier if certain steps are followed.

The computer does what the programmer tells it to do.

2. Understanding the Passage:

Decide whether the following statements are true or false (T/F) by referring to the information in the text. Then make the necessary changes so that the false statements become true.

The computer is a great help to people because it solves their problems. F

All problems are equally difficult to solve. F

An algorithm is a sequence of instructions used to solve a problem. T

The most important part of problem-solving is defining the problem clearly. F

Block diagrams cannot show relationships. F

Coding sheets are used for writing programs. T

Punched cards are the only way of transferring the program to the computer memory.

F

If the data is not added to the program, the computer cannot perform calculations. T

It is a good idea to test the program before adding the data. T

A computer is very intelligent. It is capable of thinking. F

3. Locating Information:

Find the passages in the text where the following ideas are expressed. Give the paragraph references.

Programs are usually written on certain lined forms. P4

A block diagram can show decisions with two different outcomes. P1

The programmer is the one who solves the problems. P6

Even if the programmer is using a terminal instead of cards, it is possible to get a permanent copy of his program. P2

Not all problems are of the same level of difficulty. P3

4. Contextual Reference:

Look back at the text and find out what the words in bold typeface refer to.

It is a machine (1.1)...computer.....

Which the programmer gives it (1.2)...procedure.....

Who solves the problems (1.3)...programmer.....

Which may be stated (1.14)...flow chart.....

The latter is a diagrammatic representation (1.15)...block diagram.....

Operate to do it (1.27)...key punch the program

This transfers the information (1.32)...reading cards through card readers

Or if it has errors (1.33)...program.....

It will follow the instructions (1.40)...computer.....

Does what it is told (1.42)...computer.....

5. Understanding Words:

Refer back to the text and find synonyms for the following words.

Construct (1.10)...formulate.....

Takes a lot of time (1.13)...time-consuming.....

Exact (1.15)...precise.....

Mistakes (1.34)...bugs.....

Help (1.35)...aids.....

Now refer back to the text and find antonyms for the following words.

Ambiguously (1.5)...clearly.....

Specific (1.6)...general.....

Partially (1.39)...completely.....

6. Word Forms:

First choose the appropriate form of the words to complete the sentences. Then check the differences of meaning in your dictionary.

Procedure, proceed, proceeding:

a) The machine carries out the...procedure..... which the programmer gives it.

b) You should ...proceed..... with care when using a calculator.

Program, programmer, programmed, programming:

a) I would like to ...program.....in COBOL.

b) There were quite a few errors in my.....program.....

c) My calculator is ...programmed..... it plays a tune on the hour.

d) Fortran is one of the many ...programming..... languages available on the market.

e) Computer.....programming..... is a new field of study at the university.

f) He is a good ...programmer..... because he always constructs an algorithm for his problems.

Relationships, Relate, Related:

- a. The first two steps in your program are not ...related..... they are basically different.
- b. In a flowchart, the.....relationship.....between events is shown by means of connecting arrows.
- c. Assembler is one example of a machine.....

Code, coding:

- a. Do you have any ...coding..... Sheet left.
- b. I have to ...code..... my program.
- c. Assembler is one example of a machine.....code.....

Printer, Printing, Print, Printed:

- a.print..... your name and address in block letters.
- b.printing..... was introduced by Gutenberg in Germany.
- c. The quality of theprinted.....output from a daisy wheel printer is superior to that from a dot matrix.
- d.printers.....provided a hard copy of the results of data processing operations.

7a. Content Review:

Try to think of a definition for each of these items before checking them in the Glossary. Then complete the following statements with the appropriate words. Make sure you use the correct form, i.e. singular or plural.

Special forms that are usually used for writing programs are called ...coding sheets.....

Another word for program errors is ...bugs.....

A number of steps used in solving a program is called an ...algorithm.....

A machine that is incapable of thinking but follows instructions is called a ...robot.....

Aflow chart..... is either a group of exact sentences to solve a problem or a block diagram.

7b. Control Review:

Solving a problem is a process involving various steps. Complete the following diagram to show the sequence of these steps.

1. Define the problem clearly
2. Formulate an algorithm
3. Translate the algorithm into a computer program
4. Key punch the program
5. Test the program
6. Add data to the program and run the job
8. Focus Review:

Focus On: Cause and effect/result

The following sentences were taken from the text on 'Steps in Problem Solving'. While reading these sentences underline the cause once, the effect/result twice, then circle the causal-effect/result marker.

1. If the programmer is using a terminal instead of cards to enter his instructions, he can, with the aid of a few commands, store the program in the memory of the computer and get a printout.
2. The computer will follow the instructions in the program to the minutest details. Therefore, one can say that the computer is a robot.

Classifying:

The term 'classification' means to separate objects from one another. The simplest classification divides things into those that show groups of characteristics that are shared and those that are not.

1. From General to Specific:

There are several ways to express each of these relationships. By focusing on the large or high-level category and talking about its parts, that is, from general to specific, the following expressions can be used:

- is
- is made up of
- can be divided into
- is composed of
- is of
- comprises
- has
- includes
- consists of

Examples:

1. The CPU is divided into three parts: the control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory.
2. The CPU has three parts: the control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory.
3. The CPU includes three parts: the control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory.
4. The CPU is made up of three parts: the control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory.
5. The CPU is composed of three parts: the control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory.
6. The CPU consists of three parts: the control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory.

2. From Specific to General:

A specific to general classification, what the smaller (or lower-level) components make when they are put together, usually has the following expressions:

- are...
- of
- constitute
- make up
- may be
- form

- can be

Examples:

1. The control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory are the three parts of the CPU.
2. The control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory are the three parts that make up the CPU.
3. The control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory are the three parts that form the CPU.
4. The control unit, the arithmetic -logical unit, and memory are the three parts that constitute the CPU.
5. The control unit, the arithmetic-logical unit, and memory together are classified as the CPU.

N.B. The active/passive pairs such as made up and make up are not interchangeable.

Finally, understanding classification is important for understanding and recognizing definitions.

Exercise 1:

A computer has four basic components: input, processor, memory, and output. The CPU consists of two parts: thecontrol unit..... which directs and controls the signals and commands inside the processor, and thearithmetic-logical..... unit which does the arithmetic operations and the decision-making operations. While the ...control unit.....is made up of aregister....., adecoder....., a.....counter..... and a.....clock....., the ...ALU..... is composed ofregisters....., a.....binary adders..... and ...circuitry.....,which compares information and makes decision based on the results of the comparisons. In a computer, internal memory orprimary memory..... refers to the storage location inside the computer, whereas.....secondary memory..... refers to the VU © Copyright Virtual University of Pakistan 135 storage embodied in the peripherals.....core..... can be divided into three types:.....chip....., andbubble..... on the other hand may be grouped assecondary memory..... (.....) orsequential..... (.....). Thetape devices can be either arandom access....., adisk....., a.....input..... or a ...card reader.....These devices enter the information into the computer. After the processor has operated on it, the ...tape drive..... devices display the results of the computations on either adisk drive..... or aterminal..... or store them on tape or disk for future use. These devices enter the information into the computer. After the processor has operated on it, theoutput..... devices display the results of the computations on either aprinter..... or a ...terminal..... or store them on tape or disk for future use.

Exercise 2:

Using the diagram below, complete the paragraph that follows.

A computer system

CPU

A computer has four basic Components: input, processor, memory, and output. The CPU consists of two parts: the _____ which directs and controls the signals and commands inside the processor, and the unit which does the arithmetic operations and the decision making operations. While the _____ is made up of a _____, a _____, and a _____, the _____ is composed of _____, a _____ and _____, which compares information and makes decisions based on the results of the comparisons. In a Computer internal memory or _____ refers to the storage locations inside the computer, whereas _____ refers to the storage embodied in the peripherals. _____ can be divided into three types: _____, _____ and _____. _____ on the other hand may be grouped as _____ (_____) or _____ (_____). The _____ devices can be either a _____, a _____, a _____ or a _____.

LECTURE # 21

Main Idea:

Every programmer must know how to flowchart.

Program documentation specifies what the program is supposed to do.

Flowcharting is a basic step in programming.

Understanding the Passage:

A good flowchart takes into account the steps necessary to solve the problem. (T/F)

It is not possible to draw a flowchart without using a template. (T/F)

There is only one possible flowchart for every problem. (T/F)

Every programmer must learn flowcharting and realize its importance. (T/F)

The method of flowcharting depends on the programming language being used. (T/F)

Flowcharts show the logic one has to follow to solve the problem. (T/F)

Documenting a program is essential in explaining what the program is supposed to do. (T/F)

If the flowchart is correct, the program will certainly work. (T/F)

Each symbol in flowcharting has a specific meaning. (T/F)

Flowchart can show processes, but not decisions. (T/F)

Answers:

T, 2. F, 3. F, 4. T, 5. F, 6. T, 7. T, 8. F, 9. T, 10. F

Locating Information:

A programmer must document his program in order that others may be able to understand it.

Flowcharting resembles a map.

Flowcharting shows the logical ability of a programmer.

There is more than one way of flowcharting.

A certain symbol is used to indicate if a question is to be answered 'yes' or 'no'.

Answers:

A certain symbol is used to indicate if a question is to be answered 'yes' or 'no'.

Contextual Reference:

Does not run as it should (1.10) - program

In the former version (1.16) - freehand version

This is quite satisfactory (1.18) - graphic jotting down outlines

The latter method (1.20) - neater readable version

Flowcharting symbols cut into it (1.21) - sheet of plastic used

Which indicates the beginning (1.23) - symbol

It indicates that something (1.27) - figure

That may be altogether (1.40) - flow chart and program

The original one is missing (1.48) - flowchart

Which is a must in programming (1.53) - logical analytical ability

Answers:

Understanding Words:

Route (1.6) - path

Try (1.9) - attempt

Answer (1.14) - response

Put in (1.25) - input

Show (1.52) - indicate

Antonyms:

Unlimited (1.7) - limited

Undiscovered (1.11) - known

Temporary (1.19) - permanent

Inaccessible (1.45) - accessible

Illogical (1.53) - logical

Word Forms:

Involvement, involve, involved, involving

a. In most operations, computers can do the job much faster than man.

- b. Flowcharting involves a logical analysis of a problem and a diagrammatic representation of the sequence of events.
- c. The involvement of the new programmer in the user's group was appreciated by his manager.

Correction, correct, corrected, corrective, correcting

- a. It is always a good approach to correct the errors in your program before running it with the data.
- b. In order to develop a good flowchart, a programmer should be aware of the sequence of steps needed to obtain a correct solution to a problem.
- c. He submitted the corrected version of the program to be keypunched.

Process, processed, processing

- a. The Central Processing Unit is responsible for executing the programs.
- b. A block diagram can show if a process has to be repeated or if there are alternative routes to be taken.
- c. The applications of all the new students were processed by the computer.

Performance, perform, performed, performing, performer

- a. Perform is a verb used quite often in COBOL programming.
- b. Data processing refers to the operations which are performed on the data either to derive information from them or to order them in files.
- c. The performance of the computer salesman was measured by the number of units he sold.

Documentation, document, documented, documenting

- a. Documenting a program is essential so that other programmers can understand it.
- b. It took the programmer one week to complete the documentation of the programs in the new system.
- c. The payroll package we purchased is very well documented.

Content Review:

Executing
Terminal
Rectangle
Template
Parallelogram
Diamond
Documentation
Answers:

The information describing what a program can do and what the results mean is referred to as Documentation.

It is advisable to test the program without data before Executing it.

A piece of plastic with different shapes used for flowcharting is called a Template.

Data used as input must be indicated with a Rectangle.

The symbol which marks the beginning and end of a program is called the Terminal symbol.

Focus Review:

Cause and Effect

Answer:

Predictions and Conditions:

It has been said that if transport technology had developed as rapidly as computer technology, a trip across the Atlantic Ocean today would take a few seconds.

Answer:

Condition: If transport technology had developed as rapidly as computer technology

Prediction: A trip across the Atlantic Ocean today would take a few seconds.

Exercise: Read the following sentences and underline the part that expresses a condition, once; and the part expressing a prediction, twice:

It has been said that if transport technology had developed as rapidly as computer technology, a trip across the Atlantic Ocean today would take a few seconds.

Working for the U.S. Census Bureau, Dr. Hollerith realized that unless some means of speeding up the analyses of census data were found, it would take more than ten years to complete the job.

If the hammer in train printers hits a little early or late, the character will appear slightly to the right of its proper position.

Mainframes would still be occupying a lot of space if it weren't for microminiaturization.

If computer technology continues growing at the rate it has, bubble memory will soon replace the chip.

LECTURE # 22

In writing, what does the focus shift to in today's lesson?

- a. Reading comprehension
- b. Vocabulary expansion
- c. Sentence and paragraph writing
- d. Grammar exercises

Answer: c. Sentence and paragraph writing

What are the three main aspects necessary for good writing mentioned in the text?

- a. Reading, speaking, and composition
- b. Rhetoric, grammar, and punctuation

- c. Grammar, rhetoric, and composition
 - d. Syntax, vocabulary, and punctuation
- Answer: c. Grammar, rhetoric, and composition

What is a compound-complex sentence?

- a. A sentence with multiple subjects and verbs
- b. A sentence with independent and dependent clauses
- c. A sentence with both statements and questions
- d. A sentence with elaborate punctuation usage

Answer: b. A sentence with independent and dependent clauses

Which part of speech is NOT mentioned among the eight basic parts of English speech?

- a. Proposition
- b. Conjunction
- c. Interjection
- d. Prefix

Answer: d. Prefix

Which sentence type is characterized by having two or more complete thoughts?

- a. Simple sentence
- b. Compound sentence
- c. Complex sentence
- d. Compound-complex sentence

Answer: b. Compound sentence

What is the primary purpose of rhetoric in writing?

- a. Choosing effective words and arranging them well
- b. Mastering grammatical rules
- c. Understanding sentence structure
- d. Memorizing vocabulary

Answer: a. Choosing effective words and arranging them well

What distinguishes a complex sentence from a simple sentence?

- a. The presence of dependent clauses
- b. The absence of verbs
- c. The use of conjunctions
- d. The inclusion of multiple subjects

Answer: a. The presence of dependent clauses

How is a compound sentence typically joined together?

- a. By a dependent word
- b. By a comma and a joining word
- c. By a semicolon
- d. By a period

Answer: b. By a comma and a joining word

What is the main characteristic of a compound-complex sentence?

- a. It includes only dependent clauses
- b. It has multiple subjects and verbs

- c. It contains both independent and dependent clauses
- d. It is shorter than a simple sentence

Answer: c. It contains both independent and dependent clauses

What aspect of writing is emphasized as a learned skill in the passage?

- a. Vocabulary expansion
- b. Syntax mastery
- c. Punctuation usage
- d. Grammar and composition

Answer: d. Grammar and composition

LECTURE # 23

What are the three elements that contribute to the effectiveness of sentences?

- a. Unity, coherence, and emphasis
- b. Vocabulary, grammar, and punctuation
- c. Syntax, structure, and style
- d. Clarity, conciseness, and creativity

Answer: a. Unity, coherence, and emphasis

Which aspect of sentence effectiveness ensures that every part of a sentence contributes to one main idea?

- a. Unity
- b. Coherence
- c. Emphasis
- d. Clarity

Answer: a. Unity

What does coherence refer to in a sentence?

- a. The use of parallel structure
- b. The clear relationship between sentence parts
- c. The emphasis on important words
- d. The grammatical correctness of each clause

Answer: b. The clear relationship between sentence parts

In which way can the unity of a sentence be violated?

- a. By using complex sentence structures
- b. By combining unrelated ideas
- c. By employing too many conjunctions
- d. By repeating words excessively

Answer: b. By combining unrelated ideas

What is the primary purpose of using parallelism in sentences?

- a. To confuse the reader
- b. To emphasize important ideas

- c. To maintain coherence and clarity
 - d. To create complex sentence structures
- Answer: c. To maintain coherence and clarity

Which of the following sentences demonstrates faulty parallelism?

- a. "He likes swimming and to go fishing."
- b. "She told me to look on the table and that I should tell her what I found."
- c. "They not only went to the beach but also hiking in the mountains."
- d. "His job involves writing reports and meeting clients."

Answer: a. "He likes swimming and to go fishing."

How does emphasis contribute to effective sentence writing?

- a. By adding unnecessary details
- b. By highlighting important ideas or words
- c. By using passive voice constructions
- d. By omitting conjunctions

Answer: b. By highlighting important ideas or words

What is a common pitfall in coherence that involves the use of pronouns?

- a. Split constructions
- b. Weak reference of pronouns
- c. Overuse of conjunctions
- d. Faulty parallelism

Answer: b. Weak reference of pronouns

How can coherence be improved in a sentence?

- a. By introducing more complex sentence structures
- b. By repeating ideas frequently
- c. By avoiding aimless shifting in point of view
- d. By using ambiguous pronouns deliberately

Answer: c. By avoiding aimless shifting in point of view

Which element of emphasis involves the strategic placement of important information?

- a. Position
- b. Climax
- c. Repetition
- d. Subordination

Answer: a. Position

What is the purpose of emphasizing important parts of a sentence?

- a. To confuse the reader
- b. To distract from the main idea
- c. To direct attention to key points
- d. To complicate sentence structure

Answer: c. To direct attention to key points

Which of the following sentences lacks coherence due to weak reference of pronouns?

- a. "Susan and her sister both saw the film, but she was disappointed."
- b. "He took an oath to never, no matter what happened, reveal the secrets of the organization."

- c. "We were informed by the doctor that the young girl had been told of her mother's death by him."
 - d. "She put the computer on the table, which her sister had bought."
- Answer: a. "Susan and her sister both saw the film, but she was disappointed."

What is the primary purpose of using parallel structure in sentences?

- a. To make sentences longer
 - b. To create complexity
 - c. To maintain coherence and clarity
 - d. To confuse the reader
- Answer: c. To maintain coherence and clarity

Which aspect of emphasis involves the repetition of certain words or phrases?

- a. Position
 - b. Climax
 - c. Repetition
 - d. Subordination
- Answer: c. Repetition

How does coherence contribute to effective sentence writing?

- a. By introducing ambiguity
