ENG516_ Mid-Term_Spring 2025

Q. Achievable Objective

An achievable objective must be realistic, attainable within existing abilities, facilities, and constraints. It should be something learners can reach based on their current skills and available resources.

Q. Pedagogical Needs (3 aspects)

1. Teacher's Needs: Based on the teacher's style, experience, and needs.
2. Learning Situation Needs: Based on the learning environment (equipment, time, facilities).
3. Learning Needs: Based on students' learning styles, motivations, and goals.

Q. Teacher Writing Rules (3)

1. Apply clarity, conciseness, correctness, and ethics.
2. Structure writing as a process (planning, drafting, editing).
3. Use appropriate style and tone for the audience and purpose.

Q. How and What Questions Add Clarity

Answering Who, What, Where, When, Which, Why adds clarity by ensuring specific, relevant, and understandable communication. These questions eliminate ambiguity in writing and speech.

Q. Five Categories for Grouping Learners

1. By experience (pre-experienced, job experienced, general experienced)
2. By organizational level (e.g., junior vs. senior employees)
3. By national culture
4. By specific needs
5. By language level.

Q. Role Play Activity in Authentic Material

Role-plays are part of the communication stage in teaching. They simulate real-life scenarios and are trainee-controlled, enhancing fluency and real-world application.

Q. Teaching Style

Teaching styles shift from teacher-centered to learner-centered. The role of the trainer may evolve from controller to facilitator depending on the stage and objective of the course.

Q. NLP (Neuro-Linguistic Programming)

NLP helps in understanding how people perceive, process, and respond to language. It enhances communication, rapport building, and self-awareness among learners and teachers.

Q. Five Ethical Questions

1. Is all the information collected really necessary?
2. Who will have access to this information?
3. What will be reported to superiors?

Compilation

4. Was the subject informed during data collection?
5. Is the teacher qualified to make decisions based on this data?

Q. Difference Between Teaching and Training

- Teaching: Focuses on general knowledge and concepts, often broader.
- Training: Skill-specific, application-oriented, often related to job performance.

Q. Framework

A framework in course design includes aims, objectives, competencies (linguistic, discourse, intercultural), and methods to achieve them using a grid or organized structure.

Q. Features of Placement Test

1. Matches learner with suitable course level.
2. Tests receptive skills more than productive ones.
3. May include task-based elements for real-life relevance.
4. Lacks focus on intercultural competence.

Q. Difference Between Intensive and Extensive Teacher Training

- Intensive: Short-term, high focus, covers core skills in a condensed format.
- Extensive: Long-term, spread-out, allows for gradual development of teaching practices.

Q. Objective vs Subjective

- Objective: Measurable, factual (e.g., test scores).
- Subjective: Opinion-based, depends on personal judgment (e.g., performance observation).

Q. Three Characteristics of Placement Test

1. Reliable and consistent.
2. Suits learner needs and environment.
3. Quick and easy to administer.

Q. Define Time-Bound Objectives

Objectives that specify a clear deadline or timeframe for completion, creating urgency and focus (e.g., "complete by July 15").

Q. How Fluency Can Be Achieved in Business Language (3 lines)

1. Use real-world communication activities like role-plays and discussions.
2. Encourage independent use of strategies and language.
3. Provide authentic material and scenarios for practice.

Q. Five Components of Feedback

1. Clear
2. Specific

Compilation

3. Timely
4. Constructive
5. Related to objectives and performance.

Q. What is a Lesson?

A structured unit of instruction with objectives, activities (e.g., presentation, practice), and assessment—often part of a larger program or syllabus.

Q. Teacher's Role as Consultant in Business Language Teaching

As a consultant, the teacher:

- Acts as an expert
- Provides advice and evaluation
- Analyzes progress
- Assesses if objectives are met.
