ENG519

MCQs:

1) Syllabus design is one aspect of curriculum development.

2) One of the important elements of organizational factor is good internal communication and professional treatment of teachers.

3) Critical needs analysis issue in needs analysis that have been the focus of continuing debate.

4) Spaced retrieval principle comes from studies of the effects of repetition on learning and the levels of processing theory.

5) Standards are descriptions of the target's students should be able to reach in different domains of curriculum content.

6) An instructional block is a self-contained learning sequence that has its own goals and objectives.

7) Activity of short talk and letter writing is a part of meaning focused output.

8) formulating goal is not an objective scientific enterprise but a judgment call.

9) Authentic materials refer to the use in teaching of texts, photographs, video selections, and other teaching resources that were not specially prepared for pedagogical purposes.

10) The approach that emphasizes first on those teaching structures that are similar to the native language called linguistic distance.

11) An ESP approach starts instead with an analysis of the learner's needs.

12) Exceptional teachers can often compensate for the poor-quality resources and materials they have to work from.

13) Learners are the key participants in curriculum project.

14) Throughout the 1970s, the ESP approach in language teaching drew on register analysis and discourse analysis to determine the linguistic characteristics of different disciplines.

Subjective:

Short Questions:

1st Short:

Fill in the blanks.

1) The first group of principles deals with content and sequencing.
2) The second group of principles deals with format and presentation.
3) The third group of principles deals with monitoring and assessment.

2nd Short

the meaning of the language in order to complete the task successfully.

Topic-088: Sequencing the Content in a Course: A Linear Approach

S.Q

The lessons or units of a course can fit together in a variety of ways. The two major divisions are whether the material in one lesson depends on the learning that has occurred in previous lessons (a linear development) or whether each lesson is separate from the others so that the lessons can be done in any order and need not all be done a modular arrangement.

Long Questions:

Q#03:

1) Linguistic distance approach emphasizes first on those teaching structures that are similar to the native language (TRUE).

2) This is because the elements that are similar the learners' native language will be difficult (FALSE).

3) Intrinsic difficulty argues that complex structures should be taught before the simplest ones (FALSE).

4) The frequency of occurrence of structures and grammatical items in the target language may not affect the order in which they appear in a syllabus (FALSE).

5) In the 1940s, beginners' courses in English began to appear in which principles of vocabulary and grammatical control were evident and in which grammatical structures were organized into graded sequences (TRUE).

Q#04:

According to Types of Syllabus ' label them'?

1) It is organized around themes, topics, or other units of content. With a topical syllabus, content rather than/ grammar, functions, or situations is the starting point in syllabus design. Content may provide the sole criterion for organizing the syllabus or a framework for linking a variety of different syllabus strands together. "It is the teaching of content or information in the language being learned with little or no direct effort to teach the language separately from the content being taught" (Krahnke, 1987).

Topical or content-based syllabus

2) It is based on a specification of the competency's learners are expected to master in relation to specific situations and activities. Competencies are a description of the essential skills, knowledge, and attitudes required for effective performance of particular tasks and activities. For example, the work-skills curriculum in Mrowicki (1986) is organized according to topics and competencies.

Competency-based syllabus

Remember me in your precious prayers

Best of luck!