Lesson #21: Reading – Presenting Information Graphically

Important Exam Points

Flowcharting is a basic step in programming.

A flowchart shows the logical sequence of steps to solve a problem.

A flowchart is similar to a road map because it shows the path of program execution.

Flowcharting is not restricted to any specific programming language.

Errors are easier to detect in a flowchart than in the actual program.

A programmer must understand the problem before preparing a flowchart.

There are two types of flowcharts: Freehand and Template-based.

Freehand flowcharts are used for temporary work.

Template-based flowcharts are neat, readable, and suitable for permanent records.

The Terminal symbol indicates the beginning (START) and end (STOP) of a program.

The Parallelogram symbol represents Input and Output operations.

The Rectangle symbol represents Processing.

The Diamond symbol represents Decision (Yes/No).

Arrows indicate the direction or flow of the program.

A flowchart is a planning tool, not a computer program.

Different programmers may prepare different flowcharts for the same problem.

Program documentation includes the program, flowchart, and user instructions.

A new flowchart can be created if the original documentation is missing.

Flowcharting demonstrates a programmer's logical and analytical ability.

A correct flowchart helps in program development but does not guarantee an error-free program.

Condition statements usually begin with if.

Predictions describe future results based on present conditions.

Words like will, may, might, could, probably, certainly, likely, and unlikely are used to express different levels of prediction.

20 Very Important Statement MCQs

1. Which statement about flowcharting is correct?

- A) It is the final step in programming.
- B) It is used only after coding.
- C) It is a basic step in programming. ✓
- D) It is unnecessary for programmers.

2. Which statement correctly describes a flowchart?

- A) It is a computer program.
- B) It is a hardware diagram.
- C) It shows the logical sequence of a program. ✓
- D) It stores program data.

3. Which statement is true about flowcharting?

- A) It depends on the programming language.
- B) It is limited to C++ programs.
- C) It is independent of programming languages. ✓
- D) It is used only in software testing.

4. Which statement is correct?

- A) Errors are easier to find in source code.
- B) Errors cannot be found in flowcharts.
- C) Errors are easier to detect in flowcharts than in programs. ✓
- D) Flowcharts increase programming errors.

5. Which statement about problem solving is correct?

- A) Coding comes before understanding the problem.
- B) Templates solve programming problems.
- C) A programmer must understand the problem before making a flowchart. ✓
- D) Documentation replaces problem analysis.

6. Which statement about flowchart types is correct?

- A) Only one type of flowchart exists.
- B) Only template flowcharts are allowed.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

- C) Flowcharts can be freehand or template-based. ✓
D) Freehand flowcharts are permanent records.

7. Which statement about the Terminal symbol is correct?

- A) It represents processing.
B) It represents input/output.
C) It represents the start and stop of a program. ✓
D) It represents decision making.

8. Which statement about the Parallelogram symbol is correct?

- A) It represents processing.
B) It represents input and output operations. ✓
C) It represents decisions.
D) It represents the end of a program.

9. Which statement about the Rectangle symbol is correct?

- A) It represents decision making.
B) It represents input/output.
C) It represents processing. ✓
D) It represents the program start.

10. Which statement about the Diamond symbol is correct?

- A) It shows input operations.
B) It shows processing.
C) It represents Yes/No decisions. ✓
D) It ends the program.

11. Which statement about arrows in a flowchart is correct?

- A) They represent calculations.
B) They represent documentation.
C) They indicate the direction of program flow. ✓
D) They represent storage.

12. Which statement about flowcharts is true?

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

- A) A flowchart is a completed program.
 - B) A flowchart replaces source code.
 - C) A flowchart is a planning tool before programming. ✓
 - D) A flowchart is used only after testing.

13. Which statement about programmers is correct?

- A) Every programmer creates the same flowchart.
 - B) Only experts can prepare flowcharts.
 - C) Different programmers may create different flowcharts for the same problem. ✓
 - D) Flowcharts never differ.

14. Which statement about documentation is correct?

- A) Documentation is not important.
 - B) Documentation contains only source code.
 - C) Documentation includes the program, flowchart, and instructions. ✓
 - D) Documentation is prepared after software installation.

15. Which statement is correct if documentation is missing?

- A) The program must be deleted.
 - B) The program cannot be understood.
 - C) A new flowchart can be prepared from the program. ✓
 - D) The computer cannot execute the program.

16. Which statement is correct about flowcharting?

- A) It measures typing speed.
 - B) It improves computer hardware.
 - C) It shows a programmer's logical and analytical ability. ✓
 - D) It replaces programming skills.

17. Which statement about a correct flowchart is true?

- A) It guarantees a perfect program.
 - B) It removes all errors automatically.
 - C) It helps develop the program correctly but does not guarantee success. ✓
 - D) It replaces program testing.

18. Which statement about prediction is correct?

20. Which statement about prediction words is correct?

- A) Only "will" is used in predictions.
- B) Prediction words always express certainty.
- C) "May" and "might" express impossibility.
- D) Words like "will," "may," "might," and "could" express different levels of prediction. ✓

Lesson #22: The Compound–Complex Writing: Sentence Types

Important Exam Points

Writing is a learned skill that requires knowledge and regular practice.

Good writing depends on grammar, rhetoric, and composition.

Grammar deals with parts of speech, syntax, and correct language usage.

Rhetoric focuses on the effective choice and arrangement of words.

Composition means arranging words into sentences, sentences into paragraphs, and paragraphs into complete writing.

The eight parts of speech are Noun, Pronoun, Verb, Adjective, Adverb, Preposition, Conjunction, and Interjection.

Participle is a combination of a verb and an adjective.

Gerund is a combination of a verb and a noun.

Infinitive is also a combination of a verb and a noun.

Relative adverb functions as both an adverb and a conjunction.

Good writing depends on correct grammar, vocabulary, punctuation, and sentence structure.

A sentence is a group of words containing a subject and a verb that expresses a complete thought.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Sentences are classified according to meaning and structure.

According to meaning, sentences are Declarative, Interrogative, Imperative, Exclamatory, and Greetings/Expressions.

According to structure, sentences are Simple, Compound, Complex, and Compound-Complex.

A simple sentence contains only one independent clause.

A simple sentence may have more than one subject.

A simple sentence may have more than one verb.

A compound sentence contains two or more independent clauses.

Compound sentences are joined by a comma and a coordinating conjunction.

The coordinating conjunctions are and, but, so, for, yet, or, and nor.

A complex sentence contains one independent clause and at least one dependent clause.

A dependent clause cannot stand alone as a complete sentence.

Dependent clauses begin with subordinating conjunctions.

Common subordinating conjunctions include after, although, because, before, if, since, unless, until, when, whenever, where, wherever, while, and whether.

A dependent clause contains both a subject and a verb.

A compound-complex sentence contains two or more independent clauses and at least one dependent clause.

Correct punctuation is essential in compound and complex sentences.

Strong sentence construction improves the effectiveness of writing.

- A) Effective writing depends only on ideas.
- B) Vocabulary alone makes writing effective.
- C) Grammar alone is enough for good writing.
- D) Strong sentence construction makes writing more effective. ✓

Lesson #23: Writing – Effective Sentences: Unity, Coherence, and Emphasis

Important Exam Points

Effective sentences are based on three elements: Unity, Coherence, and Emphasis.

Unity means every part of a sentence should support one main idea.

A sentence should express only one central thought.

Combining unrelated ideas destroys sentence unity.

Adding too many details in one sentence weakens unity.

Failure to complete an idea or grammatical construction destroys unity.

Main ideas should remain in the main clause.

Subordinate ideas should support the main idea.

Subordination gives greater emphasis to the main thought.

Parallelism means ideas of equal importance should have the same grammatical structure.

Nouns should be parallel with nouns.

Verbs should be parallel with verbs.

Gerunds should be parallel with gerunds.

Clauses should be parallel with clauses.

Faulty parallelism reduces sentence effectiveness.

Correlative conjunctions such as either...or and not only...but also must join parallel elements.

Repeating prepositions when necessary improves parallel structure.

Coherence means ideas should be arranged in a logical and clear order.

Unity, subordination, and parallelism help create coherence.

Ambiguous pronoun references destroy coherence.

Pronouns must clearly refer to their correct antecedents.

Split constructions reduce sentence clarity.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Mixed constructions should be avoided.

Mixed figures of speech reduce sentence effectiveness.

Needless shifts in voice, number, or tense destroy coherence.

Avoid unnecessary shifts from active to passive voice.

Avoid unnecessary shifts from singular to plural.

Avoid unnecessary shifts from past tense to present tense.

Emphasis directs attention to the most important idea.

Important ideas should be placed in strong sentence positions.

The order of climax presents ideas from less important to more important.

Repetition may be used for emphasis when appropriate.

Effective writing requires proper unity, coherence, and emphasis.

20 Very Important Statement MCQs

1. Which statement about effective sentences is correct?

- A) They depend only on grammar.
 - B) They depend only on vocabulary.
 - C) They require unity, coherence, and emphasis. ✓
 - D) They require only punctuation.

2. Which statement about unity is correct?

- A) A sentence should contain unrelated ideas.
 - B) A sentence should contain many main ideas.
 - C) A sentence should express one main idea. ✓
 - D) Unity is not important in writing.

3. Which statement destroys sentence unity?

- A) Supporting one main idea.
 - B) Using related details.
 - C) Combining unrelated ideas. ✓
 - D) Using complete thoughts.

4. Which statement about sentence details is correct?

- A) More details always improve a sentence.
 - B) Every sentence should include all possible ideas.
 - C) Too many details can distract from the main idea. ✓
 - D) Details never affect sentence quality.

5. Which statement about subordination is correct?

- A) Main ideas should always be subordinate.
 - B) All ideas should have equal importance.
 - C) Subordinate ideas should support the main idea. ✓
 - D) Subordination is unnecessary.

6. Which statement about parallelism is correct?

- A) Different grammatical forms should always be mixed.
 - B) Parallelism is used only in poetry.
 - C) Equal ideas should have equal grammatical structure. ✓
 - D) Parallelism applies only to verbs.

7. Which statement about parallel structure is correct?

19. Which statement about sentence effectiveness is correct?

- A) Grammar alone makes a sentence effective.
 - B) Vocabulary alone makes writing effective.
 - C) Unity, coherence, and emphasis together create effective sentences. ✓
 - D) Long sentences are always effective.

20. Which statement best describes effective writing?

- A) It depends only on sentence length.
- B) It depends only on correct spelling.
- C) It depends only on punctuation.
- D) It presents ideas clearly, logically, and with proper emphasis. ✓

Lesson #24: Writing – Identifying Sentence Errors

Important Exam Points

Sentence errors reduce the effectiveness and clarity of writing.

The four common sentence errors are Sentence Fragments, Run-on Sentences, Misplaced Modifiers, and Dangling Modifiers.

A complete sentence must contain a subject, a verb, and a complete thought.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

A sentence fragment is an incomplete sentence.

Sentence fragments may lack a subject.

Sentence fragments may lack a verb.

Sentence fragments may fail to express a complete thought.

Dependent word fragments begin with subordinating words such as because, since, after, when, and unless.

A dependent clause cannot stand alone as a complete sentence.

Dependent word fragments become complete by adding an independent clause.

-ing fragments usually begin with a verb ending in -ing and lack a complete thought.

To fragments usually begin with to + verb and are incomplete.

An -ing fragment can be corrected by joining it with the main sentence.

A to fragment can be corrected by adding a subject and a verb.

Added-detail fragments begin with words such as like, including, such as, for example, for instance, except, without, especially, and also.

Added-detail fragments are incomplete because they lack a subject and a verb.

Added-detail fragments are corrected by attaching them to the main sentence or making them complete.

Missing-subject fragments contain a verb but no subject.

Missing-subject fragments can be corrected by adding the missing subject or joining them with the previous sentence.

Run-on sentences occur when two or more independent clauses are joined incorrectly.

Fused sentences are a type of run-on sentence without proper punctuation or conjunction.

Comma splice occurs when two independent clauses are joined only with a comma.

Misplaced modifiers describe the wrong word because of incorrect placement.

Dangling modifiers do not clearly modify any word in the sentence.

Correct sentence construction improves clarity, accuracy, and communication.

Lesson #25: Writing – Revising Sentence Errors

Important Exam Points

Run-on sentences contain two or more complete thoughts without proper separation.

The two types of run-on sentences are Fused Sentences and Comma Splices.

A fused sentence joins two independent clauses without punctuation or conjunctions.

A comma splice joins two independent clauses using only a comma.

Reading sentences aloud helps identify run-on sentences.

Words such as he, she, it, they, this, that, now, then, and next often indicate the beginning of a new complete thought.

A fused sentence can be corrected by separating it into two sentences.

A fused sentence can be corrected by using a comma and a coordinating conjunction.

A fused sentence can also be corrected by using subordination.

Common coordinating conjunctions are and, but, and so.

The comma is placed before the coordinating conjunction.

Subordination uses words such as because, when, if, before, since, until, unless, while, as, though, and after.

A dependent clause cannot stand alone as a complete sentence.

When a dependent clause comes first, it is followed by a comma.

Comma splices are corrected using the same methods as fused sentences.

A modifier is a word or group of words that describes another word.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

A misplaced modifier is separated from the word it modifies.

Misplaced modifiers can change or confuse the meaning of a sentence.

Modifiers should be placed as close as possible to the words they modify.

Single-word modifiers such as only, almost, and nearly should be placed directly before the word they modify.

A dangling modifier has no clear word to modify.

Dangling modifiers create unclear or incorrect meanings.

Dangling modifiers are corrected by supplying the correct subject or rewriting the sentence.

Correct sentence revision improves clarity, accuracy, and readability.

Lesson 26: Subject-Verb Agreement

Important Exam Points

Subject and verb must always agree in number.

A singular subject always takes a singular verb.

A plural subject always takes a plural verb.

In the present tense, singular subjects (except I and You) take verbs ending in -s or -es.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Plural subjects, I, and You use the base form of the verb without -s.

A prepositional phrase begins with a preposition and ends with a noun or pronoun.

The subject of a sentence is never part of a prepositional phrase.

The verb always agrees with the main subject, not with the noun in the prepositional phrase.

In questions and sentences beginning with There or Here, find the subject before choosing the verb.

The subject may appear after the verb in interrogative and inverted sentences.

Indefinite pronouns like each, either, neither, everyone, everybody, anyone, somebody, no one, nothing are always singular.

Singular indefinite pronouns always take singular verbs.

Compound subjects joined by and usually take a plural verb.

Compound subjects joined by or, nor, either...or, neither...nor, not only...but also take a verb according to the nearer subject.

The pronouns both and few are always plural and take plural verbs.

The pronouns all and some may be singular or plural depending on the noun following them.

To identify the subject correctly, ask Who? or What? after finding the verb.

Ignoring extra words and prepositional phrases helps identify the correct subject.

Correct subject-verb agreement makes writing grammatically accurate.

Most subject-verb agreement mistakes occur when the subject and verb are separated by extra words.

Lesson 27: Pronouns (Agreement, Reference & Point of View)

Important Exam Points

A pronoun must agree in number with its antecedent.

A singular antecedent requires a singular pronoun.

A plural antecedent requires a plural pronoun.

Agreement applies to nouns, pronouns, and verbs.

The word to which a pronoun refers is called its antecedent.

Indefinite pronouns such as each, either, neither, everyone, anybody, someone, nobody, and everything are always singular.

Singular indefinite pronouns take singular pronouns and singular verbs.

Pronoun reference means a pronoun must clearly refer to one specific antecedent.

Ambiguous pronoun reference makes the meaning of a sentence unclear.

Avoid using pronouns when the antecedent is not clearly identified.

Pronouns must agree with their antecedents in number, person, and gender.

The pronouns "which" and "this" should clearly refer to one idea or object.

A pronoun should never refer to more than one possible antecedent.

Pronoun point of view means keeping the same person throughout the sentence.

First person pronouns include I, me, we, us, my, and our.

Second person pronouns include you and your.

Third person pronouns include he, she, it, they, him, her, them, and their.

Avoid unnecessary shifts between first, second, and third person.

Consistent pronoun usage improves clarity and sentence effectiveness.

Correct pronoun agreement, reference, and point of view make writing accurate and easy to understand.

20. Good writing requires correct pronoun agreement, clear reference, and consistent ____.

- A) Vocabulary
 - B) Spelling
 - C) Point of view ✓
 - D) Punctuation

Important Exam Points – Lesson 28 (Word Choice)

Good writing depends on choosing words that are suitable for the subject, occasion, and audience.

A grammatically correct sentence may still be ineffective because of poor word choice.

Slang should be avoided in formal writing because it is informal, vague, and suitable only for casual conversation.

Slang differs from country to country and changes over time.

Slang may be used only when the writer has a specific purpose such as humor.

Clichés are overused expressions that have lost their originality and effectiveness.

Good writers replace clichés with fresh and original expressions.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Wordiness makes writing longer than necessary and weakens communication.

Clear, concise, and direct words improve writing quality.

Expressions like "due to the fact that" should be replaced with "because."

Expressions like "in order to" should be replaced with "to."

Expressions like "at this point in time" should be replaced with "now."

Expressions like "a large number of" should be replaced with "many."

Homonyms are words that sound the same or nearly the same but differ in spelling and meaning.

"Its" is a possessive pronoun, while "It's" means "It is."

"There" refers to a place, "Their" shows possession, and "They're" means "They are."

"Your" shows possession, while "You're" means "You are."

"Passed" is the past tense of pass, while "Past" refers to previous time or movement beyond something.

"Whose" shows possession, while "Who's" means "Who is" or "Who has."

"Weather" refers to climate, while "Whether" means "if."

"Accept" means to receive, while "Except" means excluding.

"Advice" is a noun, while "Advise" is a verb.

"Affect" usually means to influence, while "Effect" usually means result.

"Desert" is a dry region, "Desert" (verb) means abandon, and "Dessert" is the final course of a meal.

"Lead" is a metal or present tense verb, while "Led" is the past tense of lead.

"Quiet" means silent, "Quite" means very or completely, and "Quit" means to stop.

"Wander" means to move without direction, while "Wonder" means to be curious or amazed.

Choosing the correct homonym is essential for accurate and effective writing.

Lesson 29: Punctuation (Comma and Apostrophe)

Important Exam Points

Punctuation depends upon grammar and correct sentence structure.

Punctuation replaces pauses, gestures, and tone used in spoken language.

The two most important punctuation marks in this lesson are the Comma (,) and the Apostrophe (').

The comma indicates a very short pause in a sentence.

There are five main uses of the comma.

Comma is used between three or more items in a series.

Do not use a comma when there are only two items in a series.

Comma is used after introductory words, phrases, or clauses.

A short introductory phrase may not require a comma if misunderstanding is unlikely.

Comma is used around words or phrases that interrupt the flow of a sentence.

Interrupting words provide extra information and are enclosed by commas.

Comma is used before joining words (and, but, so, nor, or) only when they connect two complete thoughts.

Do not place a comma before and, but, or so if the second part is not a complete sentence.

Comma is used to separate direct quotations from the rest of the sentence.

When a comma comes at the end of quoted words, it is written inside the quotation marks.

The apostrophe has two main functions.

The apostrophe is used in contractions where one or more letters are omitted.

The apostrophe is used to show possession (ownership).

Common contractions include I'm, It's, Don't, Can't, Won't, They're, You're, Who's.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Know the difference between It's and Its.

Know the difference between They're and Their.

Know the difference between You're and Your.

Know the difference between Who's and Whose.

For most singular nouns, possession is shown by adding 's.

For plural nouns ending in s, possession is shown by adding only '.

Do not use an apostrophe to make a plural noun.

Verbs ending in s never take an apostrophe.

Possessive nouns show ownership, while plural nouns simply show more than one.

Knowing comma and apostrophe rules improves effective writing and sentence clarity.

(Lesson 30)

Important Exam Points

Writing is a process that requires effort, hard work, and regular practice.

The first concern in writing is content (ideas, thoughts, and feelings).

A positive attitude is essential for learning writing.

A paragraph is a group of sentences about one main idea.

A paragraph usually begins with the Topic Sentence.

The Topic Sentence states the main idea of the paragraph.

Supporting sentences explain and develop the Topic Sentence.

Supporting details may include reasons, examples, facts, and evidence.

The four goals of paragraph writing are:

Make a point.

Support the point.

Arrange ideas logically.

Write error-free sentences.

Supporting details can be organized in Listing Order or Time Order.

Listing Order uses words like First, Secondly, Next, In addition.

Time Order uses words like First, Next, Finally.

Correct spelling, grammar, punctuation, and word usage make writing clear.

Evidence includes statistics, examples, comparisons, contrasts, causes, effects, and expert opinion.

Some writers develop the idea first and then collect evidence.

Some writers collect facts first and then form the main idea.

A good paragraph has unity, support, organization, and clarity.

Only relevant evidence should support the conclusion.

Lesson 31: Writing – Paragraph

Important Exam Points

A good paragraph has five elements: topic sentence, supporting sentences, concluding sentence, unity, and coherence.

The three structural parts of a paragraph are the topic sentence, supporting sentences, and concluding sentence.

A topic sentence is the most important sentence in a paragraph.

The topic sentence tells the reader what the paragraph is about.

A topic sentence is a complete sentence containing a subject, verb, and complement.

A topic sentence contains two essential parts: the topic and the controlling idea.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

The topic names the subject of the paragraph.

The controlling idea limits the topic to a specific aspect.

A topic sentence should be general, not full of specific details.

A topic sentence should be neither too general nor too specific.

A topic sentence should contain only one controlling idea.

The topic sentence may appear at the beginning, middle, or end of a paragraph.

A paragraph may sometimes begin with a question, but a question cannot be a topic sentence.

Unity means that a paragraph discusses only one main idea.

Every supporting sentence should develop the same main idea stated in the topic sentence.

Irrelevant details destroy the unity of a paragraph.

Coherence means that a paragraph is easy to read and understand.

Coherence is achieved through logical order and transitional words.

Supporting sentences explain, develop, and support the topic sentence.

A concluding sentence has two main purposes.

A concluding sentence signals the end of the paragraph.

Words like Finally, In conclusion, In summary, and To sum up are used in concluding sentences.

A concluding sentence may restate the main idea or summarize the main points.

Writing a good paragraph follows three steps: write a topic sentence, add supporting sentences, and finish with a concluding sentence.

B. Supporting sentences → Conclusion → Topic sentence

✓C. Topic sentence → Supporting sentences → Concluding sentence

D. Supporting sentences → Topic sentence → Conclusion

Lesson 32: Unity, Coherence and Organization

Important Exam Points

A good paragraph requires the elements of unity and coherence in addition to its structural parts.

Unity means that each paragraph discusses only one main idea.

Unity has two parts.

Every supporting sentence must be directly related to the topic sentence.

Every supporting sentence must explain or prove the main idea.

Irrelevant information destroys the unity of a paragraph.

The unity of a paragraph is determined by the key terms of the topic sentence.

Supporting details should be specific and concrete, not general statements.

Do not repeat the topic sentence in different words without adding new information.

A paragraph may contain subdivisions if they are closely related to the main idea.

The length of a paragraph depends on the topic and the audience.

A paragraph should be long enough to fully develop its main idea.

Coherence means that ideas flow smoothly and logically from one sentence to the next.

Coherence can be achieved in two ways.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

The first way to achieve coherence is by using transition signals.

The second way is by arranging sentences in a logical order.

Transition signals help readers understand the relationship between ideas.

Words such as furthermore, moreover, similarly, however, for example, therefore, and in conclusion are transition signals.

Transition signals should be used appropriately, not before every sentence.

The two most common methods of organizing a paragraph are chronological order and order of importance.

Chronological order arranges ideas according to time or sequence.

Chronological paragraphs often use transition words like first, next, then, after, finally, and later.

Process or "how-to" paragraphs usually follow chronological order.

Order of importance arranges ideas from the most important to the least important, or vice versa.

The choice of organization depends on the topic and purpose of the writing.

Using proper organization improves the clarity and effectiveness of a paragraph.

Lesson 33: Essay Writing

Important Exam Points

An essay is a longer piece of writing consisting of several paragraphs.

The principles of unity, coherence, and organization apply to both paragraphs and essays.

The main difference between a paragraph and an essay is length.

The purpose of writing determines the style and organization of an essay.

Informative writing requires clear, logical, and accurate presentation of facts.

Descriptive writing emphasizes images and descriptive details.

Narrative writing arranges events to create interest and action.

The writing process consists of five stages.

The first stage is getting ideas.

The second stage is making a brief outline.

The third stage is writing the first draft.

The fourth stage is revising.

The fifth stage is proofreading.

Three common techniques for generating ideas are brainstorming, clustering, and free writing.

Brainstorming means writing down ideas as they come to mind without arranging them.

Clustering means writing the topic in the center and connecting related ideas around it.

Free writing means writing continuously without worrying about grammar or spelling.

An outline serves as the backbone or skeleton of an essay.

The first draft focuses on developing ideas rather than correcting mistakes.

Revising is the most important stage of the writing process.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

During revision, unnecessary material is removed and ideas are improved.

Proofreading is the final stage of writing.

Proofreading checks for spelling, grammar, punctuation, and other errors.

Good writing requires three skills.

The first skill is communication.

The second skill is organization.

The third skill is appropriate style and tone.

Writing is a form of problem solving.

Every essay has three main parts.

The first part is the Introduction.

The second part is the Main Body.

The third part is the Conclusion.

The introduction contains a general statement and a thesis statement.

The thesis statement performs the same function as the topic sentence of a paragraph.

An introduction can attract readers by using a question, quotation, dialogue, description, controversial statement, historical background, or appeal for action.

The main body develops the main idea through examples, facts, and supporting details.

Each paragraph in the main body develops one subdivision of the topic.

Ideas in the main body may be organized in chronological order or order of importance.

The conclusion summarizes the essay and may include recommendations or opinions.

Good essay writing depends on clear organization, unity, coherence, and effective transitions.

Lesson 34: Essay Writing

Important Exam Points

An essay has three main parts: introduction, main body, and conclusion.

The introductory paragraph is the first paragraph of an essay.

The introduction has four main purposes.

The first purpose is to introduce the topic.

The second purpose is to provide a general background of the topic.

The third purpose is to specify the overall plan of the essay.

The fourth purpose is to arouse the reader's interest.

An introductory paragraph has two parts: general statements and a thesis statement.

General statements introduce the topic in a broad way.

The thesis statement is the most important sentence in the introduction.

The thesis statement is usually written as the last sentence of the introductory paragraph.

A thesis statement states the main topic of the essay.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

A thesis statement lists the major subdivisions of the topic.

A thesis statement may indicate the method of organization of the essay.

Common methods of organization include chronological order and comparison and contrast.

Each subdivision in the thesis statement usually becomes one body paragraph.

A thesis statement should be clear, specific, and focused.

Words such as not only...but also, because, and punctuation marks like the colon (:) can introduce subtopics.

The main body develops each subdivision of the thesis statement in separate paragraphs.

The concluding paragraph is the final paragraph of the essay.

The conclusion tells the reader that the essay has ended.

A concluding paragraph has three main parts.

The first part is a summary of the main points.

The second part is a restatement of the thesis statement in different words.

The third part is the writer's final comment or message.

A conclusion often begins with transition signals such as In conclusion or To sum up.

A strong conclusion leaves a lasting impression on the reader.

Lesson -35: Writing an Outline

Important Exam Points

An outline is an organized arrangement of related ideas.

An outline groups similar ideas together and presents them in a simple way to show relationships among ideas.

Preparing an outline is a process of classifying and organizing information.

An outline helps writers organize their thoughts before writing an essay.

An outline helps readers analyze the organization and relationship of ideas.

An outline is like a skeleton that provides the basic structure of an essay.

The two main purposes of an outline are organizing ideas in writing and analyzing ideas in reading.

A good outline arranges ideas in a logical and meaningful order.

The traffic problem example shows how main causes can be organized into an outline.

The works of Shakespeare can be classified into comedies, tragedies, histories, poems, and sonnets.

A good topic outline contains topics of equal importance and proper classification.

A poor outline is confusing because its main topics are not properly organized.

Topics in an outline are written as words or phrases instead of complete sentences.

Full stops are not used at the end of outline topics.

Topics of the same rank should have the same grammatical form.

Main headings in an outline are written using Roman numbers such as I, II, III.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Sub-headings are written using capital letters such as A, B, C.

Further subdivisions are written using numbers such as 1, 2, 3.

Indentation is used to show the relationship between headings and sub-headings.

Ideas should first be written down, then arranged in logical order while preparing an outline.

Headings and sub-headings should be labeled carefully according to their level.

Headings in an outline should not overlap each other.

An outline should not contain a single heading or sub-heading without another heading of the same level.

Each heading should be expressed in a phrase or word form.

Parallel points in an outline should have parallel wording.

A travel outline includes value of travel, pleasures of travel, methods of travel, desire to travel, and preparations for travel.

A good outline provides a clear beginning and ending but does not label them as introduction and conclusion.

- D) Sub-headings

18. Similar rank topics in an outline should have:

- A) Different grammatical forms
- B) Parallel wording ☐
- C) Different meanings
- D) Long sentences

19. A travel outline includes:

- A) Methods of travel ☐
- B) Only history
- C) Only stories
- D) Only quotations

20. A good outline does not label beginning and ending as:

- A) Main headings
- B) Introduction and Conclusion ☐
- C) Topics
- D) Sub-headings

Writing: Selecting and Researching an Essay Topic

Essay writing is an important part of academic work and is required in different subjects like English, Statistics, Psychology, and Economics.

This lesson includes three main topics: choosing an essay topic, analyzing essay titles, and note-making for essay writing.

A suitable essay topic should be selected carefully because it determines the direction and quality of the essay.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Students should analyze essay topics before writing to understand what is required and avoid irrelevant discussion.

An essay allows students to try out their ideas and develop arguments according to their understanding.

Academic essays require both description and analysis instead of simple explanation.

The four characteristics of academic essays are:

General concepts related to specific examples and vice versa.

Combination of description with analysis.

Use of ideas and information from printed sources.

Consideration of different aspects of a problem.

Students should identify the content, concepts, judgment, and knowledge required by an essay topic.

Essay topics should be limited from broad areas into specific and manageable topics.

Directional words in essay titles guide students about how to write the essay.

Words like explain, review, outline, list, summarize, and state require description.

Words like analyze, compare, contrast, criticize, assess, and discuss require analysis.

Note-making is an active process of selecting, organizing, and understanding information.

Note-taking means recording information word for word, while note-making involves understanding and selecting important ideas.

Notes help students remember information and provide useful material for essay writing.

Note-making helps students summarize ideas, select relevant points, understand sources, and improve their thinking.

The three factors affecting note-making are writer's intention, subject discipline, and purpose of the essay.

Good notes should include author name, title, publisher, year of publication, and page numbers.

Notes should be arranged flexibly so they can be reorganized according to essay requirements.

Students should leave space for comments and additional ideas while making notes.

Abbreviations and symbols make note-making faster and easier.

An outline helps students understand the relationship between main ideas and supporting details.

Well-organized notes improve the quality and effectiveness of essay writing.

Ways of Organizing Texts

Linear Relationships: Line & Process

Writing requires organizing ideas clearly so that readers can easily understand the message.

Effective writing focuses on clarity, accuracy, and proper arrangement of ideas.

An essay has three main parts: introduction, body, and conclusion.

Introduction and conclusion provide direction and finality, but the main ideas and evidence are developed in the body of the essay.

The body of an essay follows a specific organizational pattern.

Once a pattern is selected, the writer should maintain that pattern throughout the essay.

Different organizational patterns can also be combined in one essay.

The three main patterns for organizing the body of an essay are:

Linear relationships.

Spatial relationships.

Comparison and contrast.

Linear relationships explain ideas in a sequence or order.

The four types of linear relationships are:

Chronological sequence.

Process in linear sequence.

Process in cyclic sequence.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Cause and effect relationship.

Chronological organization arranges events according to time order.

Words like first, later, after, before, and in 1947 show chronological sequence.

Chronological writing often uses past tense because it describes past events.

Process organization explains steps or stages involved in completing an activity.

A process must follow a logical order from beginning to end.

Sequencing words help explain processes clearly.

Common sequencing words include first, firstly, initially, next, then, after this, subsequently, finally, and lastly.

A process text can be converted into a flow diagram to show the relationship between steps.

A flow diagram uses arrows to show the direction and order of events.

Problem-solving processes often follow steps such as defining the problem, making an algorithm, creating a flowchart, translating into a program, testing, correcting errors, adding data, and running the program.

Good organization helps readers understand complex information easily.

The order of information affects the interest and effectiveness of a text.

A writer should choose an appropriate organizational pattern according to the purpose of writing.

Linear organization is useful for describing historical events, procedures, and step-by-step activities.

Chronological order is used when events are arranged according to time.

Process order is used when explaining how something is done or how something works.

D) Avoid reading

Important Exam Points: Lesson -38

Ways of Organizing Texts: Linear

(Cyclic Process & Cause–Effect)

A linear process has a clear beginning and end, while a cyclic process continues repeatedly without a fixed beginning or ending.

A cyclic process describes a continuous cycle where one stage leads to another and the process continues.

Natural processes are usually cyclic rather than linear.

A cyclic process is explained like a linear process, but the starting point of the cycle may not always be clear.

Examples of cyclic processes include carbon cycle, water cycle, and life cycles of organisms.

A flow diagram helps in understanding and organizing cyclic processes.

In cyclic writing, the writer should select a suitable point to begin describing the cycle.

A cyclic process should be divided into clear stages for better understanding.

A good description of a cycle requires a title, introduction with thesis statement, and topic sentences for each paragraph.

Relevant information should be included while irrelevant information should be removed.

The carbon cycle explains the continuous movement of carbon between the atmosphere, plants, animals, and soil.

Carbon dioxide is absorbed by plants during photosynthesis.

Plants and animals release carbon dioxide through respiration.

Decay of plants and animals also returns carbon dioxide to the atmosphere.

Burning coal, wood, and oil produces carbon dioxide and adds it to the atmosphere.

The malaria parasite life cycle explains how parasites move between mosquitoes and humans.

The female Anopheles mosquito transfers malaria parasites into human blood.

The parasites develop in the mosquito and later enter a healthy person through mosquito bites.

Only information related to the main topic should be included in a text.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Cause and effect organization explains the relationship between an event and its result.

Cause explains why something happens, while effect explains the result or consequence.

Cause and effect relationships can be written by placing either cause or effect first.

The writer decides whether to focus more on the cause or the effect.

The simplest way to show cause is by using “because + clause”.

Common cause-effect expressions include because of, due to, as a result of, caused by, leads to, results in, and increases.

Cause-effect structures are commonly used to explain scientific, environmental, and social processes.

Environmental examples often show how one action produces several effects.

The destruction of forests due to pollution shows a cause-effect relationship.

Air pollution damages trees, which affects soil, causes erosion, and may result in floods.

Writers use expressions of certainty and doubt to show the strength of their statements.

Strong certainty words include certainly, definitely, clearly, undoubtedly, and must.

Partial certainty words include probably, possibly, may, might, and perhaps.

Impersonal expressions show information without personal commitment.

Examples of impersonal expressions include “It is said that...” and “There is evidence to suggest that...”

Correct use of cause-effect expressions improves clarity and accuracy in writing.

- ✓C) Carbon cycle
- D) A paragraph

5. A flow diagram is useful for showing:

- A) Writer's opinion
- B) Vocabulary meanings
- ✓C) Stages of a process
- D) Essay conclusion

6. In a cyclic process, the writer should:

- A) Avoid stages
- B) Use random order
- ✓C) Choose a suitable starting point
- D) Ignore sequence

7. Carbon dioxide is used by plants during:

- A) Respiration
- B) Digestion
- ✓C) Photosynthesis
- D) Evaporation

8. Carbon dioxide returns to the atmosphere through:

- A) Only rainfall
- B) Only sunlight
- ✓C) Respiration and decay
- D) Soil formation only

9. Malaria is caused by:

- A) Bacteria only
- ✓B) Plasmodia parasites
- C) Viruses
- D) Fungi

10. Malaria parasites are transmitted by:

- A) House flies
- B) Water animals
- ✓C) Female Anopheles mosquito
- D) Birds

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Ways of Organizing Texts (Spatial Relationships & Classification)

This lesson explains two methods of organizing texts: spatial relationships and classification.

Previous lessons discussed four types of linear organization: chronological writing, linear process, cyclic process, and cause-effect relationship.

Spatial relationships describe the location, position, arrangement, and connection of objects or places.

The word spatial means related to space, position, or location.

Spatial description is used when explaining the layout of a place or arrangement of objects.

There are two main ways to organize spatial descriptions:

Bird's eye view.

Pedestrian's view.

Bird's eye view describes a place as if it is being seen from above.

Pedestrian's view describes a place from the viewpoint of a person walking through it.

Location expressions help readers understand the position of places and objects.

Examples of spatial expressions include north, south, east, west, near, beside, inside, outside, and beyond.

A good spatial description should use consistent organization.

Common conventions for describing spatial relationships are:

General to particular.

Whole to part.

Large to small.

Outside to inside.

Top to bottom.

Consistency in organization helps readers understand descriptions easily.

Spatial descriptions of cities and places use reference points to explain locations.

A location can be explained by relating it to another known place or direction.

Classification is another method of organizing texts.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Classification means arranging objects, ideas, or information into groups based on similarities and differences.

Classification helps organize large amounts of information in a logical way.

A good classification system divides information into clear categories.

Classification depends on the purpose of the writer and the relationship between objects or ideas.

Data and ideas can be classified according to different orders.

Common methods of classification include:

Time order: oldest to newest.

General to particular.

Importance: most important to least important.

Size: largest to smallest.

Familiarity: best known to least known.

Classification writing requires logical arrangement of categories and examples.

A classification chart helps organize information into groups and subgroups.

Examples of classification include types of fruits, education systems, and different categories of objects.

The main purpose of spatial organization is to describe location and arrangement.

The main purpose of classification is to organize information into meaningful groups.

Both spatial relationships and classification make writing clearer and easier to understand.

Writing Skills: Paraphrasing

Paraphrasing is the skill of expressing the meaning of a passage in different words without changing its original meaning.

A paraphrase rewrites information using different words while keeping the original idea unchanged.

Paraphrasing is often used instead of direct quotation.

A good paraphrase is usually the same length as the original passage because it includes all important ideas.

Paraphrasing helps students learn how to express the same idea in multiple ways.

The main purpose of paraphrasing is to improve writing skills and understanding of texts.

Important techniques of paraphrasing are:

Use synonyms wherever possible.

Change direct quotations into indirect speech.

Change active sentences into passive sentences and passive into active sentences.

Steps for writing an effective paraphrase:

Read the passage carefully until the meaning is fully understood.

Find meanings and synonyms of difficult words using a dictionary.

Write down the main points of the passage.

Prepare an outline containing the main idea, supporting ideas, and details.

Write the paraphrase in your own words without removing important information.

Review and polish the final paraphrase.

An outline helps organize ideas before writing a paraphrase.

A good outline contains the central idea, major supporting points, and secondary details.

While paraphrasing, the original meaning, important facts, and main ideas must remain unchanged.

A paraphrase should not be a simple word replacement; it requires restructuring sentences and presenting ideas differently.

Paraphrasing is useful for rewriting passages, paragraphs, quotations, and written information.

The writer should understand the original text completely before attempting paraphrasing.

Vocabulary knowledge and understanding of sentence structure improve paraphrasing skills.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

A successful paraphrase shows the writer's understanding of the original passage.

Important Difference

Direct Quotation means using the exact words of the original writer.

Paraphrasing means rewriting the writer's ideas in your own words without changing meaning.

Summary means presenting only the main points of a passage in a shorter form.

Paraphrase usually has almost the same length as the original passage, while summary is shorter.

Writing Skills: Paraphrasing

1. Paraphrasing means:

- A) Copying a passage exactly
- B) Removing all information
- ✓ C) Expressing the same meaning in different words
- D) Translating a passage

2. The main purpose of paraphrasing is to:

- A) Change the meaning
- B) Shorten every passage
- ✓ C) Rewrite information without changing meaning
- D) Add new ideas

3. A paraphrase is usually:

- A) Much shorter than original
- B) Completely different
- ✓ C) As long as the original text
- D) Only one sentence

4. Paraphrasing is often used instead of:

- A) Summary writing
- B) Note-making
- ✓ C) Direct quotation
- D) Classification

5. The first step in paraphrasing is:

- A) Writing immediately
- B) Changing sentences
- ✓ C) Reading and understanding the passage carefully
- D) Removing details

6. Synonyms are used in paraphrasing to:

- A) Change the meaning
- B) Make the passage longer

8. Active sentences in paraphrasing can be changed into:

- A) Questions only
- B) Paragraphs
- ✓C) Passive sentences
- D) Titles

9. Before writing a paraphrase, students should prepare:

- A) A conclusion only
- B) A quotation list
- ✓C) An outline of main points
- D) A bibliography only

10. An outline should contain:

- A) Only examples
- B) Only supporting details
- ✓C) Main idea and supporting points
- D) Unrelated information

11. A good paraphrase should:

- A) Add personal opinions
- B) Remove important ideas
- ✓C) Keep the original meaning
- D) Change the topic

12. Paraphrasing requires:

- A) Memorization only
- B) Copying skills
- ✓C) Understanding and rewriting skills
- D) Translation only

13. Difficult words in a passage should be:

- A) Ignored
- B) Removed
- ✓C) Checked in a dictionary
- D) Replaced randomly

14. The final step of paraphrasing is:

- A) Copying the passage
- B) Making a title
- ✓C) Polishing and reviewing the paraphrase
- D) Deleting details

15. A summary differs from paraphrasing because a summary is:

- A) Longer than original
- B) Exactly copied

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

- ✓C) Shorter and contains main points only
- D) Written in quotations

16. A paraphrase should not:

- A) Use different words
- B) Change sentence structure
- ✓C) Change the original meaning
- D) Include important ideas

17. Paraphrasing improves:

- A) Handwriting only
- B) Memorization only
- ✓C) Writing and expression skills
- D) Speaking speed

18. The main idea of a passage should be included in:

- A) Only examples
- B) Only conclusion
- ✓C) The paraphrase outline
- D) Footnotes

19. Rewriting information in your own words shows:

- A) Copying ability
- B) Lack of understanding
- ✓C) Understanding of the original text
- D) Avoidance of reading

20. The most important rule of paraphrasing is:

- A) Use the same sentences
- B) Remove all details
- ✓C) Change wording while preserving meaning
- D) Add unrelated information

Writing a Summary

A summary is a writing skill in which a large amount of information is compressed into fewer sentences.

A summary presents only the main ideas and important supporting points while removing unnecessary details.

A summary is similar to paraphrasing, but it is usually shorter.

A summary is also called “precis”, a French word meaning summary.

A summary is a brief, clear, connected, and readable statement of the substance of a longer passage.

Summary writing helps students develop clear thinking and clear writing skills.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

A good summary does not include personal opinions or unnecessary explanations.

The main purpose of summary writing is to shorten information without losing the original meaning.

Steps for Writing a Good Summary:

Read the passage carefully to understand the complete meaning.

Read the passage again and identify different points.

Number the important points for better organization.

Remove unnecessary details, examples, repetitions, comparisons, and illustrations.

Arrange the important points in a logical order.

Write the first draft of the summary.

Polish and improve the final draft.

A good summary includes only essential ideas and avoids unnecessary words.

Effective summary writing requires selecting important information and removing extra details.

Wordiness should be avoided in summary writing.

Short and precise expressions make writing clearer and more effective.

Long phrases should be replaced with shorter words whenever possible.

Examples:

“Of a disagreeable nature” can be replaced with “unpleasant”.

“In a brief manner” can be replaced with “briefly”.

“Judged in the light of their results” can be replaced with “judge by their results”.

Repetition weakens writing instead of making it stronger.

Unnecessary repetition should be removed to make summaries concise.

Ideas can be combined by giving importance to major ideas and reducing minor details.

Subordination helps combine several ideas into fewer words.

A good summary keeps the original meaning while reducing length.

The writer should avoid adding new information while summarizing.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

A successful summary contains accuracy, clarity, and conciseness.

Important Difference Between Summary and Paraphrase

Paraphrase rewrites a passage in different words while keeping almost the same length.

Summary reduces a passage by including only main ideas and important points.

Paraphrase includes more details, while summary removes unnecessary details.

Tenses and Passive Sentences

A verb is the most important word in an English sentence because it describes action and gives meaning to the sentence.

Tense is the time feature of a verb that shows when an action occurs.

There are four main forms of verbs: base form, past tense form, present participle, and past participle.

The base form is the dictionary form of a verb and is used in present tense except with third-person singular subjects.

The past tense form of regular verbs is usually made by adding -ed or -d to the basic form.

The present participle is the -ing form of a verb and is used with helping verbs am, is, are, was, and were.

The past participle is used with helping verbs have, has, had and is also used in passive sentences.

There are six basic tenses in English:

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Present Tense

Past Tense

Future Tense

Present Perfect Tense

Past Perfect Tense

Future Perfect Tense

The present tense describes an action happening now or a habitual action.

The historical present tense is used to describe past events in a vivid way, especially in literature and reports.

The past tense describes an action or condition that happened in the past.

The future tense indicates an action that will happen in the future.

Future tense is formed by using will or shall + base form of verb.

The present perfect tense describes an action that started in the past and is completed or continuing in the present.

Present perfect tense is formed by using has/have + past participle.

The past perfect tense describes an action that was completed before another past action.

Past perfect tense is formed by using had + past participle.

The future perfect tense describes an action that will be completed before a specific time in the future.

Future perfect tense is formed by using will/shall have + past participle.

Progressive tenses describe actions that are continuing at a particular time.

Present progressive tense is formed by using am/is/are + verb-ing.

Past progressive tense is formed by using was/were + verb-ing.

Future progressive tense is formed by using will be + verb-ing.

Unnecessary shift in tense occurs when a writer changes tense without any reason.

Active voice focuses attention on the performer of an action.

Passive voice focuses attention on the receiver or object of an action.

Structure of Active Voice:

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Subject + Verb + Object

Structure of Passive Voice:

Subject + Form of BE + Past Participle + Agent

In passive voice, the object of the active sentence becomes the subject.

The tense of a passive sentence is shown by the form of BE.

The subject of an active sentence becomes the agent in passive voice.

The agent in passive voice may be omitted when it is unknown, unimportant, or already understood.

Important Difference Between Active and Passive Voice

Active voice emphasizes the person or thing performing the action.

Passive voice emphasizes the person or thing receiving the action.

Active voice structure is Subject + Verb + Object.

Passive voice structure is Subject + BE + Past Participle + Agent.

Uses of Passive Voice

Passive voice is used to give writing an objective and impersonal tone.

Passive voice is commonly used in scientific writing, business writing, and newspaper reports.

Passive voice is used when the receiver of the action is more important than the performer.

The agent is mentioned in passive sentences when it is important for understanding.

The agent is omitted when the doer is unknown, unimportant, or obvious.

Important Exam Points: Lesson -43

Word Order

Word order refers to the correct arrangement of words in an English sentence.

Correct word order makes sentences clear, meaningful, and grammatically correct.

English follows a fixed word order, especially for verbs, objects, adverbs, place, and time expressions.

The verb and its object usually stay together in a sentence.

Other words should not normally come between the verb and its object.

Example:

- ✓ I like animals very much.
- ✗ I like very much animals.

Place expressions usually come before time expressions.

Example:

- ✓ Huma walks to work every morning.

Adverbs such as always, also, often, usually, probably, never generally come before the main verb.

Example:

- ✓ She always goes to work by bus.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

With the verb be (am, is, are, was, were), these adverbs come after the verb.

Example:

✓ She was also hungry.

When a verb has two or more parts, the adverb comes after the first helping verb.

Example:

✓ He can never remember my name.

In negative sentences, probably comes before the negative word.

Example:

✓ He probably won't come.

Still shows that an action or situation continues.

Still is usually placed before the main verb.

Example:

✓ She is still working.

Yet is mainly used in questions and negative sentences.

Yet usually comes at the end of the sentence.

Example:

✓ Have you finished yet?

Still expresses continuation, while yet shows that something has not happened up to the present.

Anymore and any longer show that a previous situation has changed.

They are placed at the end of the sentence.

Example:

✓ He doesn't work here anymore.

No longer is placed before the main verb.

Example:

✓ He no longer lives here.

Although is followed by a subject and a verb.

Example:

✓ Although it was raining, we went outside.

In spite of and despite are followed by a noun, pronoun, or -ing form.

Example:

✓ In spite of the rain, we played.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Despite does not take of.

Example:

✓ Despite the rain.

Though is often used instead of although, especially in spoken English.

Though can also come at the end of a sentence.

Example:

✓ I like the color though.

Even though gives stronger emphasis than although.

Even is used to show something surprising or unexpected.

Even usually comes before the word it emphasizes.

Example:

✓ Even I could do it.

Not even is used to emphasize a negative statement.

Example:

✓ They did not even say hello.

Even is often used with comparative adjectives.

Example:

✓ Today is even colder.

Even if, even when, and even though are common expressions.

Example:

✓ Even if it rains, we will go.

As can express time.

It shows two actions happening at the same time.

Example:

✓ As I was leaving, he arrived.

Just as means exactly at that moment.

Example:

✓ Just as I sat down, the phone rang.

As can also express reason, meaning because.

Example:

✓ As I was tired, I went to bed.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Do not use as when one action happens after another.

Use when instead.

Example:

✓ When I got home, I took a bath.

Like is used for comparison and is followed by a noun, pronoun, or -ing form.

Example:

✓ She sings like her mother.

As is followed by a subject and a verb.

Example:

✓ Do as I told you.

As is also used to describe someone's job or function.

Example:

✓ He works as a teacher.

Like compares two different things.

Example:

✓ She looks like a princess.

Correct word order improves sentence clarity and fluency.

Important Difference Between "Like" and "As"

Like is used to compare things and is followed by a noun, pronoun, or -ing.

Example:

She sings like her sister.

As is followed by a subject and a verb.

Example:

Do as I told you.

As also means because or refers to someone's role or profession.

Example:

He works as a doctor.

Articles and Their Use

English words are divided into two categories: Major (Content) words and Minor (Function) words.

Major (Content) Words: Nouns, Verbs, Adjectives, Adverbs.

These words carry the main meaning of a sentence.

Minor (Function) Words: Determiners, Pronouns, Prepositions, Conjunctions.

These words connect and support the content words.

Minor words are also called Structure Words because they join the main words together.

Determiners come before nouns and adjectives.

Examples:

- ✓ The cat sat on my bag.
- ✓ I don't want any tea.
- ✓ Have you some yogurt?

There are five main types of determiners.

Articles: a, an, the

Demonstratives: this, that, these, those

Possessives: my, your, his, her, its, our, their

Quantifiers: some, any, all, enough, no, both, each, few, much, more, most, less, either, neither

Wh-determiners: what, which, whose, whatever, whichever

English has two articles:

Definite Article: the Indefinite Articles: a, an

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Sometimes no article (zero article) is used.

Articles modify or identify nouns.

The is used with singular count nouns, plural count nouns, and mass nouns.

Examples:

- ✓ the dog
- ✓ the children
- ✓ the water

A/An is used only with singular count nouns.

Examples:

- ✓ a book
- ✓ an apple

Plural nouns and mass nouns usually take no article for indefinite meaning.

Examples:

- ✓ some books
- ✓ some milk

A is used before words beginning with a consonant sound.

Example:

- ✓ a girl

An is used before words beginning with a vowel sound.

Example:

- ✓ an egg

The is pronounced /ðə/ before consonant sounds.

Example:

- ✓ the girl

The is pronounced /ði:/ before vowel sounds.

Example:

- ✓ the apple

The stressed pronunciation /ði:/ is used for emphasis.

Example:

- ✓ This will be the event of the year.

The definite article "the" refers to something already known to the speaker and listener.

Example:

- ✓ I saw the film.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

The indefinite article introduces something not previously known.

Example:

✓ I saw a film.

There are four main uses of the definite article the.

Referring Back: Used when something has already been mentioned.

Example:

✓ She bought a TV and returned the TV.

Forward-Pointing: Used when the noun is identified by information that follows.

Example:

✓ The book that you gave me is interesting.

Unique Use: Used for things that are one of a kind.

Examples:

✓ the moon

✓ the earth

✓ the South Pole

Institutional Use: Used for things shared by everyone.

Examples:

✓ the radio

✓ the telephone

✓ the newspaper

The is also used with generic meaning to represent a whole class.

Example:

✓ The peacock is a beautiful bird.

Generic meaning can also be expressed by:

✓ A peacock is a beautiful bird.

✓ Peacocks are beautiful birds.

Mass nouns and plural nouns usually do not take "the" when speaking generally.

Examples:

✓ I like milk.

- ✓ the Indus
- ✓ the Atlantic Ocean
- ✓ the Suez Canal

Use the with famous hotels, museums, cinemas, and public buildings.

Examples:

- ✓ the Hilton
- ✓ the British Museum
- ✓ the Sheraton

Correct use of articles makes English more natural, accurate, and grammatically correct.

Important Difference Between "A/An" and "The"

A/An is used for non-specific singular count nouns.

Example:

I saw a bird.

The is used for specific nouns already known or easily identified.

Example:

I saw the bird again.

A comes before a consonant sound.

Language Forms and Functions

Language is used to communicate ideas, opinions, feelings, and information.

Knowing grammar alone is not enough to communicate effectively.

A person is considered competent in a language when they can use it appropriately in different situations.

A language function is the purpose for which language is used.

Language functions explain what we want to do with language.

The primary functions of language are:

Giving information.

Giving commands.

Expressing feelings and emotions.

Maintaining social relationships.

People speak for different purposes.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Examples:

- ✓ Asking for information.
- ✓ Giving instructions.
- ✓ Making promises.
- ✓ Expressing emotions.
- ✓ Influencing others.

Common language functions include:

Requesting Information

Used to ask questions or obtain information.

Examples:

- ✓ Where is the station?
- ✓ Can you help me?

Giving Information

Used to explain, describe, announce, or summarize.

Example:

- ✓ The meeting starts at 10 o'clock.

Establishing Contact

Used to greet, welcome, introduce people, or say goodbye.

Examples:

- ✓ Good morning.
- ✓ Nice to meet you.

Responding to Others

Used to apologize, thank, agree, disagree, deny, or accept.

Examples:

- ✓ Thank you.
- ✓ I'm sorry.
- ✓ I don't agree.

Expressing Emotions

Used to express happiness, fear, surprise, shock, dislike, or sadness.

ENG101 IMPORTANT NOTES + EXAM KEY POINTS + LECTURE WISE MCQS

Important Difference Between "Language Form" and "Language Function"

Language Form refers to how something is said.

It includes grammar, vocabulary, sentence structure, and pronunciation.

Example:

✓ Could you open the door?

Language Function refers to why something is said.

It shows the speaker's purpose.

Example:

✓ Could you open the door? → Function: Request
