About this book

These aspects can be remembered by the mnemonic CAVBOP.

Most examination questions in this area can be answered adequately by running through each of these and devising means of verifying each aspect.

You will also appreciate that the amount of evidence required will depend partly on the risk of misstatement.

f. Terms and conditions, this applies principally to loans. The auditor should determine that all terms and conditions agreed when accepting a loan have been complied with. In recent years many loan deeds have contained undertakings by the company borrowing the money that it will keep a minimum proportion of equity (ordinary share capital and reserves) in its total capital (equity and loans). Breach of this agreement which has occurred frequently in property companies can lead to the appointment of a receiver.

The contents of the letter of representation should not include routine matters, for example, that all fixed assets exist and are the property of the company or that stock is valued at the lower of cost and net realizable value.

The letter should include only matters which:

- a. are material to the financial statements, and
- b. the auditors cannot obtain independent corroborative evidence.

1. Documents. The auditor must examine all relevant documents. These will include invoices, correspondence, debenture deeds etc., according to the type of liability.

2. Security. Some liabilities are secured in various ways, usually by fixed or floating charges. The auditor must enquire into these and ensure that they have been registered. The Companies Act requires, for secured liabilities, that an indication of the general nature of the security be given and also the aggregate amount of debts included under the item covered by the security.

3. Verification. The verification of each liability should be made for example the receipt of loan
