resistance to new employees by the HR department.
orientation programs for new employees.
resentment of new employees by existing employees.

223) The general attitude toward one's job and the difference between the amount of rewards workers receive and the amount they believe they should receive is known as:

turnover.
total quality management.
job satisfaction.
job security.
management by objectives.

224) Individual-level independent variables include:

technology.
organizational culture.
human resource policy.
group behaviour.

vuZs.net

225) The structure of an OB model includes three basic levels of analysis: individual, group, and organization systems. Issues that influence all three levels in various ways and thus affect behavioural dynamics are:

change and stress.
organizational culture and commitment.
power and politics.
work design and technology.
values and attitudes.

226) The group level analysis in an OB model includes all of the following independent variables except:

leadership.
group decision making.
organizational culture.

227) According to the OB model, all of the following are characteristics of human output except:

conflict.
satisfaction.
turnover.
productivity.

228) Some of OB's challenges and opportunities include all of the following except:

reinforcing the importance of traditional methods of management.
offering specific insights to improve interpersonal and people skills.
helping us learn to cope in a continuously changing world.
facilitating the improvement of quality and employee productivity.

staffing
disciplining
socializing
managing conflict

motivating

240) Which of the following statements is false regarding the study conducted by Luthans and his associates?

A successful manager was defined in terms of how quickly he or she moved up within the organization.
The aspect which distinguishes the average manager from the effective manager from the successful manager is the amount of time and effort devoted to the various managerial activities.
Social and political skills are not as important as performance when one examines the speed of managerial promotion within organizations.
All managers, regardless of the organizations within which they work, generally engage in similar managerial activities.
The effectiveness of managers was defined in terms of quantity and quality of their performance and the satisfaction and commitment of their subordinates.

241) All of the following statements are true about learning except:

Learning involves change which can be either positive or negative from an organizational perspective.
The change in behaviour resulting from learning is usually temporary or reflexive in nature.
Changes in behaviour indicate that learning has taken place, and learning is a change in behaviour.
Learning requires some form of experience which can be acquired either directly or indirectly.
Behavioural changes that result from learning must be relatively permanent.

242) Three common theories have been offered to explain the process by which individuals acquire their patterns of behaviour: classical conditioning, operant conditioning and social-learning. Which of the following statements is false when examining these theories?

Any situation in which it is either explicitly stated or implicitly suggested that reinforcements are contingent on some action on your part involves the use of operant conditioning.

As part of classical conditioning, learning a conditioned response involves building up an association between a conditioned and an unconditioned stimulus.
Most behaviour, particularly the complex behaviour of individuals in organizations is emitted rather than elicited; it is voluntary rather than reflexive.
Operant conditioning is passive in nature as it is elicited in response to a specific, identifiable event and as such, can explain simple reflexive behaviours.
Social-learning theory, although an extension of operant conditioning, also acknowledges the existence of observational learning and the importance of perception.

243) The classical conditioning theory of learning grew out of experiments performed by Ivan Pavlov.

the work and research of Henri Fayol. experiments performed by B. F. Skinner. experiments and studies of Robert Katz.
studies conducted by Luthans and associates.

manipulation.
positive reinforcement.
negative reinforcement.
elimination.

247) Suspending an employee who shows up for work drunk is an example of:

extinction.
punishment.
poor management practice.
a conditioned response.

248) Eliminating any reinforcement that is maintaining an unwanted behaviour is called:

negative reinforcement.
positive reinforcement.
classical conditioning.

249) All of the following statements are true regarding both positive and negative reinforcement except:

Both result in learning.
Both strengthen desired response and increase probability of repetition.
Both tend to weaken behaviour and decrease its subsequent frequency.
Both strengthen job performance.
Both affect behaviour and interaction with the boss.

250) In a case where an employee is frequently late for work and every time he/she is not tardy, the manager compliments him/her for being on time, the manager is using:

continuous schedule reinforcement.
negative reinforcement.
intermittent schedule reinforcement.
repetitious schedule reinforcement.
fixed-interval reinforcement.

251) According to research, the _____ form of reinforcement tends to promote more resistance to extinction than does the _____ form.

repetitious; intermittent intermittent; continuous varied; repetitious
continuous; intermittent continuous; varied

252) Examples of how managers can use learning theory include all the following except:

using lotteries which follow a variable-ratio schedule to reduce absenteeism.
disciplining employees for undesirable behaviours.
using various techniques to reinforce management's authority.
developing effective employee training programs.
rewarding attendance and good health through implementation of well-pay programs.

253) Which of the following statements does not describe the effect of discipline on employee behaviour?

It tells employees what not to do.
