What is Theory?

A set of ideas, assumptions or accepted facts that explain rational explanation of cause and effect. It helps us to understand phenomena based on our observation in social and scientific world and provide an answer to the question 'Why'?

It's origin is from Greek word (thoros means spectator). Thoery is not only factually based but instaed based on our cultural background and how we view the world. Theories are mental models how the reality is perceived.

A theory is not necessarily factually based – how we understand and provide explanations arises from our cultural background and how we view the world.

What is Social Scientific Theory?

This theory provide systematic approached to understand the relationship maong individuals and organizations. It explains individual or collective behavior in a social evnironment which is verifiable by observation or experience. These thories are tested against mass media, usage of media nad its influence on shaping public opinion through systematic and objective observation.

What is meant by Diffusion of Innovation?

Innovation is any idea or product which is perceived as new by the individual and Diffusion is a process in which the innovation (idea or product) go through different channels and become accepted in social system over the period of time.

Diffusion on Innovation is a theory which explains how, why and at what rate new ideas and technology spread through cultures in communities.

Rogers proposes that four main elements are important required in order to spread the new idea and they are:

- 1) Innovation
- 2) Communication Chanel
- 3) Time
- 4) Social System

Stages of adoption

Awareness

A person knows about the innovation but does not have complete information about it.

Interest

A person is interested in the new idea and requires more information about it.

Evaluation

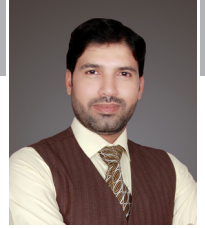

A persons evaluate the new idea as per his present and future situation and decides whether to use it or not.

Trial

The person started to use the innovation.

Adoption

The person decides to continue with the new idea in its full sense and it becomes part of their life.

What is Innovation?

Innovation is a process of implementing new ideas in life or organization. The idea could be totally new or enhancing the old one. It means turning an idea into a solution that will add value to life is called Innovation.

What are the characteristics of innovation?

Observability

In this the user or individual observe the innovation results. Get his opinion about the innovation (idea/product) that it is positive or negative for himself and for the society.

Relative Advantage

The new products or ideas that will likely to succeed in the society that are appealed strongly to the individual. They feel that the product or idea is much better than the current way of working.

Compatibility

How much compatible the product or idea is with the existing way of working means compatible with their life and lifestyle. How much the innovation is consistent with the prevailed social and cultural values.

Complexity

It is very important because the innovation must be easy to understand and use. If people find it difficult to operate or requires special type of skills its usage will be limited and will not be adapted by the whole society.

Trialability

Once the individual done its observation, find out its advantages and see its compatibility and easy to use, he/she decide to have trial of this. It must be free to try on limited time. If there is economic risk involve the consumer will hesitate because he/she will be afraid to get financial or social loss.

Apple iPad is the clear example of the innovation and its adaptation by the society

Explain basic principles (reasons) of social responsibility theory suggested in the Hutchins' Commission report?

The Hutchins' Commission report code of social responsibility for the press requiring five basic services:

- A comprehensive and truthful details of the day's events in such a way that is valueable to them.
- To provide a forum for comments and criticism;
- The right idea of the constituent groups in the society;
- The goals and values of the society;
- Full access to the day's event.
- Media should be self-regulating within the boundaries of law.
- Media must avoid to broadcast that material which lead to crime, violence or offence to minorities.
- Media professionals and Journalists must be held accountable to society.

What is Social Responsibility Theory

Social Responsibility is a terminology used for looking welfare of the people while generating business activity. It is a belief that the press has a responsibility to inform their public on the issues of concern of their society. They have obligation towards society, culture, economy and environment. The freedom of media must not be on the basis of harming society and its socio-cultural aspects and economy.

Social Responsibility theory is a new concept introduced in mid 20th century by Robert Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago. This model was reshaped by Siebert, Peterson and Schramm in 1956. It encourages total media freedom but regulated by social responsibilities and external control. They define Social Responsibility theory as:

“freedom of expression under the social responsibility theory is not an absolute right, as under pure libertarian theory.... One’s right to free expression must be balanced against the private rights of others and against vital social interests.”
Siebert, Peterson, and Schramm

Explain Normative Theory?

Normative means ideal standard or role model of media, based on correct way of doing it. It was first proposed in the book called “Four Theories of the Press” also known as western theories of mass media. Normative theory does not provide any scientific explanation but explain the relationship of media and press with different governments and their relationship with the people. It tells us the ideal way for a media and press to be controlled by the government and public.

The four theories are:

- 1) Authoritarian theory
- 2) Libertarian theory
- 3) Social responsibility theory
- 4) Soviet media (communist) theory

How media works in an Authoritarian System?

Authoritarian Theory is originated from the philosophy of Plato. It is developed in 16th and 17th century in England when printing press was invented. The state or government keep strict control on media and press through censoring, licensing and other laws. It was used to keep public voice shut so they do not criticize the government and its wrong policies.

In Authoritarian System the media is the subordinate to the authorities and work under the control of government and elites. Media is not allowed to criticize the powerful people and it serve the interest of the elite, dominant groups or government. Media can be under the ownership of government or private. The government take plea to implement this system in the name of state security, or avoiding social disorder or cultural conflicts. It is also said that it prevent the media acting irresponsibly.

What is Propaganda and explain Origin of Propaganda?

The term "Propaganda" first used in 16th century to promote Faith and Missionary activities of Catholic church. In its origin it is an honourable word associated with religious activities and got respectful attention

Later on it was used for selfish, dishonest and manipulated views for malicious intentions and used during World War II. It explains how to control the mind of public through manipulated spoken or written words or in pictorial representation in mass media. Propaganda is used to spread information with malicious intentions or gaining support for an opinion or belief. It lacks truth and generally an appeal to emotion, not intellect.

Propaganda can be divided into three types:

Black propaganda - White propaganda - Grey propaganda

Black Propaganda

It is deliberately created and distributed with malicious intentions. It could be true or false but released with bad intent. Its effectiveness is that it looks like to be produced by a legitimate or trustworthy source. Deliberately disseminated rumors or gossips also come under this category. Used in World War II by Nazis.

White Propaganda

Although it does not tell complete truth but most of the information is based on truth and factual elements. Its source is clearly identified. It is disseminated in a way that convinces people that the sender has good reputation. It is also used to distract people's attention from problematic issues. Like testimonials of war prisoners that they are treated well and life is much better there.

Grey Propaganda

It is in between white and black propaganda. The disseminated information might or might not be false. The information passed without checking its authentication because it suits his/her interests. Sometimes its source also not be correctly identified.

What is communication? How you will describe it as a social activity?

Communication is derived from the Latin word 'Communico' which means "To Share". Hence the word "communication" means: the process of sharing. Sharing information – ideas, feelings, thoughts, needs, etc. Sharing takes place from one person to another in a way that it is understandable. Basic element is the message must be understandable. It involves systematic and continuous process of speaking, listening and understanding.

Communication is a social process and learned activity. It connects people together in the society, modifies behavior & brings change. People communicate with each other to exchange information, make decisions, talk about new ideas, plans and proposals etc. This communication takes place with the help of language symbols to convey messages and understand others' point of view. It is a social activity and plays an important role in almost all aspect of life.

Elaborate that Communication is symbolic?

Symbol means to give meaning and it is the study of signs used in communication. Communication is Symbolic means meaningful communication which exists with symbols. Communication takes place through verbal and non-verbal language. Both requires symbols to transmit meaningful message. A study shows a human can remember more things when associated with symbols.

It was developed by Dr. Lasswell in 1948. It is referred as a transmission models of communication. He was concerned with mass communication and propaganda so his model directly guide us to use research and find our answers on control analysis and its effects. It is also known as action model or linear model or one way model of communication.

It has five main components.

- | | |
|----------------------|---|
| 1. Who? | (Communicator, Sender, Source, Transmitter) |
| 2. Says What? | (Message, Information, Content) |
| 3. In which Channel? | (Medium) |

What do you understand by the concept of "Paradigm" explain in your own words?

A paradigm is a set of theories, assumptions, perspectives and ideas of of how things work in the world . It is the framework of knowledge and beliefs that explain the different reasons in development theory. It is used a lot in academic, scientific and business worlds. A new paradigm means a new way to approach things and issues. These theories can be devided on the basis of certain approaches.

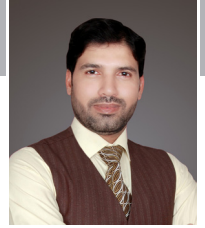

Interepretive theorist think that the reality is not 'out there' but in peoples mind. Describe.

The concept of Interepretive perspective came from German word "Verstehen" which means to "understand in a deep way". The German sociologist Max Weber developed this to study the nature, practices and symbol usage among human. It helps to understand another person's experience by placing yourself in other person's place. The purpose of this perspective is to examin the different view points and find out the meaning behind human actions in social context.

Reality is experienced internally because it is constructed socailly through interaction and the interpretation of meanings people attached to it. Reality is subjective and presented an symbolically. This theory allows you to collect information and draw conclusions based on your observation. It takes you from specific to the general and from concrete to the abstract.

Merton,s argument about social theory. "theories of the middle range"

Middle-range theory was introduced by American sociologist Robert Merton in 1957. He wrote a book named "Social Theory and Social Structure" to bridge the gap between specific hypotheses of empiricist studies (sensory perception) and grand abstract theory (comprehensive explanation of experience or knowledge). It is called middle-range theories because they lie between minor hypotheses and the systematic efforts to develop unified theory which will explain regularities of social behaviour, deviance, occupations and social change. Many concepts developed with this theory have become a part of the sociological dictionary like ritualism, manifest, retreatism, paradigm and reference group.

What is a theory? Discuss the purpose of theory building?

A system of ideas, assumptions or hypothesis that explain something based on general principles. Theory explain a fact or event or human behaviour in particular situation. We make predictions based on that event or behaviour. It enhance our understanding of the social world. The components of theory are "Concept" and "Principles".

The purpose to build theory to 'look behind" phenomena in the social world. It is used to increase the understanding of the issue. Researchers what to find out how things work, why they work and the way or their work. It is developed for the sake of knowledge or to figure out how to dealt with some problems or issues.

Explain the two approaches in Theory Building?

It is developed for the sake of knowledge or to figure out how to dealt with some problems or issues. It is a 'look behind" phenomena in the social world. There are two approaches used in theory building:

Deductive Approach

It starts with a general statement and examin the possibilities to find out specific conclusion based on scientific methods. It is called "Top-Down" approach. We begin with theory and narrow down that theory on the basis of our research.

1. All men are mortal. Ali is a man, hence Ali is mortal.

Here first we say all men are mortal. It means all men are human and going to die. Than we say Ali is a man and Ali is mortal. Based on our research that says all human are living and will die at the end of their life. So Ali will also die after living his life. It is deductive approach which is broader in starts and then narrow down to specific conclusion.

Inductive Approach

It starts with the observation and develop the theory based on research. It is opposite of deductive approach and called "Bottom-Up" approach. We start with specific measures based on observation and try to find similarities. Our research brings general conclusions or theories.

2. The chair in the living room is red. The chair in the dining room is red. The chair in the bedroom is red. All chairs in the house are red.

This example starts with a specific chair lying in the living room in red color. When did research we found that chairs in dining room are red also. More research occurred when we saw the bedroom chair also red. Thus we made conclusion that all chairs in this house are red. We started from a specific chair and conclude a theory for all the chairs in the house.

Explain the concept of social construction of reality in your own words. Marks: 3

Sociologists believe Reality is different for each person because a person develops understanding based on his interaction and experience with other people. Everyone perceives reality differently and acts differently when faced with any situation or sees a different person. Social construction of reality means how we are presenting ourselves to others, how we perceive others and how others perceive us. A person's perception of reality is based on his beliefs and backgrounds. It is also called "Social Concept".

Realities shown on TV programs do not always portray actual scenes of action in the real world. TV programs cultivate viewers' perceptions and beliefs which makes their reality and thinking aligned with the world portrayed on TV, which is different from the real world. These effects developed through media and TV programs are called "Social Construction of Reality". Fear of becoming a crime victim because TV shows street crimes a lot, stereotyping in the projection of professions for men and women etc.

Why Study Mass Communication?

Mass communication informs, educates and entertains millions of people all over the world. It works with different forms of media and examines the processes and impact on local and global culture. It is the major source of getting world knowledge which changes our attitudes and behavior based on our mental reality built by media.

It is also a platform where public life affairs and social issues are discussed. It has effects on our social life which brought changes in cultures and norms of societies. Whatever media shows it becomes reality against the real world. It is the largest entertainment and leisure activity. It has become a vast industry providing employment opportunities, creating political and economic activities.

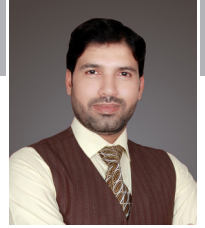

What is Mass Communication?

Mass communication includes messages sent to large, public, dissimilar, anonymous, distant audiences using some intermediate instrument of transfer.

The "mass media," as they are often called, have grown to include the print media of books, newspapers and magazines, the electronic media of television, radio, and audio/video recording, and the new media of computers and computer networks. While these media differ in many ways, they all share the characteristics by which scholars define mass communication. The restricted opportunity for feedback is the most serious barrier to effective mass communication.

Difference between Communication & Mass Communication

1. Technical device is used in Mass communication, whereas, 5 senses of human are generally used in Communication.
2. In Mass communication, the audience is large, scattered & unidentified to the sender, whereas, Audience is identified to the sender in Communication.
3. Mass communication is controlled by many gate keepers (who can change or edit the message), whereas, Communication is mostly face-to-face & gate keeping does not involve in it.
4. Feedback is delayed in Mass communication, whereas, Feedback is quick in communication.

Explain Opinion leaders and Opinion followers?

There are people in the society who use media heavily and get information wisely. They get updates on current issues, have wider knowledge on political, social and economic issues. People seek their advice and act on it. Thus these people become gate-keepers and pass information which would support their views. Lazarsfeld called them "Opinion Leaders".

People who seek Opinion Leaders guidance are called "Opinion Followers". Opinion followers have influenced by Opinion Leaders through interpersonal communication, so they do not pay more attention to what is written in newspapers or magazines or said on Radio or TV shows. They get modified media messages through interpersonal communication under such influence and it is called "Two Step Flow Model of Mass Communication".

How opinion leaders are different from their followers in personal attributes? Marks: 3

Opinion Leaders are different from the followers in many ways:

- They are more outgoing, enjoys being with other people.
- Heavily use media and more socially active
- Share the same social status as shared by their followers.
- Advise wisely and critically on issues.

How the media industry originated? OR Explain Development in the history of mass communication?

Human has started communication since his birth. Many important developments in the history of Mass Communication were mentioned by DeFleur and Ball Rokeach in 1989.

1. Signs and signals were developed first.
2. Speech and language created to talk
3. Writing started to preserve the spoken words and send messages far.
4. Printing started in 15th century with moveable type invention
5. Mass Communication started with the birth of Newspapers, Radio-1920 & TV-1940

Mass media has three types which are Print Media, Electronic Media and New Media

Print media

1. Books
2. Newspapers.

Challenge to Government (established Powers): In the beginning it was to establish power and then to challenge the established power.

Political Press: To promote party agenda, propaganda and gain political mileage.

Prestige Press: To promote and get media coverage for elite and capital class

Electronic media

Rogers and other diffusion researchers have identified five separate innovation-adoption categories into which all people in a society will fall. Discuss any two in details?

Any innovation or idea spreads are spread among groups of people in a predictable pattern. Adoption of innovation requires a decision to be made and action taken on it. People adopting new ideas or innovation in their life can be divided into five categories:

Innovators (2.5%) Early Adopters (13.5%)
Early Majority (34%) Late Majority (34%) Laggards (16%)

Innovators

The first 2.5% of adopters are called "Innovators". Innovators are willing to try new ideas because they have higher social status with financial support in the society. It will make them prominent among peers and raise their social status and prestige. They have close contacts and interaction with other innovators and ability to understand new innovation. They take risk because in case of setback they can bear the financial loss if new ideas prove unsuccessful.

Early Adopters

The next 13.5% of adopters are "Early Adopters". They are educated and have highest degree of opinion, look forward to adopt new technologies that will give them an edge over their competitors. They are not price sensitive because they envision great gains by adopting new technologies and prefer personalized solutions and quick response.

Early Majority

The next 34% of adopters are "Early Majority". They do not want to be the first to adopt new technologies or ideas because they want to see the outcomes. They prefer to wait and find out its advantages and disadvantages before investing in it. They tell the rest of the community that the innovation is useful and desirable. They are motivated by the changes happening and follow the 3 basic principle in adopting new technologies:

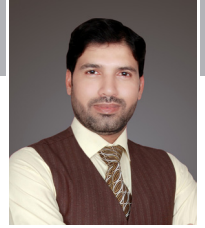

1. When is the right time to move and adopt and all come forward together. This principle explains why adoption taken swiftly and demand increase
2. Selection of a vendor who will lead them to a new paradigm and all of them select the same model. This principle explains which firm or brand will become the market leader.
3. Once it is adopted sooner we get the better one in the market. It shows that the transition stage arise rapidly.

Late majority

The next 34% of adopters are "Late Majority". They are traditional and have lower social status with limited financial resources always look at the price first. They are reluctant to adopt new technologies. Adoption comes in response of increasing social pressure and economic needs. They always rely a single source trusted adviser.

Laggards

The last 16% of the adopters are called «Laggards». They are either traditional or isolated in their social system. If they are traditional they are very suspicious about innovation. If they are isolated they do not have social interaction and lacks awareness about innovation. They have no opinion leadership and have the lowest social status with low income. Their social circle is very limited to the family and close friends.

Priming Effect on one person's behavior. Discuss it with one example.

"You know far less about yourself than you feel you do." — Daniel Kahneman

We think we are in control of ourself and do everything accordingly but you are less in control of your actions than you think. Because you get influence from the environment and circumstances surrounding us even without realizing it. Priming is the exposure of words, visuals or objects that influences the behaviour of a person later on. It is a nonconscious form of human memory concerned with perception. It is a psychology technique, used to train a person's memory in both positive and negative ways.

For instance a person sees a word red will be quick to recognize the word stop on road sign because he associated red with stop in his memory on roads. Similarly if a women see a word red written while shopping, she will be quick to jump to recognize bridal dress because she has associated red color for bridal wearing.

Another example is that if you need to fill the missing letter in "So_p" after seeing bowl with liquid and steam coming out of it, you will fill with "u" because it will associate your memory with "Soup". On the contrary if you see visuals of Towel, shower and shampoo than you fill the missing letter with "a" and make word "Soap". Because the visuals associated in your memory guide to soap for taking bath.

How Totalitarian theory led to the evolution of social responsibility theory? Marks: 5

Totalitarianism is a political system in which the state has unlimited authority to regulate every aspect of public and private life. in 1950 and early 1960 it was the dominant theory in the western world because it used to legitimate certain political aims and met the political needs. We can also say a political system based on dictorial and utopian. Stalin's USSR and Nazi Germany are its examples.

It is a normative theory which explains how the use of media is under the control of dominant political parties to propagate their point of view. It is essential to have direct control over media so turbulent views are not being dissimiated by opposition. It will help them to educate the masses and people act upon certain beliefs and attitudes which lead them to strong centralized political culture. It's opposite theory is Social Responsibility theory which encourage media professionals to preserve democracy in a world by informing people on the issues of their concer. They have obligation towards society, culture, economy and environment.

It is an effort to reach out to the public, listen their problems and find out what they say how to overcome on these problems. The collected information is used to develop new stories based on people centered approach. It is inline with Social Responsibility theory and many newspaper and media houses practicing civic journalism by engaging member of the community. What is meant by System? How it can be applied to a society?

A system is a set of detailed methods and procedures to carry out a specific task or to solve a problem. It is a collection of elements work together for a common purpose. These elements continuously influence each other because they are interconnected directly (mechanically) or indirectly (communication) to achieve their goal. Change in one element will definitely change the result.

The word "System" sometimes describes the plan itself. System can be used to achieve short or long term objectives. Electronics engineers developed systems that can be programmed. Their objective is to monitor the environment and change actions so the desired goals to be achieved. The systems work perfectly if communication is efficient and accurate. In the absence of communication the solution will not be there. Better communication will bring better results with high level of accuracy and effectiveness.

Transactional models are more focused on source rather than message. Explain? (Marks 3).

Communication transactional models are complex because two people communicate with parallel messages through multiple channels. We speak in transactional way and not only exchange messages but also passing values to each other. It is highly dependent on the context rather than message. It is based on the feedback of the receiver. For instance giving smile at the time of introduction gives sense of comfort and vice versa. This model is also called "Interaction Model" because the sender not only see the feedback but also consider the reaction of the receiver.

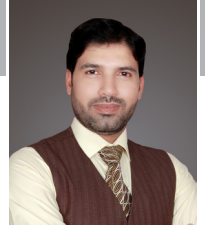

In transactional models medium is also very important. The message will not be perceived properly if the sender is not face to face because absence of his gesture.

What is Limited Effects Paradigm

Mass Media is used to disseminate propaganda and plays an important role in influencing public opinion. However the researchers found that media have a minimal role or limited effect in shaping public perception. It is called Limited Effects Paradigm or Theory. Most people get influenced by interaction and direct propaganda. Whatever people see or hear through media they do not believe fully. This conclusion was mentioned by Lazarsfeld from his research in 1940.

Drawbacks of Limited Effects paradigm?

- It has serious methodological limitations not recognised in research and experiments.
- False assumptions were made about power and utility of this type of research.
- In order to popularize their approach they exaggerated their claims.
- They were slow in acknowledging their theory limitation in 1960.
- Their finding underestimated the influence of mass media on individuals and society.
- They overlooked the evidence which could be used as an argument for remarkable media effects.
- They overlooked the evidence which could be used as an argument for remarkable media effects and had no way to its measurement.

Functional models

Functional models, describe systems in terms of energy, forces and their direction, the relations between parts and the influence of one part on another. Discuss how Structural and Functional models are different from each other?

Structural model

Some models claim only to describe the structure of a phenomenon.

In this sense, a diagram of the components of a radio set or diagram of a digestive system etc, could be described as "structural".

Functional models

Functional models, describe systems in terms of energy, forces and their direction, the relations between parts and the influence of one part on another. The communication models fall into this category, simply all communication is in some degree dynamic and involves some elements of process or change
