

ENG519

Final-Term (✨✨✨✨✨✨)

ABSTRACT

This comprehensive collection of notes is accurately crafted to empower students to excel academically, ensuring they achieve a minimum of 80% marks in their examinations. The content is organized with clarity and precision, focusing on key concepts, critical analyses, and practical applications tailored to the syllabus. These notes serve as a reliable resource for both thorough preparation and last-minute revision. Designed to inspire confidence and mastery, this guide is an essential tool for students striving for academic excellence.

Final-Term (✨✨✨✨✨)

Q. Common teaching methods used in classrooms
Ans: Lecture-based teaching, task-based learning, communicative language teaching, grammar-translation method, and direct method.

Q. Five key points of Cook's materials approach
Ans: Authentic materials, task-based activities, learner autonomy, integrated skills, and meaningful learning.

Q. Two strategies for developing materials
Ans: Adaptation of existing materials and creation of new materials.

Q. Factors to consider in material design
Ans: Aims, objectives, syllabus, unit organization, structure, and sequencing.

Q. Use of materials in learning
Ans: Materials provide teaching plans, not teaching itself. Teachers adapt and transform materials according to learners' needs and teaching styles.

Q. Monitoring use of materials in classrooms
Ans: Student engagement, feedback, classroom observation, and curriculum evaluation.

Q. Stern's four-dimensional model
Ans: Linguistic, sociolinguistic, discourse, and strategic dimensions.

Q. Graves vs Murdoch model (limitation)
Ans: Graves includes assessment and evaluation clearly; Murdoch does not explicitly include principles, monitoring, or evaluation.

Q. Focused opportunistic approach
Ans: Curriculum parts are developed gradually across repeated teaching cycles; efficient but may cause wasted effort.

Q. Two philosophers who opposed focused opportunistic approach
Ans: Tyler (1949) and Wheeler (1967).

Q. Five steps of necessity layer
Ans: Identify constraints, urgent needs, content list, lesson format, material gathering, and assessment.

Q. Forward design
Ans: Starts with syllabus, then methodology, then assessment; linear "waterfall" model.

Q. Examples of forward design
Ans: Grammar syllabus, vocabulary lists, corpus-based syllabus, discourse syllabus, task-based syllabus.

Final-Term (✨✨✨✨✨)

Q. Backward design
Ans: Begins with learning outcomes and works backward to content, activities, and evaluation.

Q. Significance of needs analysis in backward design
Ans: Identifies learner needs, objectives, content, materials, and teaching methods.

Q. Central design
Ans: Focuses on classroom processes and methodology; syllabus evolves during teaching.

Q. Subject-centered curriculum
Ans: Focuses on subject content, standardization, teacher direction, and pre-planned syllabus.

Q. Learner-centered curriculum
Ans: Learners and teachers jointly shape curriculum; focuses on needs, autonomy, and meta-learning.

Q. Content model
Ans: Knowledge-centered model based on classical humanist tradition.

Q. Objectives model
Ans: Behavior-based learning objectives emphasizing measurable outcomes.

Q. Process model
Ans: Focuses on learning process and personal development rather than fixed outcomes.

Q. Situational syllabus types
Ans: Limbo, concrete, and mythical situations.

Q. Skill-based syllabus
Ans: Focuses on language skills like reading, writing, listening, and speaking.

Q. Merits of skill-based syllabus
Ans: Transferable skills, performance focus, practical tasks, and clear objectives.

Q. Drawbacks of content-based syllabus
Ans: Weak grammatical accuracy, heavy teacher preparation, and assessment difficulty.

Q. Negotiated syllabus
Ans: Learners and teachers decide content, activities, and assessment together.

Q. Advantages of negotiated syllabus
Ans: Motivation, ownership, engagement, and better understanding of learning goals.

Q. Disadvantages of negotiated syllabus
Ans: Time-consuming, learner hesitation, teacher workload, and resource demands.

Q. Traditional unit structure
Ans: Presentation, controlled practice, free practice, and synthesis.

Q. Hidden curriculum
Ans: Unintended social values and behaviors learned indirectly in schools.

Q. Characteristics of hidden curriculum
Ans: Unplanned, social learning, norms, attitudes, and behavior shaping.

Q. Role of teacher in hidden curriculum
Ans: Teachers transmit values unconsciously through teaching behavior and practices.

Q. Role of learner in curriculum implementation
Ans: Active participation, discipline, engagement, and interaction with learning experiences.

Q. Diagnostic assessment
Ans: Identifies learners' strengths and weaknesses to guide teaching.

Q. Placement assessment
Ans: Places learners at appropriate course levels before instruction begins.

Q. Progress test purpose
Ans: Motivation, standard setting, and identifying learning gaps.

Q. Validity of test
Ans: A test measures what it claims to measure.

Q. Face validity
Ans: Test appears appropriate to learners and teachers.

Q. Accountability-oriented evaluation
Ans: Evaluates program effectiveness for external decision-makers.

Q. Formative vs summative evaluation
Ans: Formative improves programs during implementation; summative judges final outcomes.

Q. Illuminative evaluation
Ans: Explores how a program works without aiming to change it.

Q. Why curriculum change fails
Ans: Cultural mismatch, resistance, lack of training, and poor implementation.

Q. Stages of change
Ans: Need identification, planning, feasibility, strategy use, and time management.
