Critical Discourse Studies in Applied Contexts

Topic-01: The Applied Principles of CDS

What are some economic shifts discussed in Critical Discourse Studies (CDS)?

Examples: "post-Fordism," "information society," "knowledge economy," "liquid modernity," "neoliberalism," and "network society."

How does Fairclough (1999) describe the communication rise in economic exchange?

Fairclough uses the term "textual mediation" of social reality.

What is the concept of "new textualization of work" according to Iedema and Scheeres (2003)?

Answer: It refers to workers in the modern era speaking and writing in ways not directly associated with their work.

Name some scholars known for tracking language's role in post-industrial commodification.

Examples: Norman Fairclough, Deborah Cameron, Monika Heller.

According to Lin (2014), what are three areas where CDS is deployed in applied linguistics?

Answer: i) Studies of textbooks and school curricula, ii) School leadership and student identities, iii) Public-media discourse.

What is the founding ideal of Critical Discourse Studies (CDS)?

Answer: To improve people's lives and deeply understand social change through critiques.

According to Fairclough and Wodak (2010), what are some core principles of CDS?

Answer: Addressing social problems and socially committed research treating discourse analysis as a mode of social action.

Topic-02: The Limits of CDS and Applied Linguistics

What is a common criticism of CDS regarding power dynamics?

Answer: It tends to locate power in elite domains like medical, legal, media, and corporate settings.

According to Thurlow, what domains of language expertise are often overlooked in CDS?

Answer: Dialect coaches, voice-over artists, speech writers, campaigners, technical writers, copy-editors, PR officers, and advertising copywriters.

What is Cameron's critique of micro-analytic approaches to institutional talk?

Answer: They don't properly account for how workplace discourse is structured by normative systems of regulation and surveillance.

What question arises concerning workers' priorities in working with language?

Answer: What are the concerns of workers when it comes to working with language?

Topic-03: New Directions for Critical Discourse Studies

According to Thurlow (2018), what is needed for institutionalized critique to be effective?

Answer: It needs to invoke discourses recognized within the social practice it critiques.

What is CDS principally committed to, in addition to social critique?

Answer: Exposing gaps in academic orthodoxy and identifying them as ideological/hegemonic.

What area of language use does Cook (2008) suggest for further CDS exploration?

Answer: Advertising.

What does Pennycook (1990) advocate for in critical applied linguistics?

Answer: To be more humble, listen to alternative views, and avoid preaching views as the newest and best.

Topic-04: Conclusions

According to Theo van Leeuwen, what is essential for the effectiveness of work in CDS?

Answer: Work needs to be recognized within the sites of intervention and valued by more than just linguists.

What does Foucault (1977) argue about theoretical work in relation to practice?

Answer: Theoretical work is not separate; it is an activity conducted alongside those struggling for power.

How does Deleuze (1997) characterize the usefulness of a theory?

Answer: A theory must be useful and functional; if not used, it is worthless.

Lecture-20

CDA and History

Topic-01: Introduction

What is the historiographical approach to critical discourse analysis (CDA)?

According to Flowerdew (2012), historiographical CDA seeks to reveal hidden assumptions in historical accounts, emphasizing language's role in their elaboration.

What does Flowerdew emphasize regarding the construction of meanings of the past?

Flowerdew emphasizes that exploring the construction of meanings of the past involves focusing on representations and receptions of discourses.

How does Flowerdew view the past in terms of construction?

Flowerdew argues that the past is not pre-existing; it has to be constructed through semiotic work, requiring social actors' involvement in identity-building processes.

What is the objective of a critical perspective in historiographical CDA?

The objective is to construct a past quotable in all moments, making visible hegemonic and counter-hegemonic narratives that form part of larger power struggles.

In what social practices do discourses about the past occur?

Discourses about the past occur in everyday practices like sharing anecdotes in a family and more institutionalized practices such as the writing of history textbooks.

Topic-02: Memory, history, and historiography

What is the key focus of historiography?

Historiography focuses on the construction of historical discourse, with a key emphasis on representation as an issue in constructing discourse about the past.

How does Mariana Achugar differentiate between memory and history?

Memory is connected with lived experience (testimony), while history is more related to the reformulation of this experience into a scientific discourse.

What is the role of memory in relation to the past?

Memory attempts to be faithful to the past, representing lived time and space, while history aims to be truthful and represents the locus of enunciation of the historian.

How does historiographical research connect history to its place of production?

Historiographical research connects history to its place of production by acknowledging that historical knowledge is constructed through semiotic practices in specific socioeconomic, political, and cultural locations.

What is the significance of varying scales in historiography?

Varying scales in historiography allow exploration of the dialectic nature of historical experience, providing different perspectives on the meaning of the past.

Topic-03: Contested pasts and CDA

What does the construction of contested pasts require?

The construction of contested pasts requires semiotic mediation of experience that not only represents but also orients and organizes meanings.

What is emphasized in CDA regarding contested discourses about the past?

CDA explores how people make history and shape their historical consciousness in contested contexts, identifying lexico-semantic patterns and key linguistic features in history genres.

How does Martin (2008) explore contested discourses about the past in a children's book?

Martin explores how a children's book about the Kokoda campaign constructs reconciliation through multi-modal analysis, examining images and text to depict balance and agency.

What does Flowerdew's work reveal about the construction of discursive formations?

Flowerdew's work shows how discursive formations are constructed through the interplay of discourses about the past from various social actors, exploring intercultural and multilingual communication aspects.

Topic-04: Contributions of CDA to Historiography

What analytic resources have CDA studies developed in historiography?

CDA studies have developed and expanded notions of intertextuality, recontextualization, and resemiotization in historiography.

What is Discourse-Historical Method, and who introduced it?

Discourse-Historical Method, introduced by Wodak (1999), integrates historical context into critical discourse analysis, emphasizing the importance of historicity and using triangulation of different types of data.

How has linguistic anthropology contributed to historiography in CDA?

Work informed by linguistic anthropology has foregrounded the importance of situating discourse in its context of production and reception, addressing historical layering and using concepts such as indexicality and recontextualization.

What is the importance of ethnography in historiographical CDA?

Ethnography is important in historiographical CDA for situating discourse and exploring how it is used across time and space.

Topic-05: Conclusions

According to Achugar, why is historiographical CDA important?

Historiographical CDA is important to understand current historical processes that have produced political turmoil, transnational communities, and migration.

What future developments does Achugar suggest for historiographical CDA?

Future historiographical CDA should develop analytic methods exploring socially distributed discourses about the past, integrate the analysis of processes and social practices, and expand work in intertextual positionings and dialogism.

Critical Discourse Studies and Social Theory

Topic-01: Introduction to CDS & Social Theory-1

What is the success of CDA as a research framework attributed to?

Recognition of the relation between language use and contexts and structures.

According to Wodak, what is CDS primarily interested in?

The workings of and effects on power relations through meaning making.

Why does 'doing' CDS require reflection on linguistic means and social understanding?

To understand the interplay of action, order, and change.

How do social theories contribute to CDS?

By providing a systematic reflection on the workings of the social world.

Name some scholars referenced in CDA studies according to Chouliaraki and Fairclough.

Louis Althusser, Pierre Bourdieu, Judith Butler, Michel Foucault, Anthony Giddens, Antonio Gramsci, Jürgen Habermas, Ernesto Laclau, etc.

Topic-02: Intro to CDS & Social Theory-2

Sir Zahid

What was the initial concern in CL during the 1970s?

To make representations of reality and discrimination in language use visible.

How did the 'original source-centered' approach in CL view social structures?

Operating in a deterministic fashion, with little awareness of reception or agency.

According to Althusser, how does ideology represent the relationship of individuals to their conditions of existence?

"The imaginary relationship of individuals to their real conditions of existence" with a material existence.

Name some recent developments in CDS related to social theories.

Corpus linguistics studies drawing on Foucauldian notions, Deleuze and Guattari, and Queer Theory.

How did Wodak use Goffman's work in CDS?

To analyze interactions of members of the European Parliament.

Topic-03: Marx & (Neo) Marxist

What is the fundamental skepticism shared by many CDA/CDS authors concerning capitalism?

They are skeptical about capitalism as a mode of organizing social relations.

How is Marxism in CDS anti-reductionist?

It recognizes the significance of language and culture in contemporary capitalist societies.

According to Fairclough and Graham, what is the significance of language in late capitalism?

Language has become ever more central.

How does Fairclough and Graham use Marx's view to understand the interplay between the discursive and the extra-discursive?

By outlining Marx's view on ideological relations between language, consciousness, social life, and civil society.

How does Giddens' 'theory of structuration' contribute to some works in CDS?

It helps make sense of the problem of order, where subjects are active players in the reproduction of society.

Topic-04: Post Structural Influences

Who stands out as a major reference among post-structuralist influences in CDS?

Michel Foucault.

According to Foucault, what is the relationship between discourse and power?

Discourse is constitutive for subjects, social relationships, objects, and conceptual frameworks, reflecting the discursive nature of power.

How does Laclau and Mouffe's Discourse Theory contribute to CDS, according to Chouliaraki and Fairclough?

It brings together Marxism and post-structuralist theories of discourse, emphasizing the dialectical relations between semiosis and non-discursive aspects.

What is the notion of 'articulations' in Laclau and Mouffe's theory?

The establishment of relations between radically contingent elements, creating meaningful complexes.

What is the feminist current within CDS often inspired by?

Post-structuralist theories.

Topic-05: Conclusion

Why is a strong link between CDS and social theory considered necessary?

To fulfill the claims of CDS and offer a flexible toolkit for problem-oriented research.

How do Marxist-inspired scholars in CDS aim to contribute?

By making interconnections visible, including hidden resources of meaning creation and their role in human suffering.

How do post-structuralists view openness and difference?

As paramount, emphasizing the importance of the existent links between CDS and social theory.

What challenge do different theoretical approaches in CDS face?

The potential contradiction between theories at various levels.

According to the conclusion, what should each strand of CDS clarify?

Its understanding of the social, as agreement on basic concepts is unlikely within the diverse research program.

Lecture-22

CDA and Political Discourse (I)

Topic-01: What is Political Language?

What view does the tradition of western political thought hold about the link between language and politics?

Answer: The tradition holds that language and politics are intimately linked at a fundamental level.

According to Aristotle, what unique capacity defines humans as political animals?

Answer: Aristotle believes that the unique human capacity for speech defines humans as political animals.

How does Aristotle differentiate between 'voice' and 'speech' in animals?

Answer: Aristotle states that 'voice' is possessed by all animals and communicates pleasure and pain, while 'speech' in humans indicates what is useful, harmful, just, and unjust.

Topic-02: Political Discourse Analysis

What is the focus of political discourse analysis?

Answer: Political discourse analysis focuses on discourse in political forums, such as debates and speeches, as the phenomenon of interest.

Provide an example of political discourse analysis.

Answer: An example is Roffee's analysis of the legislative processes in the Australian federal government's intervention in Northern Territory Aboriginal communities.

What is one core goal of political discourse analysis?

Answer: One core goal is to explore how language choice is manipulated for specific political effects.

Topic-03: Approaches of Political Discourse

How is political discourse defined in terms of language use?

Answer: Political discourse is the use of language recognized as 'political' by humans, involving aspects of language structure and lexicon associated with political behavior.

What is the role of indexicality in political discourse?

Answer: Indexicality in political discourse involves language choices signaling political distinctions, such as choosing words associated with specific ideologies.

How does interaction function in negotiating representations in political discourse?

Answer: Verbal interaction in political discourse helps negotiate shared representations and world conceptions among individuals in a polity.

Topic-04: Political theory and the nature of politics

How does David Held define political theory?

Answer: David Held defines political theory as a network of concepts and generalizations about political life, involving ideas about government, state, society, and human political capabilities.

What is the inherent nature of political discourse in relation to decision making?

Answer: Political discourse is inherently deliberative, involving the weighing of reasons for or against proposals, even in instances of bad or undemocratic deliberation.

According to Birch (1993), what claim is usually made regarding minority rights in relation to language and culture?

Answer: The claim is usually for special protection of language and culture, asserting the right to speak the language of the social group with which individuals primarily identify.

Lecture-23

CDA and Political Discourse (II)

Topic-01: Analysis of Text and Political Genres

What do linguistic choices in political discourse reflect, according to Chouliaraki and Fairclough?

Linguistic choices in political discourse reflect not only how a text is constructed but also the major social functions of language.

How are genres defined in the context of political discourse?

Genres are global linguistic patterns developed in a linguistic community for specific communicative tasks in specific situations, broadly determined by discourse communities.

According to Fairclough, what does each social domain have associated with it?

Each social domain has an associated "order of discourse" or a structured collection of discursive practices connected with particular social domains.

What does CDA focus on regarding political genres, as mentioned by Chilton and Schaffner?

CDA focuses on the role that certain genres play in the exercise of power and influence in defining politics and political institutions.

Provide an example of intertextual relations between different political genres.

An example is the recontextualization of Barack Obama's "Yes, we can" speech into a song during the 2008 presidential election campaigns.

Topic-02: Analysis of Political Identity

According to Charaudeau, what is often more efficient than a long manifesto in getting a politician elected?

The identity or image of a politician is often more efficient than a long manifesto in getting them elected.

What pragmatic distinction does the Part discuss regarding Labour in new Labour discourse?

The Part discusses the pragmatic distinction between Labour as a role and Labour as a value in new Labour discourse.

What are the two distinct counterstrategies identified in new Labour discourse?

The two distinct counterstrategies are Appropriation and Reciprocation.

How does the analysis of party names differ between Labour and the Conservative Party?

Labour is a noun, while the Conservative Party's name is an adjective used as a noun (the Conservatives).

According to Anholt and Hildreth, what is a brand in the context of political discourse?

A brand is the good name of something on offer to the public, representing a valuable asset in politics.

Topic-03: Analysis of Ideological Beliefs

According to Chilton, what is one of the obvious functions of discourse?

Representation is one of the obvious functions of discourse, presenting a given view of reality through language.

What is important to explain representation, as argued by Hart?

Perspective and its ideological implications are vital for understanding how political discourse works and how discourse is cognitively processed.

How many levels of context have been identified that influence discourse processing?

Four levels of context have been identified: co-textual, intertextual, context of situation, and broader socio-political context.

What does lexical representation form the basis of, according to van Dijk?

Lexical representation forms the basis of mental models, which are essential for cohesion, coherence, and creating a common underlying metaphorical schema.

According to van Dijk, what do political discourses emphasize or de-emphasize?

Political discourses emphasize or de-emphasize political attitudes and opinions, garner support, manipulate public opinion, manufacture political consent, or legitimate political power.

Topic-04: Analysis of Political Stance

According to Du Bois, what is a "stance" in communication?

A "stance" is a social act done through communication when we evaluate or align ourselves with objects or others.

What are the two most significant elements of stance, according to the discussion?

The two most significant elements of stance are evaluation and modality.

How is epistemic modality related to discourse, according to Chilton?

Epistemic modality reflects the speaker's commitment to the truth of a proposition, influencing how beliefs and ideologies are spread discursively.

What is the interpersonal metafunction's role in PD, according to Fairclough and Fairclough?

The interpersonal metafunction becomes a status function that carries "deontic powers," regulating what others do in political discourse.

What has often been neglected in CDA approaches to political discourse, according to the discussion?

The audience's reaction, as an effect of political discourse, has often been neglected in CDA approaches.

Lecture-24

Theory of Stance-taking

Topic-01: Introduction to Stance Taking

What are the components of Stance?

The components of stance include:

Stance-taker

Stance-object (topic under discussion)

Resources (evaluative lexis, modal verbs, punctuation, typography, different languages)

Addressee/s

Stance resources (e.g., posting on social media, editing, filters)

Stance objects (views on images, talk about self/others, events related to photo content, attitudes towards languages)

What does framing a theory of stance involve?

Framing a theory of stance involves providing a general account of the mode of production and interpretation of any stance in a context of interaction.

Topic-02: Kinds of Stance

According to Georgalou (2016), what are the components of epistemic knowledge and beliefs?

Epistemic knowledge and beliefs include certainty, doubt, actuality, precision, limitation. They are expressed through adverbs, adjectives, modals, and complement clauses.

According to Du Bois (2007), what are the two kinds of stance?

According to Du Bois (2007), the two kinds of stance are:

Evaluation

Alignment

Topic-03: Contextualizing the Stance

What is necessary for a successful interpretation of stance?

For a successful interpretation of stance, it is necessary to know:

Who is the stance-taker?

What is the object of stance?

What stance is the stance-taker responding to?

Topic-04: Subjectivity & Positioning

How do subjectivity and positioning relate?

Subjectivity and positioning go hand in hand. Positioning invokes a dimension of the speaker's subjectivity.

Provide an example of subjectivity and positioning in a stance utterance.

Example:

Speaker: JAMIE

Stance Subject: I

Positions/Evaluates: like

Stance Object: this song

Topic-05: Alignment

How is alignment achieved in interaction?

Alignment is achieved when interactants are cooperative in the project of creating an interaction. It involves maintaining engagement in moving the conversation forward.

Give an example of alignment in storytelling.

In storytelling, alignment can be seen when the hearer displays support of and endorses the teller's conveyed stance toward the events being described.

Topic-06: The Stance Triangle

What are the key components of the stance triangle?

The key components of the stance triangle are:

Evaluation

Positioning

Alignment

How is stance defined in the context of the stance triangle?

Stance is defined as a public act by a social actor, achieved dialogically through overt communicative means, simultaneously evaluating objects, positioning subjects (self and others), and aligning with other subjects, with respect to any salient dimension of the sociocultural field.

Lecture-25

Neoliberalism, Globalization and CDA

Topic-01: Introduction

What is Neoliberalism?

Neoliberalism deals specifically with economic ideas about free markets.

What are the characteristics of Neoliberalism?

Free market trade, deregulation of financial markets, privatization, individualization, and a shift away from state welfare provision.

When did the neoliberal era begin?

In the 1970s, and it continues to the present.

What were the origins of Neoliberalism?

It was originally referred to as "globalization" and began with "Free Trade deals" in the 80s and 90s.

How did Neoliberalism face resistance in the 90s?

Through the "anti-globalization" protests.

What are the key components of Neoliberalism, related to business and industry?

Privatization (selling off state assets) and deregulation (removing regulatory frameworks).

What is the central idea behind Neoliberalism regarding the state's involvement in business?

The state should not be involved; assets, resources, and industries are better run by private interests.

What is the impact of privatization in Neoliberalism?

It may result in an economy controlled by private owners and introduces efficiencies in business operations.

How does Neoliberalism view regulations?

Neoliberal policies seek to remove any regulatory framework from the operation of the economy.

What is the essence of a free market in Neoliberalism?

A market unhindered by regulations, operated by private entities, where goods and capital flow freely.

How does Neoliberalism emphasize society and the individual?

It is antithetical to the protection of group interests and emphasizes the individual, stating, "There is no such thing as society, only individuals."

Topic-02: The development of neoliberal discourses

What characterized the 25-year period following World War II?

The emergence of the social welfare state and the development of neoliberalism as a combination of free-market utopianism and a critique of the Keynesian order.

When did neoliberalism face a defining "crisis moment"?

In the early 1970s with the OPEC oil crisis and major recessions in Western countries.

According to Hayek, what is the role of the free market in social management?

The free market is the only capable and competent instrument for social management.

How do Brenner, Peck, and Theodore view the concept of neoliberalism?

As a terminological focal point for debates on regulatory transformations and as an expression of deep disagreements and confusions.

What term is suggested as more apt to encompass the dynamic processes of neoliberalism?

Neoliberalization, seen as a hegemonic restructuring ethos rather than a fully coherent system.

Topic-03: CDA neoliberalism and globalization

According to Holborow, how has neoliberalism invaded discourse?

Neoliberalism, as a social system and ideology, is said to have invaded discourse.

How does Fairclough connect globalization with language?

Globalization inherently has a language dimension, involving dialectical relations between diverse social elements or moments.

What are the five approaches outlined by Jessop in examining neoliberalism?

The examination of ideology emergence, viewing neoliberalism as a political project, interpreting it through an economic framework, analyzing it as a capitalist offensive against organized labor, and situating it in its material practices and policies.

How does neoliberal governmentality connect to everyday economics, according to Foucault?

Neoliberal governmentality aims at disciplining individuals to become entrepreneurs of themselves, releasing the state from social support obligations.

Topic-04: Economic Representations and CDA

What central issue arises concerning economic representations?

The issue of whose representations and voices count and are heard.

According to Ruccio, how are "everyday" economic theories viewed by academic economists?

Academic economists often consider such formulations to be irrational elocutions lacking structure and consistency.

What is the significance of exploring discursive structures in economic representations?

To understand how public understandings of the economy are enacted and disseminated across various forms of media.

Topic-05: Conclusions

What is a defining feature of neoliberalism regarding agency?

The displacement of agency from government institutions to individuals, making individuals solely responsible for their own fortunes in society.

How does neoliberalism view government intervention?

Neoliberal governance changes the sites of government intervention and assistance but does not abandon intervention altogether.

What metaphor is integral to neoliberal discourses?

The market, seen as the core component enabling liberty and freedom of choice.

What critical perspective do Boltanski and Chiapello offer regarding neoliberalism?

Neoliberalism can be seen as the result of elites integrating critiques of capitalism into capitalism itself as sources of renewal.
