The subjective questions are as follows:

1. what was the criticism done on egalitarianism.

Though equality is an attractive social ideal for many, egalitarianism has been strongly criticized. Some critics claim that need, ability, and effort are all relevant differences among people, and that it would be unjust to ignore these differences.

2. countries are classified as free, un-free, repressed; what are the factors that affect these classifications.

Presently, countries are classified as free, mostly free, mostly unfree, and repressed. Determining factors include: trade policy, the fiscal burden of the government, the extent and nature of government intervention in the economy, monetary policy, capital flows and investment, banking and financial activities, wage and price levels, property rights, other government regulation, and informal market activities. Over time, more and more countries have moved toward greater economic freedom.

3. discuss free market economy and list some elements.

A market ECONOMY based on supply and demand with little or no government control.

Private property and voluntary exchange system

4. 2 conditions of perfect competition are not present in monopolistic competition; briefly discuss those conditions

In a monopoly, two of the seven conditions are absent: there is only one seller, and other sellers cannot enter the market. . No competitor could enter the market because their start up costs would have been too great, and they lacked Alcoa's experience.

other monopolies like Western Electric, Standard Oil, and the American Tobacco Company were thus able to fix output at a quantity less than equilibrium, making demand so high that they reaped excess profits.

5. discuss capitalist theory of justice.

According to his theory, the distribution of benefits and burdens in a society is just if: 1. Each person has an equal right to the most extensive basic liberties compatible with equal liberties for all (the principle of equal liberty);

Social and economic inequalities are arranged so that they are both: a) To the greatest benefit of the least advantaged (the difference principle), and b) Attached to offices and positions open fairly and equally to all (the principle of equal opportunity)

1. What traits are the valuable parts of person's morally good behavior? (3)

Prescriptivity, universalizability, overridingness, practicability, publicity

2. Describe Social Darwinism? (3)

This term is invented in the late 19th century to describe the idea that humans compete in a struggle for existence like animals and plants in which natural selection results in "survival of the fittest." SOCIAL DARWINISTS held that the life of humans in society was a struggle for existence ruled by "survival of the fittest," a phrase proposed by the British philosopher and scientist Herbert Spencer.

3. Rawl's theory of justice ideas 5

Rawls theory of justice revolves around the adaptation of two fundamental principles of justice which would, in turn, guarantee a just and morally acceptable society. The first principle guarantees the right of each person to have the most extensive basic liberty compatible with the liberty of others.

Principle 1 is called the principle of equal liberty.

Principle 2 is called the principle of fair equality of opportunity.

3. what is command economy? explain its advantages. (5)

A command economy, or a planned economy, is where the big decisions are made at the centre by the government. In an economic system the main decisions are, for example, allocating resources like labour, capital and oil. Prices, too, are controlled.

1. it enables the government to overcome market failure,
2. tackle inequality and
3. create a society that maximises social welfare rather than maximises profit.
4. Command economies can prevent abuse of monopoly power.

5. describe justice in distribution view " from according to his ability, to according to his need" ? (5)

the idea that people realize their human potential by exercising their abilities in productive work. Because the realization of one's full potentiality is a value, work that a person can be as productive as possible. and this implies distributing work according to ability. Second, the benefits produced through work should be used to promote human happiness and well being.

Q1. conditions of perfect competition are not present in monopolistic competition; briefly discuss those conditions?

In a monopoly, two of the seven conditions are absent: there is only one seller, and other sellers cannot enter the market. other monopolies like Western Electric, Standard Oil, and the American Tobacco Company were thus able to fix output at a quantity less than equilibrium, making demand so high that they reaped excess profits.

Q2.Socialist view on distribution is best described as:From each according to his ability, to each according to his needs.Define?

Repeated

Q3.scenario given?

Q4.Copmarative advantage thoery?

The theory of comparative advantage states that if countries specialise in producing goods where they have a lower opportunity cost – then there will be an increase in economic welfare. Note this is different to absolute advantage which looks at the monetary cost of producing a good.

resently, countries are classified as free, mostly free, mostly un-free, and repressed. List the determining factors of this classification?

repeat

Perfectly competitive market is characterized by seven conditions. In a monopoly, two of these conditions are not present. Briefly describe those conditions?

repeat

“Socialists address this concern by stating that the benefits of a society should be distributed according to need, and that people should contribute according to their abilities.” Criticize.

A major problem with this proposal is that it ignores people’s needs. Handicapped, ill, untrained, and immature persons may be unable to produce anything worthwhile; if people are rewarded on the basis of their productivity, the needs of these disadvantaged groups will not be met. The main problem with this proposal is that it is difficult to place any objective measure on the value of a person’s product, especially in fields such as the sciences, the arts, entertainment, athletics, education, theology, and healthcare.

Enumerate the difference between free market economy and planned economy. Identify one country for each where these approaches have been used?

Economic freedom is characterized by the absence of government coercion or constraint on the production distribution, and/or consumption of goods and services beyond the extent necessary for citizens to protect and maintain liberty itself. Thus, people are free to work, produce, consume, and invest in the ways they choose

A command economy, or a planned economy, is where the big decisions are made at the centre by the government. In an economic system the main decisions are, for example, allocating resources like labour, capital and oil. Prices, too, are controlled.

1. it enables the government to overcome market failure,
2. tackle inequality and
3. create a society that maximises social welfare rather than maximises profit.
4. Command economies can prevent abuse of monopoly power.

The principle of increasing marginal utility costs states that after a certain point, each additional item the seller produces costs him more to produce than earlier items. Why? Explain with an example.

When a buyer purchases a good, each additional item of a certain type is less satisfying than the earlier ones. Therefore, the more goods a consumer purchases, the less he will be willing to pay for them. The more one buys, the less one is willing to pay. On the supply side, the more units of a good, a producer makes, the higher the average costs of making each unit. This is because a producer will use the most productive resources to make his first few goods. After this point, the producer must turn to less productive resources, which means that his costs will rise. Since sellers and buyers meet in the same market, their respective supply and demand curves will meet and cross at the equilibrium point.

MGT610(8-june-2014) Mine Paper !!!

Q1- Difference Ethic of care and ethic of communitarian ???

the ethics of care is a normative ethical theory: a theory about what makes actions morally right or wrong.

communication ethics deals with the moral good present in any form of human communication.

Q2-In monopoly two of seven condition are absent discuss them briefly???

Repeat

Q3-The principle of increasing marginal utility costs states that after a certain point, each additional item the seller produces costs him more to produce than earlier items ,Discuss Briefly human beings occupy a special place in creation, and morality can be summed up in an imperative, or ultimate commandment of reason, from which all duties and obligations derive. He defined an imperative as any proposition declaring a certain action (or inaction) to be necessary.

Repeat

Q4-Discuss Versions of Kant's categorical imperative????

Formula of universality (perfect duty and imperfect duty)

Formula of humanity

Formula of autonomy

Q5-Discuss First Principle of Rawls theory of Justice

each person has an equal right to the most extensive basic liberties compatible with equal liberties for all (the principle of equal liberty) it says that each citizen's liberties must be protected from invasion by others and must be equal to those of others. These basic liberties include the right to vote, freedom of speech and conscience and the other civil liberties, freedom to hold personal property, and freedom from arbitrary arrest.

MGT610 Mine Paper !!!

1. Something about cost-benefits analysis? 3 marks

Cost-benefit analysis is a systematic approach to estimating the strengths and weaknesses of alternatives. it is used to determine options that provide the best approach to achieve benefits ...

2. In monopoly two of seven condition are absent discuss them briefly ? 3marks

3. repeat

4. Do you agree that in a free competitive market, organizations ignored the care ethics? if yes then why? 5 marks

Because free markets are not perfectly competitive, they do not achieve the moral values.

5. John Locke argues that if the earth was given by God to all human beings in common even that private property can be justified. What is the argument that John Locke offers to support this claim? 5 marks

Locke argued that if there were no governments, human beings would find themselves in a state of nature. In this state of nature, each man would be the political equal of all others and would be perfectly free of any constraints other than the law of nature—that is, the moral principles that God gave to humanity and that each man can discover by the use of his own God-given reason.

6. LAW OF NATURE (Locke's views) 5 marks

the law of nature teaches us that we have a natural right to liberty. But because the state of nature is so dangerous, says Locke, individuals organize themselves into a political body to protect their lives and property. The power of government is limited, however, extending only far enough to protect these very basic rights.
