What are the assumptions of discourse analysis?

- a. Language is ambiguous - What things mean is never absolutely clear. All communication involves interpreting what other people mean.
- b. Language is always 'in the world' - what language means is always a matter of where and when it is used and what it is used to do.
- c. The way we use language is inseparable from who we are and the different social groups to which we belong. We use language to display different kinds of social identities.

Language is never used all by itself. It is always combined with other things such as our tone of voice, facial expressions and gestures when we speak, and the fonts, layout and graphics we use in written texts was first introduced by Zellig Harris (1952) to examine: the language beyond the level of the sentence, relation between linguistic and non-linguistic behaviour. It looks at patterns of language across texts as well as the social and cultural contexts the texts occur. Ranges from textually-oriented views of discourse to socially-oriented views of discourse. Knowledge about language, beyond the word, clause, phrase and sentence, needed for successful communication. The relationship between language and context. Pragmatic view of language at the core of discourse analysis. The discourse structure of texts. Cultural ways of speaking and writing e.g. cultural ways of buying and selling.

Discourse Analysis

Norman Fairclough

ZB

He began work on CDA in the early 1980s (see 'Critical and descriptive goals in discourse analysis', 1985) with the aim of linking his academic work to his political activities. He focused on discourse as an element in the production, maintenance and transformation of the existing socio-economic order and in political struggles for a better order. Discourse in Late Modernity 1999, and various more focused studies reflected in the revised and extended second edition of Critical Discourse Analysis (2010) as well as New Labour, New Language (2000) and Language and Globalization (2006). He focuses on the trans-disciplinary nature of CDA research. He has drawn upon the 'cultural political economy' of Jessop and Sum, but this work has centered upon a collaboration with Isabela Fairclough to bring argumentation theory and analysis into CDA (Political Discourse Analysis, Routledge 2012), a development which Isabela advocated in earlier publications.

Interdisciplinary Approach CCDA

as an interdisciplinary approach, will house under one umbrella concepts such as 'cultural memory,' 'cultural narratives,' cultural representations' and 'cultural discourse analysis' (Carbaugh 2007), as well as 'the cultural turn' (Fairclough 2003), 'textual culture' (Benwell 2005), 'cultural scripts' (Wierzbicka 1998), and many others.

Corpus Linguistics

It is the study of the text/context interface in order to compare the use of language in a specific corpus of text and a reference corpus, to show how language-use in a specific context varies from general context. Corpus Linguistics allows CDS to work with much larger data volumes, thus reducing researcher bias (Hardt-Mautner 1995). CDA and genreAllows CDS to qualitatively and quantitatively examine a given language feature's collocational environments, semantic patterns and discourse functions (Hardt-Mautner 1995). Corpus Linguistics has been criticized for decontextualizing data and for limiting the analysis to a bottom-up type of investigation (Widdowson, 2004).

Multi-Modal Discourse Analysis (MMDA)

This type of analysis involves all semiotic systems, not just language use. MMDA is influenced by the work of Halliday (1978) and was pioneered by Kress and van Leeuwen (1996) (both followers of Halliday and CDS practitioners). MMDA focusses “specifically on how different semiotic resources are deployed in the re-contextualization of social practices for ideological purposes”. An interesting example of critical MMDA is study on televised and online news - construe discourse, context and culture.

Direct Speech Acts

The intended meanings may be quite different from the literal meaning.e.g. ‘bring a plate’ ‘Can I take your order now please?’ ‘can I have a cheese burger?’ ‘I’ll have two pieces of chicken and a coke’

Indirect Speech Acts

May be difficult for second language learners e.g. ‘This room is a real mess’ ‘would you mind helping me move this table’

Why CCP is important?

In a world that is getting smaller when people from different societies and cultures interact with greater and greater frequency, a “harmonious” cross-cultural interaction is essential. Power relation in this global interaction.

Three types of proof:

- Logos - proof by the arguments presented in the speech.
- Ethos - proof through the credibility of the character of the speaker
- Pathos - proof by the emotional disposition of the audience.

CDS being deployed in applied linguistics:

- i) studies of textbooks and school curricula,
- ii) school leadership and student identities
- iii) public-media discourse.

CCP in Education

Mismatch of interactional norms between home and school in order to empower children to succeed. Possibility of language to have sexual/biased connotation in different cultures. Differences in terms of group power. In the sociolinguistic approach to pragmatics, "culture" is not Culture with a capital C, that is literature, music and art of one speech community or grouping of people. Rather it is culture as a reflection of the values and beliefs about the world, held by the members of a community which form, in effect the substratum of their everyday life.

"corpus",

derived from the Latin word meaning "body", may be used to refer to any text in written or spoken form. In modern Linguistics, this term is used to refer to large collections of texts which represent a sample of a particular variety or use of language(s) that are presented in machine readable form. Corpus Linguistics is a relatively new field- a result of the wider availability and use of personal computers in the last quarter of the twentieth century. Corpora thus comprise numerous text files which require the conversion of traditionally published works from paper into electronic form, while spoken language must be recorded and then transcribed. Corpus linguistics is the study of language based on large collections of "real life" language use stored in corpora (or corpuses) - computerized databases created for linguistic research. Corpus linguistics is viewed by some linguists as a research tool or methodology, and by others as a discipline or theory in its own right. Kuebler and Zinsmeister conclude that it can be both depending on how corpus linguistics is applied (Corpus Linguistics and Linguistically Annotated Corpora, 2015).

DHA is three dimensional

- (1) Specific contents or topics of a specific discourse are identified;
- (2) discursive strategies are investigated;
- (3) linguistic means are examined as types, and the specific, context-dependent

What are three important aspects of genres?

- ♣ Conventions and Constraints
- ♣ Genres are communicative events
- ♣ Creativity

What are the aims of CDA?

To help reveal hidden and 'often out of sight' values, positions and perspectives underlying texts (Paltridge, 2008). To unmask the strategies of discriminatory inclusion and exclusion in language in use (Wodak, 1992). The use of discourse in relation to social and cultural issues such as race, gender, politics, identity, ideology, etc.

What are the assumptions of CDA?

Language use is always social. Discourse both reflects and constructs the social world. Discourses 'are always socially, politically, racially and economically loaded'

Name any three scholars of CDA

- Norman Fairclough
- Ruth Wodak
- Teun A. Van Dijk

Name the approaches of CDA

- Socio-cultural approach
- Socio-cognitive approach
- Discourse-historical Approach

Name the discursive strategies in DHA?

Mitigation and Intensification

Difference between stance and engagement

Stance is the ways in which writers present themselves and convey their judgements, opinions and commitments to their own and other people's work. In doing this, a writer may either 'intrude to stamp their personal authority onto their arguments, or step back and disguise their involvement'.

Engagement is the strategy writers use to acknowledge and recognize the presence of their readers, 'pulling them along with their argument, focusing their attention, acknowledging their uncertainties, including them as discourse participants and guiding them to interpretations

What is multi-modality?

Multimodality refers to the use of multiple modes or forms of communication or representation to convey information. These modes can include visual, auditory, kinesthetic, gestural, linguistic, and spatial elements, among others. In various fields like education, technology, and communication, multimodality acknowledges that individuals perceive and understand information differently. For example, a presentation might include visuals (like slides), spoken words, gestures, and interactive elements to cater to different learning styles and enhance comprehension for a broader audience

What are the three considerations that must attend to in deciding a sampling policy?

- The orientation to the language or variety to be sampled.
- The criteria on which we will choose samples.
- The nature and dimensions of the samples

What does a context may include?

- Physical context, the social context and the mental worlds and roles of the people involved in the interaction. Social, political and cultural understanding that are relevant to the particular communication. Background knowledge context: cultural and interpersonal knowledge

- Linguistic context (Co-text). The co-text of a word is the set of other words used in the same phrase or sentence.

Why CCP is important?

SFL tools include

- Statistical comparison techniques
- Comparisons of lexical density and frequency
- Rhetorical Structure Theory
- Corpus linguistics

What is Macro versus Micro?

Fairclough mentions macro domain of discourse, i.e. political talk, government policies while, keeps discourse at place work in micro-domain. He has used a term “technologization of discourse” as top-down intervention to change discursive within orders of discourse, i.e. from politics (macro) to ‘work place (micro). Fairclough has argued that the link between sociocultural practice and the other two dimensions involves the integration of 'macro' and 'micro' analysis of discursive events, where the former includes analysis of discourse technologization processes (Fairclough, 1995).

On one side, no instance of discursive practice can be interpreted without reference to its context; On the other hand, 'macro' phenomena such as technologization of discourse cannot be properly analyzed without the evidence of their actual effects on practice, which comes from analysis of discursive events. Specifically, he considers the role of discourse in a range of major contemporary

Passing Criteria for a Course:

The passing criteria is defined in such a way that it ensures the student shall be consistent in his studies throughout the semester.

Therefore, for passing a course/subject, student shall fulfill the following:

- a) Secure minimum 20% score in Formative Assessments/Mid terms
- b) Secure minimum 20% score in Final Term Examinations.
- c) Secure at least 40% marks in aggregate while fulfilling the above requirements

Course Selection and Credit Hours

Q: How do I select courses when the course selection is open?

A: Follow these steps:

1. Check the credit hours allowed by your university (e.g., 21, 18, or 15 credit hours).
2. Each subject typically has 3 credit hours.
3. Divide the total allowed credit hours by 3 to determine how many subjects you can select.

Examples:

21 credit hours = 7 subjects

18 credit hours = 6 subjects

15 credit hours = 5 subjects

Remember, the university may allow different credit hours for each student, so check your specific allowance.
