Lesson 23: SOCIAL ACTION-I (Topic 73-76)

Topic 73: Social Action

- Overview: Various issues such as conflict, violence, prejudice, discrimination, poverty, and hunger are considered social problems. These are caused by human actions and can only be solved by human actions.

One School of Thought

- Mary Richmond's Perspective: She considered social action as one of the four processes in social work.
- Tradition Influence: Rooted in liberalistic, rationalistic, and democratic traditions.
- Historical Context: Early efforts in the USA focused on transforming charity services from improvement to curative and preventive, promoting the settlement movement.

Second School of Thought

- Distinguishing Factor: Not seen as a method of social work; instead, it's an organized effort to change social and economic values and institutions.
- Relation to Social Reform: More aligned with social reform than traditional social work, aiding planned social change, particularly in community development.

Summary of Both School of Thought

In one school of thought, Mary Richmond, a prominent figure in social work, regarded social action as a pivotal process within the broader field of social work. This perspective was deeply influenced by liberalistic, rationalistic, and democratic traditions. In the historical context, early efforts in the United States were centered on a fundamental shift in charity services – moving from a focus on improvement to adopting curative and preventive approaches, notably through the promotion of the settlement movement.

Contrastingly, the second school of thought diverges from viewing social action as a method within social work. Instead, it perceives social action as an organized effort aimed at transforming social and economic values and institutions. This perspective aligns more with the goals of social reform rather than adhering to traditional social work methods, emphasizing its role in facilitating planned social change, particularly within the realm of community development.

Topic 74: Definition of Social Action

- Definition: Social Action involves individual, group, or community efforts aiming to bring changes in social legislation and welfare activities (Walter Friedlander).
- Examples: Movements like the Civil Rights Movement in the USA, Aligarh University (1875), Feminist Movement (1960s-70s), SEWA (India), National Movement of Street Children (1985, Brazil), Shaukat Khanam Memorial Cancer Hospital (1994), Women Protection Bill (2006, Pakistan), Lawyer's Movement (2007-2009, Pakistan), and Protection of Women against Sexual Harassment at Workplace Act (2010, Pakistan).

Topic 75: Characteristics of Social Action

- Aim: Achieve social progress through desirable social change.
- Focus Areas: Tailoring social policies, improving legislations, and enhancing the health of welfare services.
- Preventive Aspect: Aims to prevent social maladjustment, illness, and disorganization resulting from social change.
- Change Advocacy: Aims for positive change in current social practices.
- Acceptance: Involves a goal accepted as desirable and worthwhile by social actionists.
- Influence Tactics: Utilizes education, publicity, persuasion, or pressure to influence public opinion.

Topic 76: Elements of Social Action

- Activeness of Group or Community: Success requires an active, conscious, planned, and organized group or community.
- Democratic Working: Mode and methods based on democratic ideals, aligning with the democratic values of social work theory and practice.
- Democratic Leadership: Leadership should be democratic, emerging through common consent rather than being imposed.
- Resource Arrangement: Proper attention to material and non-material resources is crucial for success.
- Coordination with Problem and Resources: Problems should be chosen after evaluating available resources; social workers should study relevant literature.
- Cooperation: Success depends on the cooperation of community members; social workers inspire and guide community participation.

ConceptsBuilder

- Public Opinion: Success or failure hinges on public opinion; media and public meetings are utilized to shape healthy public opinion.

Lesson 24: SOCIAL ACTION-II (Topic 77-81)

Topic 77: Process of Social Action

- Process Overview: Combines a model for guiding a Social Action group with the facilitator's role. Service users are not just consumers; they actively drive change.

Topic 78-79: Steps of Social Action I&II

Steps of Social Action

1. Recognition of problem: Identify existing problems, recognized by individuals, groups, or communities.
2. Collection of facts: Gather facts using scientific research methods, connecting causes and effects.
3. Educate and Empower people: Consult and discuss with affected people, empowering them to understand and participate in the social action process.
4. Conviction that situation is remediable: People must believe in the capacity to remedy the situation for effective rebellion.
5. Consultation with people: Develop an action plan through consultation and open discussion with those concerned.
6. Consultation with Stakeholder: Involve local authorities and government for maximum support.
7. Administrative measure: Implement efficient administrative measures, assign specific duties, and report progress.
8. Mobilization of resources: Mobilize men, money, and material for a successful action plan.

Topic 80-81: Principles of Social Action I&II

1. Striving toward Social Justice: Commit to challenging inequality and oppression in various forms, advocating for fairness and equality.
2. Seeing potentials in others: Believe people have skills and understanding to tackle their problems. Encourage using existing insights for change.
3. Recognizing the rights of people: Acknowledge everyone's rights to be heard, define their issues, and take action on their behalf.

ConceptsBuilder

4. Bringing out the reality: Understand that injustice is rooted in social policy, environment, and economy. Help individuals see problems in a wider context.
5. Realizing the importance of collective effort: Motivate collective work as a powerful solution. Bring people together to share experiences and resources.
6. Being a facilitator not leader: Enable people to make decisions for themselves. Work alongside the group without becoming a member or leader.

Lesson 25: SOCIAL ACTION-III (Topic 82-84)

Topic 82: Types of Social Action

Max Weber introduced four ideal types of social actions:

1. Rational-purposeful Action: Goal-oriented actions with rationally chosen means for achieving valued goals (e.g., a student aiming to top the class).
2. Value-rational Action: Actions rational in relation to specific values, committed to subjective goals with effective means (e.g., a soldier sacrificing for honor and patriotism).
3. Affective Action: Emotion-driven actions expressing personal feelings (e.g., a football team member getting angry during a game).
4. Traditional Actions: Actions rooted in tradition, carried out in specific ways for particular situations.

Topic 83-84: Instruments of Social Action I&II

Instruments of Social Action

1. Volunteerism: Involves voluntary labor in community services, performed willingly without coercion.
2. Mobilization: Strategy for involving communities in defining and transforming social problems, including participatory approaches (PRA and PLA).
3. Advocacy: Stands alongside individuals in need, speaking on their behalf for their best interest, even if differing from personal beliefs.
4. Lobbying: Educating and persuading key audiences through direct contact, formal or informal.
5. Propaganda: Purposeful persuasion influencing emotions, attitudes, and actions for ideological, political, or commercial purposes via mass and direct media.
6. Bargaining: Negotiation, often required by social workers to advocate for disadvantaged groups with higher authorities.
7. Blogging: Utilized by organizations for mobilization, connecting with the public, and receiving feedback in an accessible way.

ConceptsBuilder

8. Signature Campaign: Collecting mass signatures to build pressure on authorities in support of a cause.

Lesson 26: FIELDS OF SOCIAL WORK-I: MEDICAL SOCIAL WORK-1 (Topic 85-88)

Topic 85: Definition and Concept

Medical Social Work (MSW) or Hospital Social Work is a process that aids in the diagnosis and treatment of patients by studying their social situation, understanding the patient, and their environment. It is supported by organized sources to enhance the effectiveness of medical treatment. This method centers on a one-to-one relationship, serving as a primary technique to support the social functioning of individuals. Hospital social work's primary function involves educating doctors and nurses about the social and psychological aspects of disease, acting as a bridge between the hospital and the patient's social environment and community resources.

Topic 86: Medical Social Work's Target Group / Clientele

Medical Social Work serves patients and their families in public hospitals/clinics requiring assistance in coping with emotional and social problems arising from illness, trauma, or disability. It also caters to patients needing psychiatric emergency outreach services or being reached by medical teams in the community. Additionally, it provides training, talks, and programs for medical and allied health professionals, as well as the public. The clientele includes chronically ill individuals, the physically disabled, cases of medical termination, and those in need of material help or institutionalization.

Topic 87: Objectives of Medical Social Work

1. Assist patients and their families with social and emotional problems arising from illness, trauma, or disabilities.
2. Enable patients to make the best use of medical/rehabilitative services in medical institutions and the community.

ConceptsBuilder

3. Contribute to the total rehabilitation of individuals and their integration into society.
4. Strive for the promotion of health for patients, their families, and the community.

Topic 88: Nature of Service of Medical Social Work

1. Provide counseling services, either through casework or group work, for patients and families dealing with emotional or social problems arising from illness, trauma, or disabilities.
2. Conduct psycho-social assessments, formulate welfare plans, and make referrals for rehabilitation and community resources for patients and families.
3. Offer financial assistance/material assistance, such as waiving medical charges, application for charitable/trust funds, and referral for social security benefits.
4. Collaborate with other medical and allied health professionals in community teams to reach individuals in need of treatment or rehabilitation.
5. Conduct talks and training sessions for medical students, student nurses, social work students, and para-medical staff on the social and psychological implications of illness and disabilities.
6. Provide educational talks and programs to patients, their families, and the public on health and welfare-related issues.

Topic 89-90: Roles of Medical Social Worker I&II

Medical Social Workers have diverse roles, including:

1. Working as a team member in a multidisciplinary team, coordinating with doctors, nursing, and paramedical staff.
2. Explaining medical problems to patients and families in understandable language, aiding emotional adjustment.
3. Assessing the social conditions of patients and providing counseling.
4. Assisting patients in financial management, tapping resources for treatment, and suggesting ways to reduce economic burdens.
5. Arranging financial support from governmental and non-governmental organizations.

ConceptsBuilder

6. Advising patients on available disability benefits and helping them access these benefits.
7. Assisting individuals with disabilities in adjusting to their environment, removing architectural barriers, and encouraging independence.
8. Participating in discharge planning, making protocols, and involving patients and family members in social work.

Topic 91: Medical Social Worker in UK and USA

MSW in Britain

- Originally known as hospital almoners or "lady almoners."
- Mary Stewart became the first lady almoner in Britain in 1895.
- Anne Cummins established a comprehensive social work service at St. Thomas's Hospital in 1909.
- The Institute of Almoners was formed in 1945 and renamed the Institute of Medical Social Workers in 1964.
- Transferred to local authority Social Services Departments in 1974.

MSW in United States

- Cannon trained MSWs in 1912 with duties like case management, data collection, follow-ups, care coordination, health education, and financial assessment.
- Funding for needy patients obtained from Zakat Department, Bait-ul-Maal Department, and NGO donations.

Topic 92: Medical Social Services Projects in Lahore City

18 Medical Social Services Projects (MSSPs) in Lahore City include:

- Nawaz Sharif Hospital
- Mayo Hospital
- King Edward Medical University
- Fatima Memorial Hospital
- Services Hospital
- Punjab Institute of Cardiology
- Children Hospital

ContentsBuilder

- Anmol Hospital
- Shaukat Khanum Hospital
- Sir Ganga Ram Hospital.

Lesson 28: FIELDS OF SOCIAL WORK-III (Topic 93-95)

Topic 93: School Social Worker

School social workers play a crucial role in promoting a conducive learning environment. They help students and families overcome social, behavioral, emotional, or economic barriers to learning. Key functions include assessing problems, making appropriate referrals for services, working closely with teachers and administrators, and providing crisis intervention. School social work focuses on improving outcomes for children, addressing issues such as poor attendance, behavioral problems, grief, loss, and financial struggles within families.

Topic 94: Clinical Social Worker

Clinical social workers provide a comprehensive range of mental health services, utilizing various psychotherapeutic theories and tools for assessment, diagnosis, and treatment. They offer support to individuals, couples, families, and groups, assisting them in adjusting to major life changes. Clinical social workers interface with healthcare insurers, authorize care, and ensure clients receive necessary services. They contribute significantly to mental health and well-being.

Topic 95: Family Welfare

Social workers in family welfare provide material assistance and counseling services related to marriage, health, economic problems, and sibling upbringing. They focus on improving and supporting the family unit, mobilizing resources, assessing existing policies, and supervising staff. Programs and activities include parent effectiveness, marriage strengthening, community support programs, family values preservation, and involvement in livelihood and family planning initiatives.

Lesson 29: FIELDS OF SOCIAL WORK-IV (Topic 96-99)

Topic 96: Correctional Services

Correctional services encompass settings like jails, probation homes, and juvenile shelters, where individuals with unusual behavior are placed for correction. Social workers play a vital role in the administration of correctional processes, involving recreational activities, counseling, vocational training, aftercare, and rehabilitation services for offenders. There is significant scope for social work intervention in this field.

ConceptsBuilder

Topic 97: Forensic Social Work

Forensic social workers play a crucial role in risk assessments, expert testimony, and mental health care for both victims and offenders. They use evidence-based practices in child maltreatment and domestic violence cases, provide assessments and treatment for juvenile and adult offenders, and engage in trauma survivor assistance. Forensic social workers are change agents, advocates, and administrators dealing with complex issues in the criminal justice system.

Topic 98: Occupational Social Work

Occupational social work focuses on the welfare of employees, providing employment benefits, and assisting with problems affecting job performance. Social workers may counsel individuals, lead groups, and run workshops. They address issues like substance abuse, domestic violence, and vocational rehabilitation. Occupational social workers contribute to improving organizational efficiency, creativity, productivity, and morale.

Topic 99: Special Groups

Social workers address the needs of special groups, including drug dependents, socially disadvantaged women, released prisoners, former psychiatric patients, older persons, and persons with disabilities. They work in various fields of practice such as community mental health, consulting, criminal justice, crisis intervention, developmental disabilities, disaster relief, domestic violence, family planning, genetics, and gerontology services.

Lesson 30: THEORIES OF SOCIAL WORK-I (Topic 100-102)

Topic 100: Theories of Social Work and Psychodynamic Theory

Understanding various theories is crucial for social workers to comprehend and address clients' behavior. Psychodynamic theory, rooted in Freudian concepts, emphasizes the importance of the unconscious mind in shaping behavior. Freud identified the conscious, preconscious, and unconscious mind components.

Topic 101: Psychodynamic Theory & Three Components of Personality

Psychodynamic theory delves into the id, ego, and super-ego as components of personality. The id operates on the pleasure principle, the ego on the reality principle, and the super-ego on moral principles. These components interact, influencing an individual's thoughts, feelings, and behaviors.

Topic 102: Jung's Levels of Psyche and Classification of Personality

Carl Jung's analytical psychology introduced levels of the psyche, distinguishing between the conscious and unconscious. He classified personality into introvert and extrovert types, each further divided based on thinking, feeling, sensation, and intuition. Understanding these classifications aids social workers in assessing and addressing clients' needs.

Lesson 31: THEORIES OF SOCIAL WORK-II (Topic 103-104)

Topic 103: Adler's Personality Theory

Alfred Adler's individual psychology focuses on unique styles of life, striving for superiority, parental influence, and birth order. Styles of life illustrate how individuals handle challenges. Striving for superiority, rooted in overcoming inferiority, motivates human behavior. Parental influence and birth order impact personality development, providing insights for social workers.

Topic 104: Object Relation Theory and Other Theories

Object relation theory explores how early relationships shape personality. Other theories like Kohut's self-psychology and crisis theory contribute to psychodynamic perspectives. Social workers utilize these theories to assess clients' past experiences, address current issues, and guide interventions.

Lesson 32: THEORIES OF SOCIAL WORK-III (Topic 105-107)

Topic 105: Social Systems Theory

ConceptsBuilder

Social systems theory views human behavior as influenced by interactions within linked social systems. It emphasizes the interconnectedness of factors like family, friends, and the environment. Social workers analyze these systems to understand and strengthen them, recognizing mutual interactions and feedback mechanisms.

Topic 106: Systemic Thinking and Social System

Systemic thinking involves recognizing patterns and unity in social entities. Social systems, whether individuals, families, or societies, are holons, both parts and wholes. The holistic viewpoint sees society determining individuals, while the atomistic viewpoint views individuals shaping society.

Topic 107: Energy/Information, Causation, and Chaos Theory

Social systems are composed of energy/information transfers within and between entities. The holistic and atomistic viewpoints coexist, influencing social work paradigms. Causation is better understood through complex interactions rather than linear cause-effect relationships. Chaos theory explores order vs. disorder in systems, emphasizing the importance of energy exchange and feedback loops.

Lesson 33: Theories of Social Work - IV

Systems Theory

1. Holistic Client Assessment
    - Examines client's environment comprehensively.
2. Assessment and Intervention
    - Considers psychological, biological, and social aspects.
    - Analyzes interactions in the client's environment.
3. Conceptualizing Relationships
    - Links entities like individuals, families, agencies, etc.
4. Systematic Involvement
    - Determines which system requires intervention.
5. Focus of Intervention
    - May target family, community, or political systems.

6. Common Interventions
    - Couple and family therapy, community development.

Social Learning Theory

- Developed by Albert Bandura.
- Extends B.F. Skinner's behavioral theories.
- Emphasizes observation-based learning.
- Behavior reinforcement influences repetition.
- Applicable to correcting destructive behavior.
- Focus on learned behavior, past history, and consequences.
- Foundation for cognitive/behavioral interventions.

Transpersonal Theory

- Human development study.
- Aims for stronger ego identities.
- Blends spiritual and psychological elements.
- Uses positive figures as aspirational examples.
- Known as Humanistic Theory.
- Emphasizes freedom, meaning, empathy, warmth.

Conflict Theory

- Explores sources of conflict in economic, political, and cultural arenas.
- Highlights power relationships, privilege, oppression.
- Basis for empowerment theories.

Rational Choice Theory

- Human behavior driven by self-interest and rational choices.
- Views human interaction as an exchange of resources.
- Emphasizes role of rewards, costs in behavior.

Social Constructionist Theory

1. Focus on shared meanings.
2. People shape understandings through interactions.
3. Development of self in relation to "generalized other."
4. Compatible with solution-focused, narrative therapy.

ConceptsBuilder

5. Tool for deconstructing perceptions and meaning.

Psychosocial Theory

- Erik Erikson's 1959 theory.
- Explores social environment's impact on individuals.
- Maturation timetable based on social crises.
- Guides social work practices and services.

Lesson 34: Social Legislation

Definition of Social Legislation

- Special laws for socio-economic improvement.
- Targets groups like women, children, elderly, etc.
- Addresses issues like immoral trafficking, juvenile lawbreaking.

Social Legislation - An Instrument for Social Change

- Legislation controls and guides behavior.
- A powerful tool for social workers.
- Must be supplemented by public opinion and administrative reforms.

Lesson 35: Social Legislation: The Protection Against Harassment of Women Acts - I
