Phonological:

- ❖ Dropping of the final consonant: tes instead of test
- ❖ Use of th → d or th → f substitution: dis instead of this, bafroom instead of bathroom

Grammatical:

- ❖ Omission of the verb to be: He happy (instead of He is happy)
- ❖ Habitual be: She be working late (indicating a habitual action)

ENG506_World Englishes

Final-Term (Solved)

Controversy:

In 1996, the Oakland School Board recognized AAVE as a distinct linguistic system and suggested it be used in education to help students transition to Standard English. This sparked debates on whether AAVE should be considered a legitimate linguistic variety or just "improper English".

Q. What are the benefits of codification in language?

Codification is the process of standardizing a language by establishing official rules for spelling, grammar, vocabulary, and pronunciation. It is a crucial step in language planning and policy.

Benefits of codification:

- ❖ Ensures consistency: Helps unify the language and provides a standard form for education, media, and official communication.
- ❖ Preserves linguistic identity: Maintains the linguistic and cultural heritage of a language, preventing excessive borrowing and language shift.
- ❖ Facilitates learning: A standardized language is easier to teach and learn. It also improves literacy rates.
- ❖ Enhances intelligibility: Speakers from different regions can communicate more easily when a common standard exists.
- ❖ Supports language development: Helps create dictionaries, grammar books, and other linguistic resources.

Q. What is spelling standardization?

Spelling standardization refers to the process of establishing a fixed set of spelling rules for a language. This eliminates inconsistencies and variations in spelling that may arise due to dialectal differences or historical changes.

Examples:

English spelling was standardized largely through the influence of Samuel Johnson's Dictionary (1755) and Noah Webster's Dictionary (1828).

Differences between British and American spelling emerged during standardization:

- ❖ British: colour, centre, realise
- ❖ American: color, center, realize

Importance of spelling standardization:

- ❖ Ensures clarity in communication.
- ❖ Reduces confusion caused by multiple spellings of the same word.
- ❖ Helps maintain consistency in education and publishing.
